

Liability issue stalls regulation of local pool use

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

The question of liability has proven the sticking point for two Board of Health members as the committee continues to discuss the possible regulation of swimming pool use in Winchester.

Board of Health Chairman Dorothea Sopper told fellow members she would not be in favor of making pool safety suggestions, distributed to pool owners by the Board of Health this spring, into mandated regulations.

Sopper cited Town Counsel Wade Welch's opinion on the issue, which questioned the potential liability to the town and/or individual members of the Board of Health, in the event a tragedy occurred and the town had not properly enforced the regulations.

Sopper said she would like to continue the board's efforts to distribute safety information to pool owners and to heighten the public's awareness regarding accidental drowning, but suggested the board leave the liability with the individual homeowner.

Board of Health member Dr. Warren Taylor agreed, saying he was convinced the constitutionality of the regulations had been resolved in a rewrite of the document, but that the liability question still stood. Taylor and Sopper agreed the regulations would be difficult to properly enforce with the limited personnel in the Health Department.

"The proposal of the draft is sound," said Taylor. "and I am not insensitive to the reason or reasons that have made you [Board of Health member Dr. Randall Swartz] go forward with this. That is said in kindness and I hope it is taken as such."

Swartz however, whose six-year-old daughter Patricia drowned last June in a swimming pool accident, has struggled to put the regulations on the books for months now, and continues to be unrelenting in this pursuit.

"If people choose to have a pool, they should choose to have a pool safely and be required to do so," said Swartz. "I suspect with the regulations we will be moving into new and appropriate territory."

Swartz says he has addressed each of Town Counsel's concerns in a revision of the regulations. The language in the preamble for example, has been broadened to state the regulations are in place to protect the general public and not just children. Swartz cited several legal opinions as well, which he says contradict the concerns of Winchester's counsel.

Swartz added that Town Counsel had in effect given the Board of Health "a road map" to follow to check the language of the regulations and avoid possible liability.

"On the day that I withdraw from what I deem [positive] regulations because I'm afraid I'll be personally sued, I will resign," said Swartz.

Swartz added that he believed the town was insured for such liability cases and that a cap is in place to prevent such suits from escalating over $150,000 in awards.

Swartz asked the other members to "weigh [the liability] against the potential of saving lives."

Swartz added that he encouraged "full input from the public" but said he was not surprised the approxi-

Coop bank named one of state's safest institutions

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

As banks are fighting to stay afloat across the state, the Winchester Cooperative Bank is holding its head above water.

The Winchester Cooperative Bank was one of nine mutually-owned thrift banks in Massachusetts cited as having the "strongest" capital to average assets in the state by Banker and Tradesman, a weekly real estate, banking and commercial publication.

Along with eight other banks, the Winchester Cooperative was tagged as "thrifty over 8.0 percent equity capital to average assets, under 1.0 percent sub-quality loans to assets ratio, and income over 0.8 percent of average assets." According to the Banker and Tradesman figures, sub-equity loans include those over 90 days past due, those on nonaccrual, those restructured with modified terms and other real estate owned.

The June 13 article, entitled "Old-Fashioned' Mutuals Shine As Stock Conversion Stars Stumble," focused on the conversion by many banks to stock. According to the article, "During the '80s, the pressure on Massachusetts' thrifts to convert to stock was enormous. Conversion seemed to be the quickest way to

When Winchester Police Lieutenant James Pierce headed south to the 161st session of the Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) National Academy, little did he expect he would come home with police connections across the country and around the world.

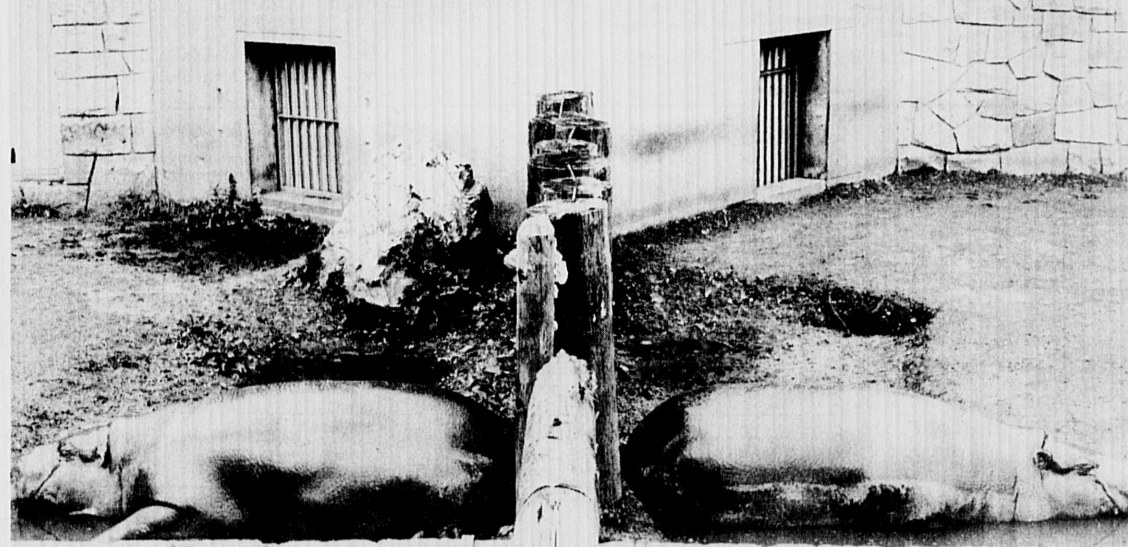

Pierce, Winchester's lieutenant in charge of detectives, prosecution and juveniles, was one of 228 police officers representing 48 states and 25 countries to graduate from the FBI Academy in June. The program, held in Quantico, Va., has been in existence since 1935. A total of 23,174 graduates represent the Academy around the world.

The program includes 11 weeks of modern police investigative and management skills training. Academy staff consists of experienced agents holding advanced degrees, and the majority of instructors are recognized internationally for their expertise.

According to Pierce, he first applied to attend the academy a

Stone Zoo survives another round

Representative Paul Casey (D-Winchester) says his fight to keep the Stone Zoo open has felt like an all-out boxing match. And although the zoo has taken some punches, it's still standing, adds Casey.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee last week included the Walter D. Stone Zoo in Stoneham and Boston's Franklin Park Zoo in its fiscal year 1991 (FY91) budget with an appropriation of $3.4 million.

The House however, had provided funding in the amount of $1.6 million for Franklin Park Zoo, but had rejected the measure to fund the Stone Zoo at a level of $1.6 million for FY91. Casey had also submitted the figure within the supplemental FY90 budget and the initiative was again rejected.

But if funding for both zoos remains in the approved Senate budget, the debate will move to a conference committee, where three members of the Senate and House will come to a consensus on the issue.

Casey says with help from Senator Salvatore Albano (D-Somerville) the funding "has a pretty good chance" of appearing in the finalized Senate package.

Marlborough man found dead in pool

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

Winchester police are awaiting the results of an autopsy that will determine the cause of death of a 52-year-old Marlborough man.

George McAlee, who was housesitting at 98 Pond St., was found by police June 27 floating face down in the deep end of the in-ground pool about one foot below the water's surface, said police reports. He was pronounced dead at the scene, according to police.

Officer Douglas Wilkinson was dispatched to the home on Wednesday morning after Vivian Novia of Marlboro called police headquarters. Novia, a friend of the victim, became concerned when McAlee did not report to work on June 26.

Wilkinson entered the home through the front door, which was open, and saw the kitchen lights were on. At this time, Wilkinson called for back-up and Officer Steven Fields arrived at the scene.

The officers began their search of the home and discovered the body a few minutes later, according to reports. Fields immediately shed his gunbelt and jumped into the pool to retrieve the victim. According to police reports, the body was in an advanced stage of rigor mortis at the time of the discovery.

Fire Department personnel at the scene confirmed the medical observation of the police and a state

POLICE LOG

Sunday, July 1

3:35 p.m.
Officer Philip Coss was called to a Main Street residence on a report of a possible breaking and entering in progress. Officer William O'Neil was called as a back-up.

Police observed the screen on the back door on the south side of the home had been punched out and the French doors leading into the house from the porch had been opened.

Police found no intruders inside the house at the time. Several items were found to be missing from the home, said police reports.

A neighbor told police at this time that at 1:30 p.m., two men were observed in a red mini-van outside the home. One of the men got out of the van and went to the back of the home, while the other drove around the corner and stepped out of the vehicle and sat on the curb with what appeared to be a radio, said the witness. The two men got back in the van about 15 minutes later and drove away, said the witness.

The neighbor was also able to provide the first three numbers of the license plate, said police reports.

An investigation continues.

Saturday, June 30

12:30 a.m.
Officer Lawrence Hill was in the area of Forest and Cross streets when he saw a car fail to stop at the intersection of those streets.

The car travelled through the intersection and onto Cross Street, narrowly avoiding a collision with the police cruiser, said reports.

The officer followed the car and stopped the vehicle in a vacant parking lot.

According to police, the officer spoke with the driver regarding the motor vehicle violations and could see the driver's eyes were glassy and bloodshot. Police also detected a strong odor of alcohol from the man's breath, said reports.

The driver, a 27-year-old Chelmsford man, was asked by police where he was going. The driver told police he was looking for his girlfriend's house. When asked where that was, the driver replied that he and his girlfriend live together in Chelmsford.

At this time, Officer Hill called for back-up. Officer Jonathan Dean arrived to assist. The driver was asked to step from the car and several field sobriety tests were administered.

After failing to complete the sobriety tests, the driver was placed under arrest for driving under the influence. He was transported to the station and his vehicle was towed from the scene. The driver was also cited for failure to stop at a stop sign.

Star signs temporary lease with town

The Winchester Star will relocate to temporary offices above the Chamber of Commerce this month during renovations to the Winchester Star building.

The Star building was sold in May to Wadsworth Realty Trust, and will be renovated by that company.

Star Publisher Asa Cole and Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer reached agreement on the 1,100 square feet at 27 Waterfield Road, the upstairs of the old train station, which the town owns.

Cole said Star personnel will be moving into the temporary quarters at the end of July. The new owners, Wadsworth Realty Trust, take possession of The Star Building and begin renovations in early August.

Coinciding with the July move will be the opening of a telemarketing center at 580 Winter St. (off Rte. 128) in Waltham, which will be the headquarters for Harte-

Hanks Community Newspapers including Transcript and Century newspapers.

"While the Rte. 128 location will give us new strength in telemarketing, circulation and photography with state-of-the-art equipment, our commitment to Winchester is just as strong as ever," Cole added. "We will continue to be a vital part of the downtown at our temporary office above The Chamber and hopefully by the end of the year be back in a completely renovated Star Building," he said.

"We are delighted with the new owners of The Star Building and after seeing their plans are confident the renovations will make the building the showcase of the downtown. We also appreciate Mr. Maurer's cooperation in helping us find temporary quarters," he added.

The Winchester Star has also signed a long-term lease with Wadsworth Realty Trust, the future owners of the 3 Church St. building. The Star personnel will move back into the 3 Church St. site once renovations are complete.

According to Anthony Petrucci of Winchester, president of Wadsworth Realty Trust, the process of interviewing potential sub-contractors to do renovations of the Star building has already begun.

"We are attempting to involve as many local sub-contractors [in the project], who we believe can really do the best work," Petrucci said. "I think it is important to use as many local business people as we can on this project so that when new life is brought back into the building, it will have been accomplished with a sense of community and spirit."

"We see this as an opportunity to band together as many local business people as possible. That includes local banks who are supported by the community and in turn support the community. Their financial support for this project is important to us and to the business district in the downtown [area]. Without consistent downtown investment by local banks of this nature, then future viability of the center is diminished," he added.

According to Petrucci, renovations are expected to begin sometime in late summer and be completed this fall. Petrucci said once the building is renovated, the second floor will house office space while the first level will contain retail space.

Of the renovations, Petrucci said, "We are having all the windows restored where possible or re-built to match the existing ones. There will be all new wiring, plumbing and [heating and cooling] system."

Petrucci added that response from prospective tenants has been "excellent."

Re-use committee readies to disband

Members question group make-up

Star Editor

Although the School Re-use Committee may soon be disbanded, members will present a final report to the School Committee, incorporating a number of recommendations for similar committees in the future.

School Re-use Chairman Rita Breen and members discussed recommendations at their Monday night meeting: establishing a separate budget to cover advertising and legal expenses; participation of legal counsel from the beginning of the process; and creation a more rigorous and detailed lease.

Members also stressed the need to outline the Uniform Procurement Act, which affects all building leases. The law, enacted in May, mandates a 13-step procedure to bring unity to the bidding process for public properties.

The Re-use Committee was formed in May to examine lease options for the Vinson Owen Elementary School building, when it was slated for closing by the School Committee. With a recent Town Meeting vote to fund the operation of that school however, the committee was dissolved last week.

Aside from recommendations, some members also questioned the make-up of the committee, and stressed the need to be objective on an issue as sensitive as the Vinson Owen School closing.

"When we came on this committee, I thought we agreed, for the purpose we had gathered, we would submerge our [personal] political feelings," said member Michael Manzo.

When asked to elaborate by member Leo Clavette, Manzo cited Breen's statements at Town Meeting relating to Re-use legislation and other issues. "I think those were Rita's personal opinions, but I thought they came across as official opinions of the committee," he said.

Manzo said he was "pleased [the Vinson Owen School] was able to stay open," but said he was concerned that personal opinions were "skewed" to seem to be opinions of the committee. "I think we crossed that fine line, frankly," he said.

In defending herself, Breen said (See REUSE, page 5A)

Cooperative cited for soundness, safety

leave the sluggish traditional savings banking world behind and take advantage of the new banking powers granted by the state Legislature in 1982.

During that time period, the article notes that approximately 50 thrifts converted to stock, resulting in those banks raising billions of dollars. However, through careful management and conservative values, banks like the Cooperative Bank came out on top in the end, the article says.

Quoted extensively in the article, Cooperative Bank President Edward Goodwin said concentrating on the customer has always been a priority for his bank.

"The secret is knowing your customer — your borrowers," Goodwin said. "If the [Chief Executive Officers] would only go down to the lobby and meet the people coming into the bank, they wouldn't have some of the problems they are having," he noted in the article.

"We looked at the fast movers going into stock," said Goodwin in the article. "The question was, though: What were we going to do with all that new cash? Undue growth costs money unless it is done in a safe and sound environment. And we figured we couldn't do it without taking too much risk."

As banks tapped into the conversion quickly, diversification was left behind, the article says. In addition, many banks experienced "too much money chasing too few good loans," resulting in bad investments due to poor planning.

But for the Cooperative Bank, converting to stock was not in the cards. Instead, Goodwin told the Star the bank's emphasis on the customer, in particular the introduction in 1979 of Saturday morning coffee-and-donut open houses, has played a major role in the success of that institution.

The significance of the designation, said Goodwin, is "definitely the safety and soundness aspect" of being able to assure depositors of the bank's strength. Goodwin attributes the success of the bank to "well thought out, conservative judgement being used in our decisions ... how, when, where and why we invest [depositors' money]."

According to Goodwin, the bank has kept all of its investments in Massachusetts, and in most cases, investments are going back in the form of loans to depositors.

"It's a great opportunity for growth in our own market without taking a lot of risks," Goodwin told the Star. "We have built up a lot of confidence and trust in our community."

"[Depositors know they] can put money in a place that isn't, in effect, going to abscond with funds," he said. "That message is a very positive one in what has been a considerably negative environment for our industry.

"We have never lost sight of the fact the money we're dealing with is not ours. We're in a fiduciary capacity ... to do ultimately the finest job we know how to protect that trust," he added.

The result, for the Cooperative Bank, has been that, in some years, the growth rate hit 30 percent.

Goodwin also credits the Board of Directors with the success of the bank. Members of that board include Chairman John J. Sullivan, Sumner Andrews, Dudley H. Bradley II, Windsor S. Carpenter, Henry L. Clark, Dr. Donald E. McLean, Frederick McCormack, Stanley E. Neill, Robert C. Penna, Paul J. Whitney Jr. and Goodwin.

Winchester Cooperative Bank is a $78 million mutually-owned institution. The bank had a return on assets of 1.06 percent in 1989.

Pierce gains experience at FBI Academy

year and a half ago. In November, 1989, Pierce found he had been accepted, and with the approval of then-Chief of Police John McHugh, Pierce began preparing for the 11-week course, which combines academic and physical training.

Following an involved screening process of Pierce's background, the lieutenant headed for Quantico, Va. in early April. What followed was, according to Pierce, an informative and challenging experience.

"The purpose of the academy is to provide networking between agencies all over the world and to be able to extend the skills [learned] and bring information back to your local department," he said.

"The academy provides the best training in all of the state-of-the-art methods and equipment offered by the FBI," said Pierce. "It's a training tool to help the professional officer, and send him or her back [to their departments] with new knowledge."

But in addition to new knowledge, Pierce emphasized the camaraderie of the participants in the Academy. "When you're living with people for 11 weeks, you really get to know them," said Pierce. "That was one of the best parts."

According to Pierce, the academy took a "holistic" approach to policing by incorporating training of both the mind and body. Courses such as constitutional law, stress management, forensics, health, nutrition, effective communication, internal auditing and psychology were all available to officers. In addition, mini-seminars were held throughout the 11 weeks in subjects such as computer science.

Pierce cited the stress management course as one of the most beneficial at the academy. Given the stress experienced by both police and fire personnel in job-related situations, Pierce said he would like to set up a similar course in Winchester.

"The course was tremendous. I'd like to disseminate what I got down there to as many people as I can," he said. "The stress management course is one I feel I can really use in dealing with people in court and on the street."

"It's something that is drastically needed," said Pierce. "One of the biggest problems, not just in law enforcement, [is stress]."

While in Quantico, Pierce said officers were housed in dormitory-style facilities. Each day, students attended classes, and evenings were reserved for studying and networking.

"They encouraged networking. That's what it's really all about," said Pierce. "And in doing that, you come to find out how similar rather than dissimilar everyone's working conditions are, and the people they work with are," said Pierce.

At the beginning of the course, officers were timed in a 1.5 mile run and a variety of other physical tests, including push-ups, sit-ups, flexibility, as well as blood pressure and body fat counts. At the end of the term, students were again tested. And for Pierce, that meant an improvement of 1½ minutes on his run, and 17-18 additional sit-ups and push-ups in the allotted time period.

Now that he's back in Winchester, Pierce said his function won't change very much. However, he said, "I may look at it in a somewhat different light."

"It caused me to think a little more, look a little more into the things I do," he added.

And Pierce's training came at little cost to the town of Winchester. In addition to his salary, the town paid a small uniform fee and a $100 assessment fee. The course is funded by the federal government, a cost of approximately $10,000 per person.

As for the academy, Pierce said he was pleased with the operation of it. "It was not like boot camp or something along those lines," he said. "All the people in our class were 10, 15, 20 years on the job. They treated us like the professionals we are."

And professionals they were. Combined, Pierce's class had a total of 3,763 years in law enforcement. The average age was approximately 39, and the average number of years on the job was 15 to 17. Only .05 percent of all the law enforcement officers in the world will ever have the opportunity to go through the academy, Pierce noted.

"It would be a tremendous experience to have at any stage in your career. But now, I think I appreciate it more after a few years in the business," he said.

Cooperative Bank gets a new look

Between 5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Monday one weekend this past winter, something special happened to the Winchester Cooperative Bank: it got a new look.

The Cooperative Bank, in operation in Winchester since 1893, revamped its look early this year, the first time any major renovations have been done since the current building was constructed in 1931.

According to Cooperative Bank Vice President Elizabeth Kehoe, work began after the bank closed Friday afternoon, and by Saturday afternoon, the whole bank was gutted. But by Monday morning, with teller stations back in place, paintings on the wall and silk flower arrangements on the counters, it was business as usual.

According to Kehoe, the decision to renovate the bank came about in an effort to better service customers. "Something had to be done, so we inverted the counters. We have probably three times the lobby space we had before," she said.

Calling the project "extremely successful," Kehoe said, "I'm really thrilled with it. It's aesthetically very pleasing." The art deco style, including high ceilings and acoustic tiles, is in keeping with the style of decoration when the building was constructed in 1931, she noted.

"We have tried to create a home-town, local, community-oriented, consumer-interested bank, and that's what we are," said Kehoe. "We try to service the customers' needs on a personal basis. We're very sensitive to that."

she had, at the beginning of her statements to Town Meeting, said they were her personal opinion. "I was also reacting to the fact that people had very high expectations of what we could accomplish," she said. Breen also cited concerns regarding the legal issues relating to the Uniform Procurement Act.

Zoo might get funds

last Saturday, June 30, legislators are now working with the supplemental FY91 budget, which essentially gives a two-week extension to this year's monumental budget debates.

But the discussion in conference committee could continue "ad infinitum," according to Casey and the issue could remain in limbo for weeks. In the meantime, zoo officials are wary of getting their hopes up.

At a five-mile road race, sponsored by the Stone Zoo July 1 to promote awareness about the facility, Executive Director Dr. Mark Goldstein said he feels positive about the zoo's potential funding.

"But this is only the fourth round of a six-round fight," said Goldstein, encouraging citizens to write to legislators.

medical examiner was requested. Inspector Paul Deluca photographed the body and will conduct the investigation.

The owners of the home were out of state at the time of the incident and could not be reached, said police reports. McAlee's family was notified by Winchester police and the house was secured.

According to Lieutenant James Pierce, the investigation into the case continues and information from the autopsy report was not yet available when the Star went to press Tuesday.

Breen said she believed Town Meeting expected a tenant to be in place in Vinson Owen School in September.

Manzo said he thought the composition of the committee, which included as voting members residents of the Vinson Owen School neighborhood, "could have affected" the nature of the committee. While Manzo praised Breen's work on behalf of the group, he said it was even more important, given the make-up of the group, for members to submerge their personal feelings.

"That is not to say the efforts by anyone on the committee were less than excellent," said Manzo, citing the amount of time put in by all the membership.

Member Ashley Stevens agreed with Manzo. Stevens said had he known Breen was going to make a speech to Town Meeting, he, too, would have prepared a personal statement. Stevens said it "would have been a courtesy to the rest of the committee" for Breen to inform members she planned to speak. Stevens said reverting to the "traditional formula" for a Re-use committee would remove the possibility of confusion of personal and committee opinions.

Member Harry Chefalo said in the past, Re-use committees have consisted of town officials who received input from neighborhood advisory groups, but that those groups were not voting members of the committee.

However, Clavette disagreed with Manzo and Stevens. "I feel having a minority of local residents helps the committee," he said. Fair and equal representation of the neighborhood gave the committee "credibility," he added. "This committee has done an awful lot of work in a short amount of time. The only enemy here was time. The committee could not have functioned successfully without representation of the community," said Clavette.

"I feel as though I am being accused of something and I find that very difficult to deal with," said Breen. "I did say it was my personal opinion, and Town Meeting does respect freedom of speech. I did not try to bog this committee down and I resent that."

"I'm not suggesting you did anything less than an excellent job," said Manzo. "Without your hard work and good, even keel, we would not have accomplished half of what we all accomplished." However, he added, "[This] was something that made me uncomfortable."

Breen again said she believed at the time Town Meeting had "very unrealistic expectations" of what the group could accomplish. "I was concerned and I wanted everything to stand up in any situation," she added.

Members of the committee commended Assistant Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald and secretary Helga Stanley for their efforts on behalf of the committee.

In addition to recommendations, the committee plans to compile a Re-use Committee file for future reference. The committee is expected to present its report to the School Committee in August.

Bank recalls early days in new look

important, said Kehoe. "We train our people. [Most tellers] know customers by their first names."

Kehoe said many businesses have become impersonal. "When you listen to people and pay attention and respond, it makes a difference in your business, and that's important," she said.

The bank also holds a Saturday morning "festival," according to Kehoe, with free newspapers, coffee and donuts. "Saturdays, it's very much the place to be," she said.

On weekdays, coffee and newspapers are also available to patrons. Kehoe said a number of customers stop by the bank on their way to the train to pick up a cup of coffee. "That's what we try to promote — that we're community oriented," she said.

As for maintaining a familiar flavor, Kehoe has been with the bank for 34 years, while bank President Edward Goodwin has been on board for 22 years. Tellers have been in place at least three years, while many have been associated with the bank for 10 or 11 years. "Continuity provides for familiarity," she said.

But Kehoe credits Goodwin with much of the bank's success. "He's the one, along with everyone else, who has made the bank grow and become the significant one it is. We work long and hard at it," she added.

Kehoe said customers appreciate the community-oriented environment of the bank. "There is a direct correlation between the feeling we've created and the safety and soundness we've maintained," she said.

Pool rules held up

mately 30 pool owners who attended a public hearing in June opposed the possible regulations.

"I'm not surprised that the regulated group, does not want to be regulated," said Swartz.

A question also arose as to whether the Board of Selectmen and Town Counsel were aware of the revised set of regulations dated June 13. Swartz has requested that Town Counsel review the regulations and also comment on several related legal opinions.

COMMENT

Winchester
KernelsFriends and coffee
mix at the CoopBy DAN CHANE
Special to the Star

True Winchesterites worth their salt know instinctively where to find the best coffee and doughnuts in town Saturday mornings — Winchester Cooperative Bank, of course!

President and Chief Executive Officer Ed Goodwin and his loyal staff have been gracious hosts to Winchester at large every Saturday morning since Dec. 1, 1979, when he and Peggy Brine brewed up their first urn of coffee (at 6:30 a.m.) and arranged an inviting assortment of doughnuts in the classic 1931 art deco lobby.

Chairman of the Board John Sullivan stood on Church Street last Saturday and said, "The secret of the success of our bank is its relationship with the public — and our key to that is Ed Goodwin. The board of directors does all it can to support him."

Thus it is no surprise that this bank was recently named one of the top nine mutually owned banks in the state by The Banker and Tradesman.

Officer Kevin Mawn, on duty that morning, smiled jovially and said, "The police detail is here to protect property — but more so to be of service if any visitors need assistance. It's a friendly bank where everybody knows everybody else and there is a large crowd most Saturdays."

Long-time Winchester favorites Charlie and Maggie Koch arrived amidst a volley of welcome. "I come here every Saturday to get my dividend," said Charlie as he hefted a hot cup of coffee.

Man about town, "Twinn" Horn — ever the guy with the well-turned wisecrack — came in wearing his trademark baseball cap to swap some stories with buddies, while over at the counter, the observer spotted Paul O'Neil, Bea VanDyke, Joe Guarnotta and firefighter Tim Coss overseeing their financial transactions. As Tim left he remarked on the friendliness of the crowd. "It's happy," he said.

"Crator" and Irene Horn stood by the urn pouring two cups of coffee. They both emphasized that this is still an old-fashioned town bank as they left to chat with some old friends.

Peggy Brine — warm and valued receptionist — poured for a customer as she smiled her cordial greeting. "People like to come and see their friends and chat — and we notice when someone is missing," she said.

Dorothy Wadsworth and son-in-law, Vic Jonas waved a greeting. Dorothy remembers learning the lessons of thrift early from her parents, Fred and Grace Aseltine. "I used to save quarters in a little book and came in here often as a little girl," she said.

In a free moment, Ed Goodwin spoke about the morning coffee. "Our morning coffees took about two years to really become popular. We realized the bank really belonged to its customers and we wanted to reinforce that philosophy by having them take a little of the bank home with them each week," he said.

He mentioned that a great part of the successful relationship with the public has to do with the employees. Loyalty runs strong with service records running between eight years and 34 years.

"The average length of employment for customer representatives (tellers) is roughly four years. Most leave for positions in the private sector — not for jobs in other banks. They are the bank and are very much valued!" said Ed.

Legend at the bank — and in town — is the 34 years service of Betty Kehoe, now a vice president of the institution. Betty personifies the deeply held respect for the public — and Winchester — the bank has had since 1893.

Long may we continue to raise steaming mugs together each Saturday — in friendship, community and mutual endeavor!

Fun with foreign tongues

By TERRY MAROTTA

I suppose one of the many things we members of the global village will have to give up pretty soon is the great pleasure we've all had making fun of one another's efforts to express ourselves in tongues not our own.

It hasn't always been kind, but it sure has been fun all these years to listen to the novice in English, say, trying to make his way through a simple phrase or two.

I bought a new headset for my Walkman recently, hoping the instructions had been written in Japan, point of origin for 99 percent of the world's electronics equipment. Sure enough, some nice fractured English popped out at me: "Adjust volume according to personal," it advised. And, in reference to the tiny ear pads, "Take a film hold of the foam cover..." Was this the classic Asian confusion of the "L" and "R" sounds, written right into the instructions? Funny, if a tad cruel in the old World War II movies?

Funniest perhaps in the more recent film "A Christmas Story", Jean Shepherd's reminiscence of a Yuletide long ago, when the dog ate the turkey and the family had Christmas dinner at a Chinese restaurant, with the waiters gathered round the merry table to sing "Deck the Halls With Boughs of Horry, Fa Ra Ra Ra Ra Ra Ra Ra Ra Ra Ra?" Who can say?

Over the last several years, we have had many straight-faced letters from young Austrian girls wishing to come live in our house. Their early stabs at English were equally quaint: "I am very interesting to examine your cultures," said one with perhaps a keen interest in mold. "It is unbelievable for me in you not yet having my last letter received," wrote another. "I am sportive and easy and large..." a third healthy girl penned by way of introduction; (and she was, too, as we later learned).

But I am no one to laugh at the efforts of others. Do I not recall my own early attempts in Latin? "Bonus Ab! Bonus Ab!", our teacher would call ironically to us for goodbye as we exploded forth from his classroom after weak attempts at mind-numbing sets of declensions. Do I not recall poor Jason, arriving at the royal court "unopede nudo", with one shoe off in other words, but translated by earnest ninth graders as having sashayed in with a naked footsoldier? (ah those mischievous Argonauts!) Of course Latin is tricky because lots of what is most central to the meaning has been left out of the sentence ("That part is understood," our teachers would say to us; by whom it was never clear.)

My friend David Talbot made a terrible mess of the tiny winged messengers' words to Aeneas when he caught him lounging in the arms of Dido instead of busily founding Rome. "Quid struis?" asked the flighty lad, from "struo" meaning to do, make, build, erect, fashion, form, create, enact, pile up, etc. (you see why Latin is tricky for some), meaning "Watcha doin', man?" but which David translated as "Why do you make a large pile on the steps of the Queen's palace?"

Recently I called a friend in New York. I was coming to the city and hoped to see him there. I got his grandma on the phone who had no English. Well, in truth she had three words. "Stan?" I asked. "Is not here," she answered. "Stan?" I said again. "Is not here," she repeated. So I tried my high school French, which I approximate here in English, the way it no doubt sounded in lame waddling louse-ridden pidgin French:

"Excuse me, if you please, why not..." I began. "Is it that you can tell me when comes home Stanley?"

"Is not here," she answered. "One time yet again," I went on. "How to say, I would wish, how much is the pen?"

"Eh?" she snorted with Gallic contempt.

Here I thought of my friend Lola who says, "Sure I speak French: Nescafe. A la mode. See?", and I went for some idioms. "merci, Eh bien, Zut alors, Arc De Triomphe," I said and began again: "On Sunday coming I am to New York. It is my strong desire to cook your dog and look at your little boy [grandson]."

For some reason we lost contact then. There was a squawk and the line went dead. I'm still not sure what happened. The squawk may have been laughter, but then she did seem rather offended.

Moi, I wouldn't be offended. I would say bring on the Horry boughs, get out the Nescafe and keep on laughing. For should we not all be large and easy and sportive while still we can?

saving 'spares'

TO THE EDITOR:

I'd like to plant a seed now in the hope it will sprout in the fall. I believe we have a covered area at the landfill that would be manned eight hours a week.

Its purpose: to permit individuals to bring to it useful items which could be used by others. I hate to waste useful items. So many could use Winchester "spares."

Be thinking about how this could best be organized, and we'll work on it in September or October.

Methodist nursery

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the United Methodist Nursery School, I would like to thank Woburn Foreign Motors for their generous donation towards our proposed playground.

Thanks to them and the hard work of many others on the day of the Festival, our dream of a new playground may become a reality this fall.

open letter to Society

The following is an open letter to the Winchester Historical Society.

TO THE EDITOR:

My copy of the Black Horse Bulletin came as usual. (Apparently, I have not yet been excommunicated for my heresies.)

I am encouraged by what I read. Please let me quote from the President's message, from which I learn that, we are encouraged "to research and ask questions about local history and are offered space in the bulletin for our discoveries and queries."

Glad to know that — I may take advantage of that offer some day if I can find something of enough interest to warrant cluttering up the pages of the Bulletin.

For instance, how about the long-lost northern (or northeastern) boundary line of the original Symmes Grant? And how about a plausible explanation for the cut-off of the Sharon-Connor house? Also, as an added bonus, a settlement forever, of the vexing question of whether or not the Black Horse Tavern was built on land that was originally land included on the Symmes Grant?

I offer to solve all three of these problems at one and the same time. I offer to prove precisely, within inches, where the line crossed Main Street and where it finally emerged again after crossing Manchester Field and the railroad embankment.

The Society, of which I am a life-time member, has publicly ridiculed my hypothesis, but has never seen fit to grant me a hearing. It would seem to me that someone among the hundreds of fellow members would have the common courtesy to speak up on my behalf and say, "Wait a minute. The man is a fellow member. We should at least grant him the privilege of being heard."

If granted, it would be a real "David vs. Goliath" confrontation (I being the David of the scenario). So, if nobody else is willing to request that I be heard, then I will make the request myself. Let me "put up or shut up" and let the Society do the same. The true history of Winchester will be the better for having these three matters cleared up for all time.

Please name a time and place for a public hearing and I will set up my case, and let the Society shoot me down, if they are able to do so.

Cable committee against loss of WPIX

TO THE EDITOR:

The town Cable TV Committee voted to go on record to express its opposition to certain aspects of the unilateral programming changes implemented on July 1 by Continental Cablevision in Winchester. In informing the committee that it would drop four broadcast channels (WPIX, WPRI, WJAR, WLNE) carried since the inception of cable in Winchester, Continental stated that it was responding to complaints about blackouts on these channels due to Federal Communication Commission Network Non-Duplication and Syndicated Exclusivity Rules imposed on Jan. 1.

Continental stated that it had decided to replace three network channels and one independent "superstation" with services not subject to blackouts that would (See LETTERS, page 7A)

Superintendent of Schools Harry V. Gilson announced that the Winchester School Department, through the office of U.S. Senator Leverett Saltonstall and Congresswoman Edith Norse Rogers, had received notice of favorable action on its application for federal assistance. The tentative entitlement for the fiscal year 1960 was $20,781. Of that amount, $15,585 was certified for immediate payment.

An editorial in the Star drew attention to a potentially hazardous situation at the West Side Playground. People attending those Little League games were creating a problem by parking their automobiles on both sides of the street. Complaints from resident of the area prompted Police Chief Derro to restrict parking there to one side of the street between the hours of 6 and 8 p.m.

Fire Chief James Callahan was honored at the annual conference of the Fire Chiefs of New England. The Chief was elected second vice president of the New England division of the International Fire Chiefs Association.

The Board of Selectmen met with representatives of the Board of Health and the Highway Department to continue a dialogue on the issuance and supervision of permits and stickers for use of the Town incinerator. Selectmen voted to forward a recommendation to the Board of Health that use of the facility be dependent upon the issuance of a common or single permit. Stickers would be granted according to the number of vehicles to be covered by the one permit.

Vandalism in the form of window breakage and larceny of a bicycle continued to plague Winchester.

W. Howard Niblock, principal of Winchester High School since 1956, was elected to the position of Director of Pupil Services by a School Committee vote at a special meeting. He assumed the duties of the new position after a successor was appointed to the high school principalship.

Michael Recycle

Improving town's recycling program

Question

What do the Winchester Recycling Facility's employees think residents can do to improve the effectiveness of Winchester's recycling program?

Answer

Michael Recycle recently visited the Winchester Recycling Facility to get recycling tips from the employees who manage the on-going recycling operations. Thanks go to WRF employees Andy Connelly, Roger L'Heureux, Peter Capua, Johnathon Douglas, and Bob Webber for contributed to Winchester's recycling efforts by answering residents' questions about recycling, removing recyclable materials from the belt and putting them in the recycling bins, placing signs by the recycling bins, operating the plastic grinding machine, turning the compost piles, and completing many other tasks.

The WRF employees told Michael Recycle that the program has improved significantly over the past few years and that Winchester residents, including kids, are making a strong effort to recycle. However, based on their front-line perspective, they have observed that many residents continue to 'contaminate' the recycling bins by putting in materials which are not accepted by the companies purchasing or hauling Winchester's recyclable mater-respond to the programming desires expressed by subscribers participating in a random survey.

We have no quarrel with any of the substitute services nor with Continental's use of subscriber surveys to stay abreast of subscriber's interests. We applaud the diversity of new services. We agree that blackouts are frustrating for subscribers. The three network stations which were dropped offered little unique programming.

But we believe that dropping WPIX is unfair, untimely and unwise:

- Unlike the three network channels whose prime time programming is nearly entirely duplicative of Boston channels, WPIX offers unique evening programs which are not subject to blackouts — Yankee baseball games, classic movies, and a 10 p.m. news show.

- Continental stated that the blackouts caused subscribers to feel short-changed. Eliminating the three most often blacked out channels should dissipate this perception.

- One of the new services (Tele Italia) is a part-time service and therefore Channel 6 will be dark for a substantial part of each day. Three of the other new services (Boston Catholic Television, NASA and Emergency Education Network) will not be available for at least several months when Continental reconfigures its system. So why not at least wait until the end of the baseball season to drop WPIX?

- By using just one of the available blank channels on the system, Continental could offer all of the new services and retain WPIX. Based on community reaction when Continental dropped WGR, which broadcasts Chicago Cubs and White Sox games, and our unscientific sense of the community, we believe that WPIX is very important to a significant number of subscribers.

When the Providence cable television provider dropped WPIX the outcry from Yankee viewers was so great that the company and the city responded with a creative approach that allowed the Yankee games to be carried on an access channel. If Winchester cable subscribers share the committee's conclusion that dropping WPIX is ill-advised, we urge Continental to reconsider and we offer to work with Continental to accommodate the subscribers' and Continental's interest.

Haven't Yankee fans suffered enough this season? Shouldn't Yankee haters be allowed to witness more humiliation of the Bronx Bombers?

If you care, please write (760 Main St., Wilmington, MA 01887) or call Continental Cablevision: 1-800-274-FIXX.

Winchester Town
Cable TV Committee

Conte comments on cable license

TO THE EDITOR:

Rather than attempting to negotiate another contract with Continental Cable Television, the town of Winchester should recognize the proven superiority of competition and attempt to create a competitive market for cable t.v. by inviting companies to compete for business.

Rather than limiting consumer choice to only one cable company designated by the town government, Winchester residents should be able to choose from among companies willing to compete for their business — just as we do among newspapers, supermarkets, airlines or any other of the myriad of goods and services available in a modern capitalist economy.

Cable television companies like to claim that their service is a "natural monopoly" — like "Ma Bell" used to claim to be in the Dark Ages before MCI, Sprint, and the other new telephone companies which now compete and have dramatically reduced long distance rates. The fact is that modern technology is making "natural monopoly" assertions obsolete if they had a degree of validity in the past.

A recent study published in the May issue of Consumers' Research magazine dramatically illustrates that consumers in the growing number of companies which have competing cable television companies pay significantly lower subscription rates and generally have more channels offered by competing companies which are eager to keep their patronage.

While I am not aware of any competing cable television companies in Massachusetts — not too surprisingly considering the way political deal making has become a way of life in the Commonwealth — such widely varied communities as the city of Orlando and Orange County in Florida, Omaha, Neb., Allentown, Pa., and Paramus, N.J., all have two cable television companies and Cleveland, Ohio, actually has three competing companies for consumers to choose among.

Considering Winchester's attractiveness as a cable market — high average income and percentage of existing cable subscribers — I see no reason why Winchester should not be able to attract at least two competitors willing to vie for the business of its residents.

Why shouldn't Winchester residents be able to experience the benefits of free market competition? If the wisdom/efficacy of free competition can be seen by the benighted peoples of Eastern Europe, can Massachusetts be far behind?

Far from being a "natural monopoly", the lack of cable television competition in the vast majority of communities stems from deliberate policy. Both cable companies and many communities have a vested interest in non-competitive markets. The cable companies get to charge monopoly prices to captive consumers while cities often receive a percentage of gross revenues as a franchise fee and/or the benefit of community access channels which are utilized by politically potent interest groups.

I have nothing against Continental Cable, and honestly do not know what the town of Winchester receives for its franchise, but I am convinced that we have nothing to lose and perhaps much to gain as consumers by seeking a competitive market.

WINCHESTER PAST AND PRESENT

Legend of the 'white horseman'

Special to The Star

While the nation remembers its War of Independence, it is a fitting opportunity to look back into Winchester's history and retell the story of the "white horseman."

On the 19th of April in 1775 when word was spread to gather in Lexington, news of the British advance came to Cambridge Street where Hezekiah Wyman, 55 years of age, mounted his white horse, and, with musket in hand, set off for Lexington.

Like other men from Woburn, he was too late for the fighting at Lexington Common but, continuing up the road, met with British soldiers returning from Concord. All along the route back to Boston was made the legend of the white horseman who charged again and again against the British, killing and wounding a number of the enemy, but always escaping untouched by the shower of bullets around him.

According to the newspaper account (first printed in the Boston Pearl, reprinted in the Woburn Journal, 29 July 1887), "his exploits were well nigh fabulous."

"When he met the British he began blazing away at them vigorously with his deadly firearm."

Mounted on his strong steed, he rode furiously in the direction of the British ranks. His aim was taken at close quarters, and his shots were sent with a constant fatal effect.

"His tall gaunt form, his gray locks floating in the breeze, and the color of his steed distinguished him from the other Americans, and the British gave him the name of 'Death on the Pale Horse.' The utmost endeavors of his enemy to kill him were unavailing. He passed through the whole melee unscathed and unhurt. Once a bayonet charge drove the old man and the party with which he was acting to a distance from the foe; but he was out of ammunition and was then compelled to pick up some. But he ere long returned to the charge and this time killed an officer, and after that exploit the report of his piece was frequently heard till the close of the fight. His powerful white horse, careering at full speed over the hills, with the dauntless old man on his back, was continually to be seen. The British learned to dread the frequent appearance of this dire rider at unexpected points along the route of their passage, for his aim was true, and the economical principles in which he was trained forbade his wasting powder or ball.

"He lingered at Arlington long enough to aid in a plot laid by Ammi Cutter for taking the British baggage-wagon and their guards [with the old men of Menotomy] ... The story says that Hezekiah pursued the British even after they had entered Charlestown and that he followed the enemy to their very boats; and then, turning his horse's head, returned to his home."

Wyman's name appears on a list of those who either paid for others to serve or did their own personal service in Captain Samuel Belknap's company and is listed for five months service at Ticonderoga and three months in Jersey. In March, 1777 the Town of Woburn voted to pay him 8 pounds, 16 shillings, and 10 pence in part for his service in the war.

Wyman survived the war — as did the white mare, which he willed to one of his sons — and lived out his days, until the summer of 1779, in his house not far from the corner of Cambridge and Wildwood Street. He owned a large section of land, upon which much of the West Side is now built, where generations of descendants succeeded him. The neighborhood was often called Wyman Plains and, until recently, the family name was perpetuated through a succession of Wyman schools.

ials. The employees often have to perform the time-consuming task of removing unacceptable material from the recycling bins. Winchester residents can ensure the marketability of the recycling loads and free-up WRF employees' time to perform other important duties by not placing the following items in the recycling bins:

- Plastic recycling bins — no bottle caps, toys, flower pots, plant trays, or containers with residual hazardous waste.

- Glass recycling bins — no plate glass or safety glass.

- Paper recycling trailer — no cardboard, glossy magazines, plastic bags, or white paper. Save your white paper for Winchester's upcoming white paper recycling program. Bring your newspapers in paper bags or tied with string.

- Metal pile — no non-metal items such as plastic lawn chairs and steering wheels.
- Compost — no tree limbs, bricks, or lumber.

Residents should place the items noted above on the belt or in trash containers. If you are not clear about the recyclability of an item, please ask a WRF employee for assistance or refer to the signs posted by the various recycling bins.

Jenks Center's summer activities

By MARY P. KELLY
Special to The Star

Many of the activities that keep seniors involved at the Jenks Center during the rest of the year go "on vacation" for the summer. However, many other groups and classes continue to meet, in comfort, through the hot days of summer. Seniors are reminded to come in and enjoy the air-conditioned space and the congenial company.

Program changes for the summer include: The Yoga and Creativity Group will meet twice in July, on Tuesdays, July 10 and 24. Bingo will not be held again until the last Friday in September. The WSA and COA Boards will meet only once a month during July and August. The Italian Culture Group will not meet until Sept. 24 which will be a social reunion with planning for the winter program. Bob Frang will carry on in Don Mason's role as leader of the Line and Ballroom Dancing Group, meeting on Mondays at 12:40 p.m. through the summer in the air-conditioned Pond Room.

Many talents

displayed at hobby show

The Hobby Show held recently at the Jenks Senior Center was a great success and showcased many hobbies and avocations. William Gould, a poet, was one of the exhibitors at the Hobby Show and his poem "The Shopping Mall" shows his keen eye and his artistic ability.

The Shopping Mall*

In this tumultuous world where we aspire
To satisfaction and fulfillment of desire,
When needs and wants or flighty fancies call
We find our haven in the shopping mall.

We shed our mundane problems at the door
And enter a cathedral, not a store.
The atmosphere is relaxing and controlled

The variety a wonder to behold.

The seductive fragrance from the cosmetic bar
Blends with music floating from afar.

The aroma of tasty food then shows its might
To abate the buying, to quell the appetite.

People seem to wander to and fro,
What they want will tell them where to go,
Displays and ads, well done, have set the course
And direct the action with magnetic force.

The adolescents come to congregate
To see fashions and find a future

Excited toddlers, wide eyed, prance proudly by Tethered by their parents' watchful eye.

Sleeping babes in strollers are quite a sight
They challenge the Sistine cherubs with their delight.
The lonely come not to be alone
To touch humanity they cannot touch at home.

And the elderly who come to see it all
Find another reason to shop the mall.
They have the recollections of days gone by
And measure changes with a smile or sigh.

The purchase made, we leave the sheltered mall
And head for home with traffic at a crawl.

Refreshed by the pleasures of the day
Past irritations have been swept away.

We then replace the old and worn with new
To start again from where we once withdrew.

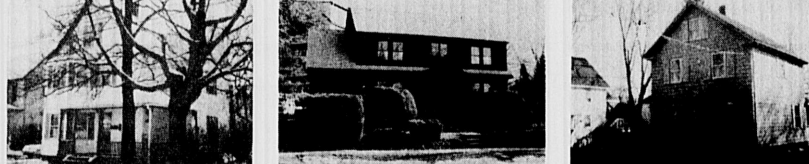

Like the living cell the body resupplied
Are the needs and wants that cannot be denied.

Real Estate &amp; You...

IF YOU WANT TO READ THE WHOLE THING!

Dick Murphy,
Bixby & Porter

When you buy a house, you're asked to sign an amazing number of documents, especially if you're obtaining a mortgage gage. While it may seem prudent to read all of these papers before signing, it may not be practical to do this at the settlement. If you're the type who really does have to read everything first, we have some suggestions.

In an ideal world, the settlement attorney would have everything ready for your perusal several days before the big event. What often happens, however, is the lender delivers the paperwork to the settlement office at the last minute - sometimes later than that. If you insist on reading everything, including all fine print, you'll probably draw some serious groans from the others at the table. One solution is to request copies of all of the standard forms a week before settlement, since most of the papers are boiler plate. Then at settlement, you just check to ensure the blanks were correctly filled in.

Incoming officers of Temple Shalom are: Simmin Labell, President; Lex Singer-Berk, first vice president; Richard Short, second vice president; Steven Aaron, third vice president; Barbara Rosman, treasurer; Arnold Baer, financial secretary; and Betsy Lister, recording secretary.

New directors for a two-year term

HEALTH

Town Day health

fair a success

Winchester Hospital, Winchester Board of Health and the Winchester Fire Department sponsored a very successful health fair on June 2, Winchester Town Day.

Several screenings were provided and more than 500 people passed through the health exhibits in the fire station. Colorful balloons and flowers were distributed to community members throughout the day.

Many thanks are extended to the employees of Winchester Hospital, Board of Health and Fire Department, the Registry of Motor Vehicles, The National Guard, Visiting Nurse and Health Care Inc. and Advanced Life Support Paramedics and Van for their time and support to bring this health fair to our community.

Several raffles were available and four lucky winners of the Lifeline raffle won gift certificates to local restaurants. The winners were: Carolyn Dettinger, Maxmillians; Gloria Fisher, Lucias; James Hudson, Narai Siam; and Ann Miller, Armandos, all from Winchester.

are: Marcia Arnofsky, Jack Eiferman, A. David Freedland, Martin Kahn, Robert Kaplan, Steven Lichtman, Helaine Saperstein, Rosalind Segaloff, Sylvia Swartz, and Hilary Weinert. Continuing Directors for a one-year term are: S. Martin Abrams, Myer Bokser, Ellen Farber, Avrom Friedland, Martin Galaid, Mark Goldstein, Leah Marks, Myra Marshall, Mel Pedell, Norman Sherman, Mel Schneider, Donald Singer, and Lois Tinkel.

Ben Averbook, on behalf of Medford Mayor Michael McGlynn, presented citations from the City of Medford during the ceremony for outstanding service to the outgoing officers. The recipients included David Klein, outgoing President; Simmin Labell, Lex Singer-Berk, Richard Short, Steven Aaron, Arnold Baer, and Betsy Lister.

Registration is now underway for Camp Six Acres and the Six Acres Nursery School sponsored by the Temple, as well as for the full Hebrew School (pre-school through Hebrew grade 6). Rabbi Yosef Wosk, spiritual leader of Temple Shalom, holds weekly adult education classes, to which the community is warmly invited.

For further information and/or a copy of the latest Temple bulletin, call Andrea Lewis at 396-3262 or visit us at 475 Winthrop Street in Medford.

Local resident

Breen attends

Mandela dinner

Dr. Rita Breen of Winchester was a special guest at the June 29 address to the United Nations (U.N.) by Nelson Mandela. Breen was invited to attend the special session of the General Assembly by the Chairman of the U.N.'s. Special Committee against Apartheid because of the "steadfast support you have given to the international efforts to liberate Mr. Mandela and eliminate apartheid."

At the conclusion of Mandela's speech, Breen attended a small informal gathering for him in the office of the President of General Assembly, Ambassador Joseph Garba, who visited Winchester High School this past May. She presented letters to Mandela written by second grade students at Vinson Owen School to welcome him to the United States.

"It was a privilege to meet Mr. Mandela but even more so to act as a messenger to him for a group of Winchester children. People-to-people contacts are at the heart of all efforts for international understanding. It is nice to know that Mr. Mandela will return to South Africa to play a crucial role in determining that country's future with the written good wishes of a group of Winchester children," Breen said.

Breen is the executive officer of Harvard University's Committee on African Studies. In addition to her administrative responsibilities, she has taught courses at Harvard on the history of racial politics in East and Southern Africa. She also coordinates the Harvard Africa Seminar which has brought numerous policy makers and African leaders to Harvard over the past 14 years.

Breen is also a member of the Winchester Conservation Commission, the Chairman of the Vinson Owen Reuse Committee and a member of the executive board of the Winchester Community Schools Association.

WINCHESTER STAR

Two join WHS football staff

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

When Manny Marshall announced his retirement in January as the Winchester High School football coach, all agreed his successors had some big shoes to fill.

Marshall, whose career as head coach spanned 23 years, had some 150 wins, six Middlesex League titles as well as a state title in 1971 and a Division I Super Bowl championship in 1986. And in those years, Marshall also saw some great players.

Among those players are two familiar names to Winchester residents: Paul Manganaro and Tom Porell.

When Manganaro and Porell heard Marshall was retiring, their first thought was not of joining the ranks of Winchester's football coaches, but rather recollections of what the coach had given them in their high school years.

But by the time the word was out that Winchester High School was looking for two assistant coaches, both had decided returning to the Winchester football program was one way to give back to a program that gave so much to them.

"Coaching was always something I thought I'd like to experience in my lifetime," said Manganaro. And as for coaching in Winchester, he added, "It's not only the opportunity to coach but to coach in a program that gave so much to me as a student."

Porell agreed. "Winchester did give me a lot, and having an opportunity to give back to a program what was given me is something I wanted to do," he said.

In June, the School Committee voted unanimously to appoint the two as assistant football coaches of the Winchester squad. And for Athletic Director Bill Colella, Porell and Manganaro are a positive addition to the team.

"These two people are special," he said. "Not only were they very fine students in high school, but they were very fine athletes."

"I have nothing but the highest praise for both of them. They are a tremendous addition to the coaching staff, and I think they will complement what we have," said Colella.

Both have had solid football careers since graduating from Winchester High School (Manganaro in 1982, Porell in 1983). While in high school, the two played together on the 1981 Middlesex League championship league, and each in his senior year served as a co-captain for the squad.

After high school, Manganaro headed to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on a full football scholarship where he played both inside and outside linebacker. In 1985, he was an All-Yankee Conference second team selection. And in his senior year, Manganaro was co-captain of the team.

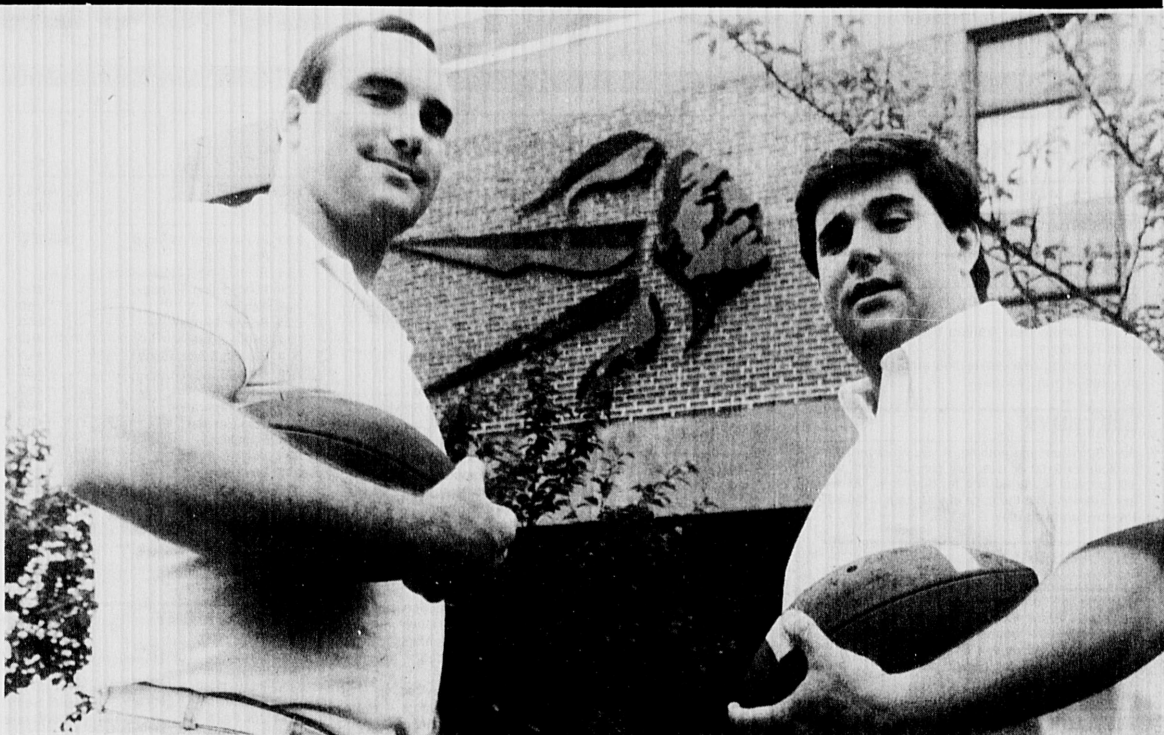

Porell continued his career after high school at Boston College. "The personality of [Coach] Jack Bicknell and the emergence of B.C. as a national contender in Division IA attracted me to [that school]," said Porell. Starting two years on the varsity squad, Porell enjoyed play in three bowl games: the Liberty, Cotton and Hall of Fame bowls.

After B.C., Porell went through training camp with the Atlanta Falcons before being released by that team. In the fall of 1987, he played for the New England Patriots during the football strike. Then, in 1988, Porell headed to training camp for the Green Bay Packers. However, he was cut from that team.

In 1988, Porell, along with fellow Winchesterite Steve Costello, spent a season coaching a club team at Providence College in Rhode Island. Although the team had a 0-5 record, Porell said the experience taught him a lot about coaching and working with students.

Providence eliminated the team the following year when the rest of the club went to Division 3 football. As Porell said, "[Providence] didn't want to make a commitment to a team. It's a shame, because they had a good foundation."

Currently, as businessmen, the two agree the lessons they learned on the field are applicable to everyday life. Manganaro is co-founder and co-owner of a Malden-based construction supply company with college pal Manny Fernandez. The company sells and ships construction materials to contractors and homeowners.

"Owning my own business and working with good friends like Manny and Tom, I see where the values I learned on the football field really tie in. It takes hard work and dedication," said Manganaro. "You learn how to deal with wins and losses. You really get to experience where those values tie in."

"Football's a lot like life, but football's fun and life is real," added Porell.

Although working a full-time job and coaching will require dedication and commitment, the two are confident they can give 100 percent to both jobs.

"We're just going to have to use our time more efficiently," said

Manganaro.

And it is the lessons they have learned both on and off the field, and from Marshall, the two hope to share with this year's squad.

"Paul and I both played a decent level of football, and we've been taught by some of the best teachers there are," said Porell. "If we can give to the kids what we've been taught, every little bit helps. The more diverse your knowledge of play is, the better you're going to be."

"[Marshall] wasn't just a coach. He was a role model also," said Manganaro. "He didn't only teach you about football; he taught you about life. He wasn't one for hollering or screeching or down-playing you. He presented a situation, and expected you to work to 100 percent of your potential."

"If you didn't, more than likely, you wouldn't end up on top," he added.

"He was a great motivator," added Porell. "When you played for Manny Marshall, you always wanted to give everything you had. And that's what he expected from you."

Both are confident in their ability to work with the current coaching staff. Porell and Manganaro join newly-appointed head coach John Donohue along with assistants John Pirani and Dave Berman. And both have a great deal of respect for their former coaches' abilities.

"[Marshall], along with coaches like Henry Knowlton, built up a dynasty in Winchester football. It's not necessary to follow [exactly] in their footsteps, but to keep the winning tradition going. I believe [John] Donohue can do that. He's dedicated to the program, and he's a professional," said Manganaro.

As for the lessons they hope to pass on, both stressed dedication and loyalty to the team.

"My goal is to relay my knowledge of the game and values: a strong sense of team loyalty and dedication, on and off the field," said Manganaro. "I want to help insure every participant in the program has a positive experience. After that, I'd like to see us win the Middlesex League title."

Porell agreed. "Probably the most important thing is... that the kids walk away from their high school years saying, 'not only did I learn a lot about football, but I learned a lot about life,'" he said.

And from his coaching in Providence, Porell said he learned there's more to the game than winning. "I learned letting the guys play and have fun is more important," he said.

Doubles
fun for all

The first annual Winchester Resident/Guest Doubles Tennis Tournament was greeted by threatening skies but the rain held off. By the end of the weekend the weather was balmy and beautiful and all the matches were completed as scheduled.

Tournament organizers Pinky Samoiloff and Gordon Nicholson said they were pleased with the turnout for the inaugural event and look to build on it for next year. Both expressed a special thanks to Diana Khabbaz and Alex Popp for serving on the tournament committee and to Popp for procuring all of the trophies.

The format was men's and women's doubles with consolation rounds for both draws.

The women's main flight saw the number one seed of Ellen Wilson and Susan Samuelson fairly well handle the field right through the final, where they battled the number two seeds of Katherine Dunn and Karen Riley to a 7-5, 6-3 win. The two had had a particularly tough match with Bonnie Totman and Calista Clunan the previous day, eventually prevailing 7-5, 4-6, 7-6 (7-2 in the tiebreaker).

On the consolation side of the women's draw, the team of Nancy Clarke and Ellen Haskell were victorious over Diana Khabbaz and Connie McGilvray 6-1, 6-1 in a well played finals match.

The men's draw saw 20 teams enter the doubles event. The extremely strong number one seeded pair of Joe Palumbo and Henry Guignet were initially put to the test in one semifinal by Tom Dunn and his guest, Skip Brookfield. The first seeds triumphed 7-5, 7-5. The other semi saw the number two seeds, Lance James and guest Frank Hill outduel Alex Popp and his nephew Chuck Burden 7-6, 6-0. James and Hill again pushed the number one seeds but not to the point of breaking, eventually falling 7-6, 6-2.

The men's consolation final saw the team of Steve Dionne and partner Alan Kachmeyer survive the flight and win it 6-3, 6-3 over perennial tournament player Al Samoiloff and his guest Doug Favorat.

There seemed to be excellent enthusiasm for the events and many

Tennis tourney this weekend

Winchester residents will be treated on the weekend of July 6, 7 and 8 to some of the best tennis of the summer at the Packer Clay Courts, when the Winchester Tennis Association, under the auspices of the Winchester Recreation Department, hosts a New England Sanctioned Men's Junior Veteran (35 years and older) tennis tournament. Tournament Director Jack Corf is expecting players from all over New England to participate due to the tournament's convenience and proximity to Boston.

There will be some local favorites pitting themselves against the best players in New England led by town champion Lance James, Neil Hurley, Alex Popp, Joe Culhane and Billy Wolf, to name a few. Rumor has it that the doubles duo of Vandy French and Chris Scanlon will be letting their presence be felt. Winchester should be well represented in this tournament.

Singles action will begin Friday evening and the doubles event will start on Saturday afternoon. Consolation rounds are also planned in conjunction with the main flight. The semifinals of the singles and doubles will be held Sunday morning and the finals early Sunday afternoon.

Do come down and join us. It's all free to the public. The caliber of tennis will be the likes of which we haven't seen on the Packer Courts in some years.

people were heard to say "wait til next year." In fact, word has it that some of those who didn't participate this year are already out beating the bushes for a partner in anticipation of next year's tournament.

take title

The play was hard, long and hot, and fraught with injuries, but finally, at 10 p.m. June 24, a strong Winchester boys' soccer team was named state champions in the Under 19 division by the Massachusetts Youth Soccer Association.

Playing under the lights at the UMass Athletic Complex in Amherst, the talented team defeated Halifax, 2-1, and Georgetown, 1-0. Sunday morning brought its only defeat, 0-1, against Lexington.

The fourth game in the tournament, against a fiercely competitive AJAC (Chicopee) team, proved the team's mettle. Several of the team's key players were hurt, and their goalie, Steve Mueller, sustained injuries to his leg which resulted in his not being able to kick the ball. Nevertheless, he remained in goal the entire game. In the final play of the game, AJAC tied the game, 2-2.

The semi-finals went into overtime, and finally into a shootout. Mueller remained in goal, and

The Winchester Under-19 Men's Soccer Team won the MYSA State Championship Sunday night, defeating Halifax 2-1. Jubilant players celebrate after the hard-fought victory.

Winchester won, 3-2.

The team was led by Coach Stephen Reeve, only slightly older than the age limit himself and a current member of the Wheaton College soccer team. State champs include: Joe Armstrong, Mike Bosco, Josh

RECREATION

Summer concerts
at the Mill Pond

The John Penny Band, one of America's top country show bands, will lead off this year's summer concerts at the Mill Pond on Wednesday, July 11 beginning at 7 p.m.

The band is a self-contained show and dance group. Their repertoire consists of new and old country, country rock and oldies rock and roll. Comedy and audience participation are also included in their stage show. The band is called upon on numerous occasions to back up major Nashville artists and at times the artists themselves ask for the group. The band pleases young as well as the young at heart. They have been seen locally on the Good Day TV show and on the Evening Magazine TV show as well as on many other New England television programs.

Bring a blanket or chair, get set to relax and hum along to this exciting musical presentation. In case of inclement weather, the concerts will be in the Town Hall Auditorium.

A new addition this year will be picnic suppers, snacks and soft drinks prepared by Pari's Specialty Foods of Winchester and available at the Mill Pond. Picnic suppers must be ordered by 11 a.m. the day of the concert. They may be picked up at the concert. The cost of the suppers is $6. Other snacks will be available at the Mill Pond.

Gymnastics program

Children ages 2 through 5 can develop gymnastic skills on the balance beam, bars, and mats at the Gymnastics Camp. This is an age-appropriate, low-key approach to a sport which enhances coordination, strength, and flexibility. The two-week programs are held at the McCall Jr. High gym. Session 2 begins July 10 to 19; and Session 3, July 24 to Aug. 2.

Registration for these programs is now taking place. For further information, call the Recreation Department, 721-7125.

Summer aerobics

Join the summer session of aerobic exercise. Classes will be held in an air-conditioned facility at The Christopher Columbus Club, 15 Raymond Place, Winchester. Beginning July 10, this six week class meets Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. There is a $36 fee for the class.

This cardiovascular fitness program consists of warm-up exercises, aerobic workouts and cool down routines. Teenagers and adults, both male and female are invited to participate. To register or for more information, please call the Winchester Recreation Department at 721-7125 or Judy Whitney at 729-1599.

COMING EVENTS

Minuteman Tech offers SAT class

An SAT Verbal Preparation course is being offered at Minuteman Tech Summer School. This course prepares high school sophomores, juniors and seniors for the verbal portion of the SAT and PSAT. Students learn proven strategies that may lead to score gains of between 60 and 170 points.

Three two week sessions are available: Session I, July 9 to 20, 12 to 3 p.m.; Session II, July 23 to Aug. 3, 8:30 to 1:30 a.m.; and Session III, July 23 to Aug. 3, 12 to 3 p.m.

When to guess, how to score and interpret test results are a few of the many questions that are answered. Participants gain proficiency in a multitude of techniques designed for solving the analogy and sentence completion test items. Strategies for answering the reading comprehension questions, which are most troublesome, are presented in depth. Intensive vocabulary development is also featured. Students become familiar with the words most commonly tested on the SAT and PSAT. Students take actual SAT's given previously, in conditions that simulate exam conditions. Through repeated practice individuals gain the confidence that enables them to perform at their highest level on the rigorous College Board exam.

The instructor, Roberta Wolman, has been teaching SAT preparation classes for more than 15 years. Currently, she is a full-time reading and learning disabilities specialist in Lexington. Previously, Wolman taught at Boston University and served as a consultant and author in the field of Education.

For registration and information contact Minuteman Tech at (617) 861-7150, 8 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday-Friday. For more specific details about the course, contact the instructor in the evenings at (617) 395-8045.

SUMMER HAPPENINGS!

Welcome to Time Oldsmobile

Welcome to Time Oldsmobile. Time Oldsmobile commenced operation June 3, 1988, under the leadership of A. David Freedland. Time Oldsmobile succeeds Colonial Motors of Arlington, which was previously owned and operated by Louis Boucher for over 30 years.

Dave had been the General Manager of Bell Oldsmobile in Revere, after starting employment for the Bell brothers as bookkeeper when they were known as Bell Service, a franchised Studebaker dealer.

Prior to working for Bell he had graduated from the Bentley School of Accounting and Finance in 1948, and began his career in the automobile business, as an "on the job trainee" bookkeeper under the "G.I. Bill of Rights," a program available to World War II veterans. This training started at the location known as "Fabric Corner," which was, at that time, "Twombly Motors, Inc.," a DeSoto Plymouth dealership.

Time Oldsmobile was started with a staff consisting of Bernard Fox, General Manager, Ann Lee and Bertha MacNamee, office personnel, George Fleming, Tom Nestor, and John McNally sales department. John Murray, Service Manager; Walter Murphy, Parts Manager. Herb Farnsworth was part of our service department at that time and we are happy to say that he is still with us and has been a definite asset over the past.

Now that you have a capsulated history and background of Time Oldsmobile let me give you a little rundown of the present.

As of this writing, Paul Robichau and Mark Freedland are the management team aided by Joseph Silva and Chris Stevens in the service department. Jack Sordillo is parts manager. Ed Mulvey and Glen Richmond have the body shop under control with no job too small or too large. With the following in our service department, we have a Customer Satisfaction Index, rated Oldsmobile Division in the ninety percentile: Herbert Farnsworth, Arthur Clare, Rick Esposito, Steven Sordillo and Ralph McCarron.

The office is managed by Bonnie-Jo Bermudez aided by Helen Norris. New Oldsmobiles and used vehicles are sold by Tom Sylvester, Ron Fuschetti and Ted Fuschetti. If they are busy the house will help out.

Get in line with Chase Tire

What's a tire store without the accompanying alignment equipment? A nothing!

But when you add the best personal care repair facilities in the area you've got Chase Tire. Owner Jim Travers and his associate John Cooper run the best little 'garage' in Cambridge. Located in the Fresh Pond Shopping Mall, right behind Mall Discount Liquors, Jim has been in the tire and auto service business for over 20 years.

You'll find every brand name imaginable and if Jim doesn't have it — he'll get it and at a competitive price that you'll be most pleased with.

"We have something here that most alignment shops don't have," says Jim. "The alignment of your two front wheels is a thing of the past — today, to do the right job, you align all four wheels and we have that equipment."

So if you're in the market for quick, efficient tire care, Chase Tire should be your first stop.

Winters Hardware is different

A hardware store is a hardware store. A hardware store is a hardware store.

Well, maybe not, because at Winters Hardware, 84 Trapelo Rd., Belmont, in Cushing Sq., things are a little different. The difference is that Winters Hardware is also Winters Plumbing and Heating and they're located (and have been for 50 years) in the same building.

It's fun shopping at Winters because everything is so conveniently separated — the plumbing shop is out back in a room of its own, the kitchen accessories are in a room of their own and the paint, garden and hardware supplies are well-enough separated that you don't find yourself tripping over other customers.

Looking for friendly advice on a do-it-yourself or home repair project — just ask Paul Winters — if he doesn't have the answer, one of his assistants will. Got a lamp that needs rewiring — bring it to Winters. Storm windows and screens — march right down stairs to that department. If you don't go out of this store with a smile on your face, we'll be surprised.

Andrews Decorating puts you there

As the expression goes — "Ya hadda be there" — and be there you can with Benjamin Moore's new Video Color Planner to be seen at Andrews Decorating Center, 3 Cushing Ave., Cushing Sq., Belmont. (See the ad in this week's Summer Savers.) On a color computer screen you pick a pre-programmed house (there are 32 choices) that most closely resembles your home. You then "paint" your house from over 1800 beautiful contemporary custom or ready-mixed colors. Don't like the trim color against the major house color? Change it! "Get the picture before you paint," says Bob Andrews. Color selections have never been easier than at Andrews Decorating.

Get into Creative Comfort for life

Although moving their manufacturing facilities in July, (not the store), Creative Comfort, 1010 Pleasant St., Belmont has been one of the few Belmont businesses involved in the actual construction of their product.

For the past six years, Creative Comfort, a furniture store, has been creating fine chairs, sofas and con-

Stay away from throw-away

We make permanent furniture that's comfortable, customized, and easy to re-cover in solid oak, mahogany or walnut

Most sofas look or feel worn fairly soon, and they cost so much to reupholster that it usually isn't worth it. By contrast, most Creative Comfort frames and suspensions are nearly indestructible (warranted 15 years), and one of these sofas costs only about $120-$200 to re-cover. You'll minimize disposal problems and waste, and save money in the long run, with this permanent furniture.

Many sizes, firmness, appearance options, and 2000 fabrics, sleepers and sectionals also. Non-bulky, and easy to disassemble. Sofas average $800-$1500. Call for free literature with prices. Closed Sun.-Mon. Est. 1970 vertibles. In a day of "built-in obsolescence," they take quite a different approach.

One need only look at the fine construction, materials and fabrics to understand how and why you are buying something for life! All furniture is constructed of sturdy oak, walnut or mahogany and the fine workmanship that every piece features is evident on closer examination.

Owner Don Mulenburg says, "We take great pride in knowing that your only reason for return will be to choose a new or different fabric ten or more years down the line." "Our repeat business is based on satisfaction with our 'permanent construction' and the desire to complement purchases already made."

We compliment ourselves," says Don, "on not having to worry about customer's complaints." The old expression "you get what you pay for" could not be more perfectly illustrated than in the fact that furniture purchased from Creative Comfort will withstand the test of time.

FROM THE ADVERTISERS

Stop in today and take a close look at craftsmanship and a variety of fabrics that would please the most discriminating buyer.

Knitting Box offers variety

The Knitting Box, 5 Cushing Ave., Belmont, (Cushing Square) is probably the smallest store in Belmont but you wouldn't know it by the stock which Fran Taylor carries.

Balls of knitting yarn of all kinds are stocked to the ceiling. "You have to have a variety," says Fran, "otherwise, you can't earn a reputation."

"Natural fibers are a large part of today's business and you would be amazed at the varieties one must carry to satisfy customers — when you multiply this by the number of colors that must be stocked you can see where I'm coming from."

"I guess I'd have to say that I'm the 'knitter's friend,'" says Fran, "as one must be thoroughly versed in every stitch that there is."

"You'd be amazed at the number of people who come in that have to be instructed on the start of a project, much less, the number of women (and men) who come in because they're stuck in the middle of a project or can't follow the pattern."

"That's my job and I'm finding that people from as far away as 50 miles are coming to the Knitting Box because they know that what they're looking for they'll find here with the friendly advice that goes with it."

Get it at A&A Rental

A&A Rental Company, 5 Lexington St., Belmont, along with their sister company, Equipment Rental, 101 N. Beacon Street, Watertown, are the largest tool and equipment rental organizations in the area.

Founder, Clark Tomassian, says that "tool rental" outfits such as his are looked upon as just that — "nothing more than a business where you can rent a drill or a rototiller."

"You would be amazed," said Clark, "at the number of people who come in here and see the party and function equipment we carry...Just the other day we 'catered' a function where we rented out five tables, 150 chairs, 600 glasses, a champagne fountain and table settings for 150." The father of the bride said he saved himself well over $200.

"The day of the 'do-it-yourselfer' is here to stay," said Clark, "particularly with home improvement costs being as high as they are...Tool and equipment rentals are still our mainstay and we have the experienced personnel to handle the right tool with a little advice."

Whalom Park summer fun center

When Whalom Park in Lunenburg opened its new Satellite Jet on June 3, it not only brought to 36 the number of rides in the Park, it also brought with it another piece of New England Amusement Park history.

Whalom first opened in 1893 as a deer park with picnic facilities on the shore of Lake Whalom. Over the years many parks have come and gone — but some of the traditions live on at Whalom Park.

The Satellite Jet was purchased in 1989 and put in place at Whalom at the close of the season. In keeping with Satellite Jet's name, it was out of this world. During the ride's first weekend debut, Milky Way candy bars were given out to the first 10,000 customers who took the Satellite Jet on a ride to the Milky Way.

When Benson's Animal Park closed in 1987, Whalom purchased two of its rides: the Fly-O-Plane and the Rock'n'Roll. The Fly-O-Plane was introduced for the 1988 season and the Rock'n'Roll for 1989.

Whalom Park has always offered traditional amusement park rides for the whole family. From the Comet Roller Coaster to the YoYo to the Waterslide, there is something to please and excite everyone. The younger set will discover a self-contained kiddie land as well as a train ride and the carousel.

Those who don't want to go for a ride can play on the 18 hole miniature golf course that decorates the center of the Park, test their throwing, tossing or shooting skills at the games, watch the different shows or just picnic or relax in the picnic groves that surround the midway. Whatever the preference, Whalom Park has what it takes to make an exciting and fun-filled summer day.

Whalom Park is open every day except Mondays. It is located on Route 13 in Lunenburg, just off Route 2, less than an hour's drive. General Admission is $3 and includes all the shows as well as the train ride. An all day ride pass is $11, reducing to $6 after 6 p.m. An all day kiddie land ride pass is $7. (All ride passes include general admission.) Parking is free and picnic baskets and picnickers are always welcome. Group rates and catered picnics are available for family, social and corporate groups up to 6,000 people. For information call (508)342-3707.

Reference refusals

With companies not giving recommendations for legal reasons, job hunters must take initiative

By Maureen McLellan

STAFF WRITER

Today's job hunters may find themselves caught in a vicious circle that starts when their former employers, increasingly fearful of lawsuits, refuse to give more than perfunctory "name, rank and serial number" references.

Such policies are nerve-racking for job seekers because companies of all kinds are now checking references more thoroughly than a few years ago when unemployment was low.

As one lawyer put it, companies that once hired anyone who could "breathe on a mirror" are now being deluged with employment inquiries and suddenly have the luxury of being picky.

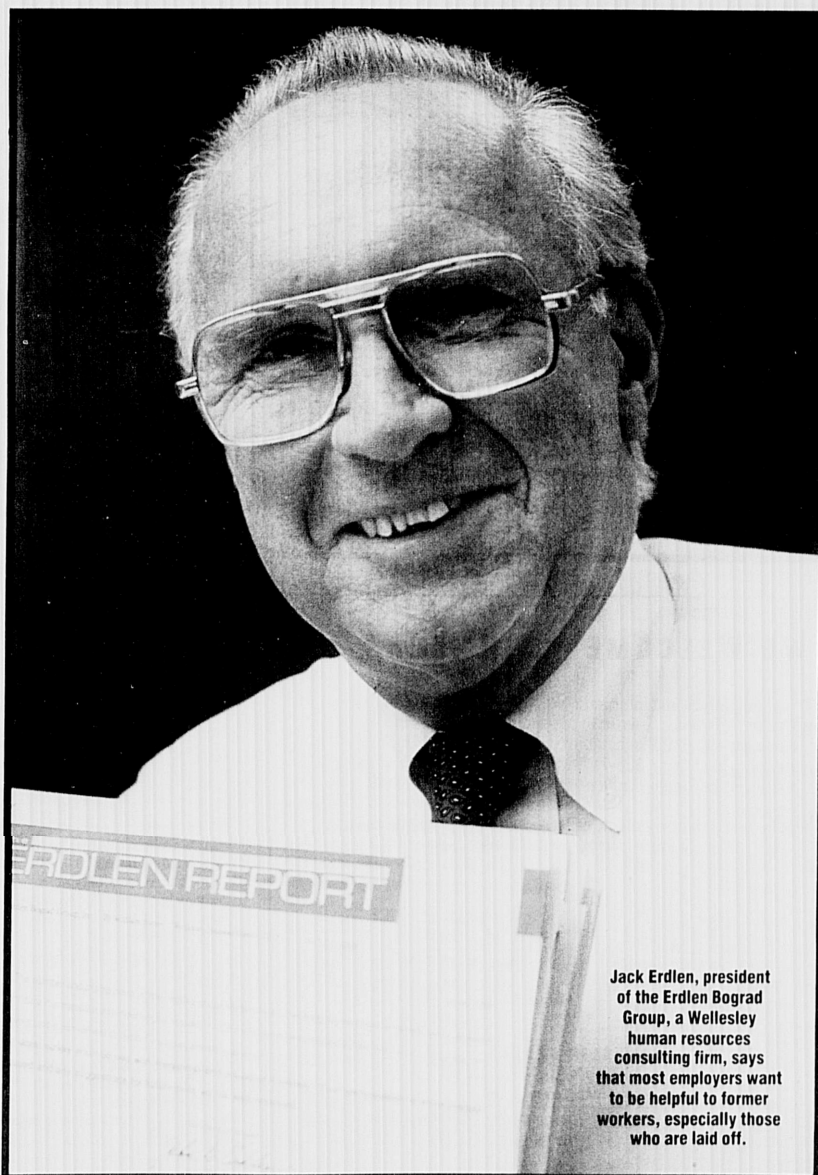

And with layoffs a fact of life in Massachusetts, said employment consultant Jack Erdlen, employers "want to make sure they're not getting someone else's deadwood."

But how can job hunters who have performed well on the job stand out in a crowded field when previous supervisors — worried about being sued for defaming former workers or invading their privacy — are prohibited from singing their praises?

Lawyers and human resource professionals offer a number of different tips on how to deal with the situation, including signing release forms and finding colleagues to speak informally with a prospective employer without the company's knowledge.

Most experts and personnel directors also say a frank discussion

Jack Erdlen, president of the Erdlen Bograd Group, a Wellesley human resources consulting firm, says that most employers want to be helpful to former workers, especially those who are laid off.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

To the Editor:

I was very glad to see your recent articles in the "Working" section of your paper addressing the issues of older workers. Your stories described some of the options some older workers have taken to deal with barriers to employment. Reading about the gentleman who started his own consulting business and the women who started their own office support service company have been very informative. Stories like these inform the public of the difficulties mature workers face in today's labor market.

Equally important was your article describing services for older workers provided by community agencies such as Operation Able. Articles like these perform two public services, making older workers aware of these services and reminding employers of the contribution mature workers can make to an organization.

Our agency, Jewish Vocational Service, has a number of programs specifically designed to help mature workers, including: Workers 55+, a job search workshop and placement assistance program for people 55 and over; Employment Service Program (ESP), a job-matching service for people 55 and over; and the 40+ Job Hunt Course, a job search workshop and placement assistance service for professionals 40 and over.

For more information about these programs, your readers can contact JVS Mature Worker Programs in Newton.

We Applaud your continuing service to the community in publicizing these programs and bringing the difficulties facing the mature worker to the attention of the public and the business community.

Sincerely,
Mark L. Shulman, employment specialist, JVS Workers 55+ Program, Waltham

Spare-time business opportunities

By the Associated Press

Spare-time business opportunities can be full-time fun and moneymakers, too, according to a new book, "The 100 Best Spare-Time Business Opportunities Today."

"There are plenty of part-time business opportunities that not only provide extra money but easily fit into your lifestyle," says Kevin Harrington, co-author of the book with Mark Cohen. "And they're for people already employed and students, retirees and homemakers."

More than 7 million Americans hold second jobs, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Harrington says the first steps in choosing a spare-time business career are akin to shopping: Can I afford it and do I like it?

A business opportunity shouldn't mean you have to drain your life's savings or mortgage your house to meet necessary capital, he says. "You don't want to earn extra money at the risk of getting yourself into serious debt."

The business also should be one that you like, is easy to learn and simple to run, says Harrington.

To help decide what is the best choice, he says, ask yourself these questions:

- Would it be enjoyable in your spare time?
- Does it match your skills, training, experience, or education?
- Can it fit into your everyday schedule?
- Will it be here today and gone tomorrow?
- Does it suit your budget?

Reference refusals

With companies not giving recommendations for legal reasons, job hunters need to take initiative

Reference checking. From 1 between a boss and employee, clarifying why a worker is leaving or being let go and nailing down how references will be handled, can avoid misunderstandings later.

Erdlen, president of the Erdlen Bograd Group, a Wellesley human resources consulting firm, said it is also important for employees being laid off or terminated not to lose their tempers before leaving.

"You don't want to burn your bridges by exploding," he said.

Erdlen pointed out that employers who are willing to give references don't always remember everything their employees did, making it important for workers to review accomplishments with their supervisors. And in addition to asking supervisors' permission to use them as references, employees should contact them after each positive interview to give details about the job prospect. This allows supervisors to think about which of the employees' skills should be highlighted to the prospective employer.

"What we will do sometimes to avoid problems is to have the employee agree on the actual language in a reference letter."

Laurence Donoghue
ATTORNEY

Some employers, such as Digital Equipment Corp., handle requests for in-depth references by giving former employees their personnel files to use at their discretion. Since these usually include performance evaluations and letters of recommendation, they can be extremely useful to prospective employers.

Erdlen further advises employees to sign release forms, allowing companies to divulge information in verbal or written references.

But lawyers say reference-checking is becoming a legal thicket and that many of the issues arising from it remain unclear. Laurence Donoghue, an attorney with Morgan, Brown & Joy who represents companies in employment disputes, said that while a release usually protects an employer from being sued for invasion of privacy,

Jack Erdlen holds a copy of his company's recent survey which asked nearly 400 New England companies about several issues related to reference checking. Erdlen found "very few" of the employers allow their supervisors to provide references for former employees. But about half said they will give letters of recommendation to departing workers. NEWS-TRANSCRIPT PHOTO BY ARTILLMAN it may not in a defamation or libel case.

Moreover, he said, many companies simply do not want to risk lawsuits and do not accept release forms from employees.

"What we will do sometimes to avoid problems is to have the employee agree on the actual language in a reference letter," said Donoghue.

Other questions are surfacing over whether employers can be sued for withholding negative information in a reference, to the detriment of a new employer or a customer or client of that employer.

As a result, the standard approach of most companies is to only give references through their personnel departments, confirming when and where employees worked. Some personnel managers will go so far as to say they would or would not hire the person back, but will not expand on that.

"That makes it very awkward. If I'm an employer, I want to have a more thorough reference than that," said Erdlen.

Ironically, Donoghue said, some companies with strict "no comment" reference policies also complain about difficulties in obtaining information about job candidates.

"It's a sign of the legal environment — that people are suit-happy," he said.

Ronald Glover, corporate personnel policy manager for Digital, the state's largest employer, said, "We find a lot of resistance" to requests for references.

He said such reluctance is understandable. "If you're a small company, the cost of litigation can be ruinous," said Glover. "We're heading down a road where employers are going to say less and less."

Erdlen's company recently conducted a survey of nearly 400 New England companies, asking them about several issues related to reference checking. Erdlen found "very few" of the employers allow their supervisors to provide references for former employees. But about half said they will give letters of recommendation to departing workers.

More than 72 percent of the respondents said they always conduct reference checks for salaried job candidates, and 65 percent indicated that non-salaried candidates are always screened carefully.

Erdlen said a positive note is that most employers want to be helpful to former workers, especially those who are laid off.

Jerry Haynesworth, director of personnel for Needham-based Interface, a producer of trade shows and conferences, agreed with this assessment. He said Interface does give references with some restrictions.

"We don't want in any way jeopardize a person's chances of getting another job," he said.

But to protect itself from legal problems, the company does not volunteer information in references, will not answer hypothetical questions and will not release salary information without a signed release from the employee, Haynesworth said.

He also said supervisors are advised to focus references on employees' job performances and to steer clear of personal comments based on opinion. Haynesworth said this is not just to avoid legal disputes, but to be fair to workers.

"We are all human and have our opinions," he said. "One environment may not be as good for a person as the next one."

Job Hunting STEP BY STEP

Looking for a job can be an exercise in frustration or an exciting challenge, depending on how it's approached. Planning your approach step by step can lead to a successful outcome.

1. The Resume

An employer will get many responses to an advertisement. He or she often will review resumes first to decide which applicants are to be interviewed.

A resume is an introduction. It should be concise (one page if possible) and easy to read. Avoid irrelevant information such as age, height, weight, family details and detailed military information (date, highest rank, and brief description of responsibilities are enough.)

There are two primary ways to prepare a resume. The form used may be based on the information to be presented.

Chronological ▶ Resume

This resume is prepared with experience listed in sequence starting with the current or last position and working back. This is especially good if the work background is consistent and shows good progression from early jobs to the present.

◀ Functional Resume

When there is a variety of unrelated job experiences or when different skill areas need to be emphasized, the best resume format to use is the functional resume. In this format, the information is presented in a way that makes it easy for the employer to pick out your area of expertise.

2. Personal Assessment

What can I do? What do I want to do? What do I do best?

These are questions that need to be answered. You can't sell yourself until you know your product well! The period between jobs is a good time to analyze strengths, weaknesses, likes and dislikes.

Here is a simple project:

List all the work duties you have had in the past. The list probably will be varied and long. That's fine. Add anything that comes to mind, no matter how small.

Now, highlight all the things on the list you really enjoy doing. Next, check all the things you were successful doing. Ideally, there will be some overlapping.

Now, list all the skills required to do the highlighted tasks.

DUTIES

order parts
deliver parts
arrange for courtesy pickups
repair transmissions
greet customers
operate forklift
✓ do inventory
✓ operate computer to monitor parts flow
do monthly sales totals
sell additional services
✓ repair warehouse equipment
pack and ship orders
✓ do monthly forecast
keep customer records
prepare sales target lists
supervise loaders

SKILLS

use catalog/fill out forms
driving/map reading
scheduling/communication
mechanical communication driving
math math/typing
math communications/sales
mechanics
detail/manual dexterity
math
organizational organizational
communication/leadership

What this shows you is that your favorite duties are the ones that require math skills. Your strongest areas were math and mechanics.

This understanding will make it easier to explain your strengths to an interviewer. The jobs that are geared toward using these skills would be the most suitable and satisfying.

3. Research

Knowing about the company with which you are interviewing will set you apart from most of the others being interviewed. Spending time to find out about the services, products, market area, primary concerns, focus and financial history will make you a concerned and knowledgeable applicant.

Once an interview is scheduled, find out as much as you can. There are some tools in the library that make getting information easier than you may imagine. Check:

- Standard and Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives
- The Thomas Register of American Manufacturing and Thomas Register File
- Moody's (lists more than 20,000 corporations)
- The Million Dollar Directory and The Career Guide by Dun and Bradstreet offer information on companies in alphabetical order, by career field and geographical area. On microfiche is another listing of local business. Check with your local librarian if you need help. There are many other books, magazines and even videos and a computer available for information gathering.

Another good source is the chamber of commerce. Chambers will have not only a list of all chamber members, with product and service information, but a list of manufacturers.

With the information you've accumulated, you can ask questions relevant to that company. During your interview, mention what you've learned. The interviewer will be impressed with your interest. Do your homework. It will pay off.

Job Services

There are free job services available through the Mass. Dept. of Employment and Training. Some "job centers" in this area include:

Framingham: 46 Park St. 508-875-5237.
Norwood: 17 Center St. 762-9450.
Roslindale: 980 American Legion Highway 469-4620.
Waltham: 119 School St. 899-9340.

Each office provides all or most of the following services free of charge:

- Job search workshops on interviewing and resume writing.
- Job referrals and an automated job list system. Some 25,000 companies in Massachusetts list jobs with the state.
- Use of resource office equipment for a job search, such as fax and copy machines, personal computers and telephones.
- Employment counseling, career assessment and skill transferability assessment.
- Written reference materials on jobs and industries.
- Labor market information and data on occupational trends. A reference document titled "90 jobs for the 1990s" is now available.
- Each job center also has information about career services provided by local agencies, colleges and libraries in the service area.

4. The Interview

Don't underestimate first impressions. Being properly dressed won't get you the job, but being poorly dressed can certainly cause you to lose it.

It's often hard to know exactly what is appropriate for a particular company. For a professional position, it's safe to wear a suit. For other positions, if you are familiar with the company, dress as people do in that position. If you're not sure, play it safe. Dress slightly more formally than what the position calls for. Example: When interviewing for a warehouse position that probably requires jeans, wear slacks and a nice sport shirt.

Get there early. This will allow you time to fill out an application and relax a few minutes. It also will give you a chance to visit with the receptionist. One often can get a real feeling for the office environment and its mood. Are the people cheerful? Do they seem to enjoy being there? Do you get a feeling that they are an efficient group?

When called in, stand up, smile and shake hands. YOU'RE ON! Most interviewers want you to be comfortable and will help you relax. They want you to be able to be at your best.

Now you can go into detail about the information in your resume. You've analyzed your strengths; tie them in with your accomplishments that are examples of those strengths. Personal information is OK because it gives a better picture of who you are, but keep it brief. Be positive about past jobs. You don't have to belittle others to sell yourself. If there has been a problem with a past job that needs to be discussed, do it in a factual manner and without emotion.

Interviewing actually should be an exchange of information. Just as the employer wants to know your experience and what you can bring to the company, you will want to know about the company and the position available. This exchange of information is critical if there is to be a proper fit. Use your judgment about how and when to ask questions. You don't want the interviewer to feel interrogated. You may want to ask some of the questions listed below.

Questions to ask the employer

- What is the last person who had this job doing?
- What are the job responsibilities?
- What skills are most important for the job?
- What kind of training is provided?
- What is the company's history?
- What are the company's goals?
- Where does the job lead?
- What is the salary range?
- What benefits are offered?
- Does the company have a personnel and procedures manual?
- What are the strengths and weaknesses of the supervisor? (Don't be afraid to ask.)

- What is the management style of the company?

Questions to ask yourself

- Do I understand the job responsibilities?
- Is the job location within a comfortable driving radius?
- Does the personality of the company fit with mine?
- Does the position fit with my goals?
- If moving to another location, does the change in salary fit with the difference in the cost of living?

5. Follow-up

When the interview is over, the interviewing process is still incomplete.

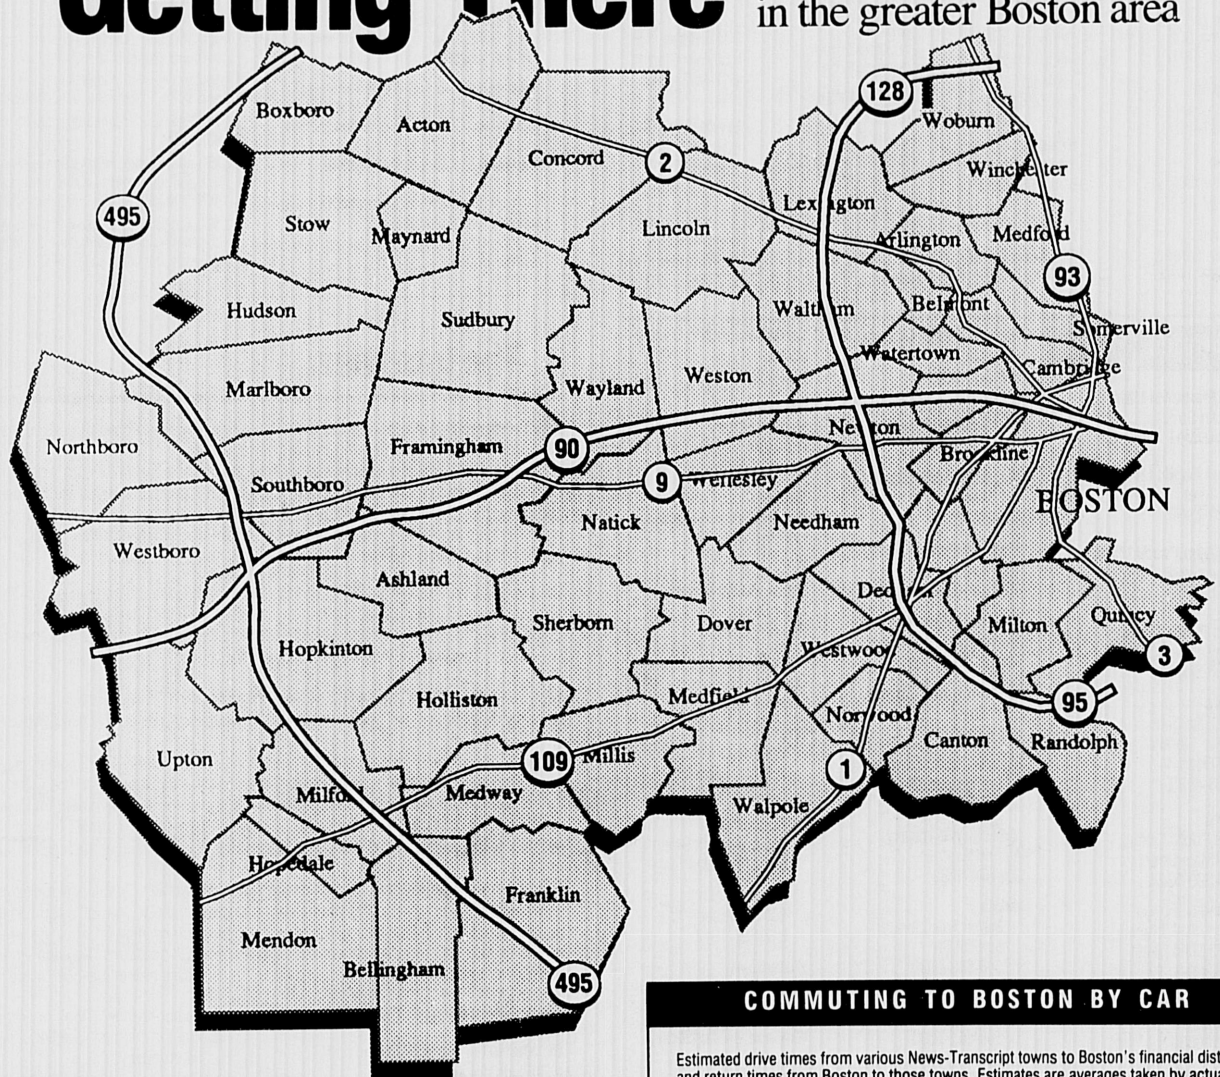

A thank-you note should be sent to the interviewer. You may include something you have forgotten to mention during the interview. If you don't have anything to add, restate your reason for feeling you are a good candidate for the position. Emphasize again your interest in the job.

Getting the job you want requires planning, determination and follow through. With the proper effort, the reward will be a fulfilling part of your life, a great job.

Cancer benefits extended

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

With new legislation signed into law last week, firefighters across the state will find it easier to receive disability pensions if they are stricken with cancer.

While in the past, the firefighter or firefighter's family had to prove the cancer was job-related, the new legislation requires municipalities to prove the illness was not caused in the line of duty.

Although the law exists as a state-mandated program, legislators have circumvented a provision of Proposition 2½, which says the state must pay for all new programs it mandates. In this case, cities and towns in the Commonwealth will foot the bill.

According to Winchester Firefighters' Union President Kenneth Duffy, a study by the state Department of Public Health, which stated firefighters had high incidence of cancer, helped push the bill through (See CANCER, page 12A)

Police seek suspect in stabbing

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

Police are seeking a suspect in a stabbing incident that took place in the early morning of July 4.

According to police reports, a 40-year-old Revere man was locking the door of La Patisserie, where he works at night, at approximately 12:30 a.m. when he was approached by a male. Police reports indicated the individual came up behind the Revere man and told him to give the latter his money.

When he said he didn't have any, the Revere man reportedly said he felt "a punch" to his lower back and observed the man running down Church Street toward Rangeley Road.

The man told police the assailant was a white man in his mid-20s with brown hair in a crew cut, reports said.

Three-year battle ends with contract

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

After three years of sometimes heated debate and deliberations, the Cable Advisory Committee and Continental Cablevision have reached an agreement for a five-year contract for cable television in Winchester.

The committee held fast to its requirement that Continental pay legal fees incurred during negotiations, but gave that up in an effort to bring negotiations to a close and avoid additional legal fees.

The Cable Advisory Committee will now make a recommendation to the Board of Selectmen, the issuing authority to which they serve in an advisory capacity. Continental's license to operate in Winchester expires Sept. 15.

Deliberations surrounding the contract were mostly caught up in technical and legal jargon, but it was payment of legal fees that kept the two groups at bay for the last few weeks.

After hammering out minor changes to the contract at the committee's Monday night meeting, Member Peter Svahn asked Continental representatives to explain their position on paying the committee's legal fees. The committee has retained the services of attorney Howard Horton during negotiations, a service which will cost an estimated $20,000.

Continental representatives told the committee two weeks ago they had said from the beginning of negotiations Continental would not pay the town's legal fees. At that meeting, Svahn urged Continental rep-

Little, Big Winter may get a face-lift

By ELLEN FANNING

Big and Little Winter ponds will get a face-lift in the future as Conservation Commissioners proceed with a plan to treat the two areas with herbicides to reduce overgrown algae and vegetation.

Commissioners met with Daniel Helsel, an aquatic biologist with Aquatic Control Technology, Inc. of Northboro, at their July 9 public hearing. Helsel will head up the restoration project, spraying a chemical known as Sonar into the ponds at a proportion of one part per million.

The ponds, said Helsel, are currently in "rough shape." Algae is three to four feet thick and duckweed and lily pads are a constant nuisance. The treatment, which is "slow-acting," will kill off the unwanted vegetation in 30 to 60 days, said Helsel.

Helsel added that the minimum safety measurement allowed for drinking water is 1.5 parts of Sonar per million of water. Therefore, the levels in the ponds will be completely safe, said Helsel.

Signs will be posted however, every 100 to 200 feet around the ponds to restrict fishing, swimming and boating on the ponds for three days after the application.

A chemical known as copper sulphate might also be used on the ponds at a ratio of .3 parts per million with drinking water minimum safety measurements at 30 parts per million.

Although the half dozen neighbors in attendance at the public hearing were not opposed to the action, Forest Street resident Daniel Chane drafted a letter to the Commission outlining his concerns with the use of chemicals at the ponds.

The cost of the treatment is $5,000 for both ponds, money which is taken from the Department of Public Works budget. Personnel and

Evana Maggiore aids in battle of fashion wars

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

A closet audit may sound like a bunch of IRS-types questioning you about the last time you wore that $150 sweater you bought on impulse or why you need your 10 pairs of black pumps — but really, it's not.

A closet audit, as well as a color analysis, wardrobe plan, style analysis or total make-over can be fun, according to Evana Maggiore, Winchester resident and image consultant.

Maggiore is well-remembered by her customers for her clothing stores in Winchester, Scituate and Falmouth. But after 10 years in the retail fashion business and with the arrival of her daughter, Jacquelyn, now nine months, Maggiore decided to switch gears and steer herself into the world of consulting.

"I love what I'm doing now," said Maggiore in a recent interview at her elegant in-home office. "I have no overhead so I can be flexible with fees."

And for anyone who has made what Maggiore calls a "shopping mistake" or experienced "fitting room failure," the ability to save time and money when it comes to clothes sounds like a miracle.

Maggiore's own style reflects the pulled-together, fashionably casual look she helps her customers achieve. By identifying a client's body shape, facial structure and complimenting colors, Maggiore can guide shoppers to the right investment in clothing, haircuts, make-up — even eyeglasses.

Image consulting services can save a client time and money by limiting the endless hours in the fitting room with no luck and the endless array of clothes bought on impulse or without knowing your body shape, color or style.

Maggiore relishes the person-to-person contact she gets with the consulting end of the business and says the only thing she misses about retail is her customers.

"[The business] allows me to use my experience and expertise and have fun doing it," said Maggiore.

One of the areas Maggiore works on is called non-verbal communicating and Maggiore believes how you look will directly affect how others perceive you. Hence, a change in the look is a change in the perception, she says.

"In order to get people to listen to what we say, we have to give them the right messages," says Maggiore.

And personal style of course, is a major component in the total look. Maggiore stresses the need to "know yourself." Personal style, says Maggiore, should reflect how you look, how you feel and how you live.

But Maggiore says image consulting is not just for corporate warriors climbing the ladder. Her services can give color and clothing options to anyone who thinks they may want a change.

From dramatic, to sporty, from classic to romantic, Maggiore says everyone has a distinct look or a combination of looks that suits them. Some of her clients walk away with the analysis information and tuck it away for future use, while others dive right into the new look.

Maggiore earned a degree from the University of Massachusetts in fashion and marketing. Following graduation, she went into Filene's executive training program and then moved on to work for a small clothing store on the Cape. When the owner brought his daughter in to replace her, Maggiore decided to start out on her own and founded the first of her successful Evana shops.

How not to invite burglaries

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

While summer activities draw many people from their homes on vacation, the "ghost-town" days of Winchester can also prove to be a field day for burglars.

Detective Lieutenant James Pierce suggests when residents pack-up for vacation, they should include on their checklists a few items to keep burglars at bay.

First, homeowners should contact police headquarters when they plan to be away. Police keep a "house book" that makes officers on patrol aware that a house is vacant. Sector police will often "make an extra pass" through a neighborhood to check on houses that are empty.

Domino's sponsors safety seminar

The Greater Boston area Domino's Pizza stores sponsor a presentation by driver safety speaker Lt. Pete Collins in Wellesley, on Saturday, July 14. His "So You Think You're Going To Live Forever" presentation include some of the Lieutenant's most emotional moments experienced during his 18-year career with the State of Mississippi Highway Patrol.

Collins' message packs an emotional punch that drives home the importance of being a responsible and a safety conscious person. He has delivered his message to more than 6.5 million people throughout the United States and Canada. Lt. Collins has two nationally distributed videos titled: "If You Could See What I've Seen" and "Riding With Nothing But The Radio On".

Domino's Pizza has invited all Domino's Pizza franchisees, store managers, delivery drivers and inside personnel to attend the driver safety presentation. The Domino's Pizza store in Winchester will be closed Saturday afternoon, July 14, so all employees can attend.

If you or your local group are interested in attending this important presentation, contact Chris Rogers at 776-1111 for more information.

POLICE LOG

Sunday, July 8

11:30 p.m.

Officer Lawrence Hill was called to investigate a breaking and entering in a Swanton Street apartment. On arrival, the officer spoke with the man who rented the apartment. The resident told police he believed his ex-girlfriend had taken a screen off a window and entered the house taking several items, some belonging to his new girlfriend.

The ex-girlfriend however, told police she took just one item that was hers and left furniture and clothing that were also hers in the apartment.

The man asked police that a Winchester Police inspector speak with his ex-girlfriend regarding the incident.

Winchester Police responded to a one-car accident at Chesterford Road and Chesterford Terrace involving a 47-year-old Ginn Road woman.

The woman told police she had reached for something in her car and lost control of the vehicle, reports said. The car then veered into a fire hydrant and tree on Chesterford Road. The accident caused damage to the entire vehicle, said police reports.

Saturday, July 7

7 p.m.

Officer Kurt Ellis was monitoring traffic at McCall Junior High School when he spotted a vehicle with an expired registration sticker dated April, 1990.

The officer pulled the car over at Washington Street and Harvard Avenue and the driver verbally identified himself as a 35-year-old Medford man. The driver did not have his license or registration, said police reports.

A warrant check revealed the man had an active warrant felony from Boston Police Department for assault with a dangerous weapon plus additional warrants.

The registration status came back expired and non-renewable due to parking tickets. The driver did however, have an application for registration on his person and a purchase slip for the vehicle dated May, 1990.

With assistance from Officer Jonathan Dean and Sargent John Guarente, the man was placed under arrest and taken to the station. The man was later released to the custody of Boston Police.

The driver was also cited for operating an unregistered, uninsured vehicle and attaching plates, said police reports.

Thursday, July 5

1:50 p.m.

Officers Kenneth Green, Steven Fields and Lt. James Pierce investigated a possible breaking and entering on Harrison Avenue.

The officers observed a pane of glass had been smashed to the left of the front door but entrance had not been gained through this or the back door because of deadbolts on both doors, said police reports.

There was however, an unlocked window that had been pushed open. A search conducted with the owners' daughter showed that several oriental rugs were missing from the premises.

The investigation continues.

Apples for the students

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

If a register tape slipped from your grasp while loading groceries into your car this past year — a Winchester school student probably snatched up the slip before it hit the ground.

Because from September, 1989 to this past March, pink register tapes from Stop and Shop and Bradlees were as good as gold to six Winchester schools.

These companies donated $7.5 million worth of Apple computer equipment based on the dollar amount of register tape sales collected by a total of 1,402 schools in Massachusetts. The "Apples for the Students" program enabled the schools to "purchase" computers, printers and software this month to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Stop and Shop.

Jacquelyn Houston, principal of the Agape Christian Academy in Winchester, said the three computers, printer and nine pieces of software her school earned through the program, "will tremendously enhance our computer curriculum."

The Agape school, which is a ministry of the Faith Fellowship, brought in more than $255,000 worth of register tapes. "It's exciting because we were a part of something we stood in total agreement on. We set a goal and went beyond it," said Houston.

Houston said contests between classes for the most money in register tapes and regular progress reports from the school's parents association kept the whole student body, parents and church members rolling toward their goal.

And a pizza party was enjoyed by a fifth-grade class, whose members brought in the most money in register tapes, said Houston.

At St. Mary's School, Publicity Committee Chairperson Rosemary Crowley said that school brought in

$125,000 worth of register tapes and purchased a disk drive and Apple IIC Color System.

The computer equipment, said Crowley, "was very much needed." And she added that the whole student body and school community "came on strong" to meet their school's goal.

"[The equipment] will provide much more hands-on time for the students," said Crowley. "It's a real boon."

And she added that the color monitor is "a great learning tool" for younger students who are drawn to the exciting color graphics on the computer.

The Bartlett School as well, was able to buy four pieces of educational software through the Stop and Shop program. And three of Winchester's public schools, Lincoln, McCall and Muraco, saved enough tapes to purchase a total of 35 pieces of new software.

Muraco Principal Andrea Purcell said her school was able to save $98,772 worth of register tapes through the strong effort of the school's parents association under the direction of President Susan Haskell.

The new software will aid students on each grade level with grammar, word problems and math as well as other subjects, said Purcell. "We wouldn't have had much money to buy software this year," said Purcell. "This was a huge help."

Most schools have already received their equipment this spring and are cataloging the software and powering up the computers for use this fall.

Police offer anti-theft hints

Also, leaving lights on timers, making sure the alarm system is working properly and asking a neighbor to take in the mail will dissuade would-be criminals. Pierce also advises residents to stop newspapers before leaving — and of course, lock up.

"But the best alarm systems are neighbors," said Pierce. "Get to know your neighbors. There's hardly ever a time when no one in a neighborhood is home."

Neighbors are often the best defense against break-ins as well as being sure-fire eyewitnesses if the criminals are brought to trial.

But once the crime has been committed, police must use every piece of evidence available. Eyewitness descriptions and fingerprints are certainly the best evidence, say police.

And prybars, crowbars or any other burglary tool used to force entry into a home can also be traced at the state police lab. The marks left behind on the windowpanes and door jams by these tools can actually pinpoint the specific tool used for the job.

Also, when a criminal attempts to pawn items stolen from a home, the police can usually track the items. For this purpose, Pierce advises that residents mark valuables with their social security number. In this case, even if it can't be proven that the criminal was at the scene, police can arrest the individual for receiving stolen property, he said.

A stencil marker for engraving items can be borrowed from the public library, said Pierce. Also, photographing valuable items could help police to track the objects if they are stolen.

"The more information we have the more likely the chance we'll come up with something," added Pierce.

And Pierce encourages neighbors to make the call to the police if they see something fishy going on. "If [neighbors] see absolutely anything suspicious, we'd rather find out it's an unfounded call than have to investigate a break-in later on," said Pierce.

Pierce added that Winchester Police will talk with groups of residents who are interested in forming neighborhood watch groups.

Selectmen, School Committee meet

Members of the Board of Selectmen and School Committee members meet Monday, July 16 at 8 p.m. in the Winchester Room at Town Hall.

Town Moderator John Sullivan will chair the meeting.

Members of the two groups agreed to hold quarterly meetings to discuss goals and budgetary matters. The meeting is open to the public, but is not a public hearing.

Selectmen hold their regular meeting at 6 p.m. in the selectmen's meeting room in Town Hall July 9.

LIBRARY LINES

Winchester Public Library Director G. Matthew Sperber, left, talks with State Representative Paul Casey at a reception held in Sperber's honor June 24.

Library Director G. Matthew Sperber is wished well as he heads to New York by secretaries Marilyn Goldthwait and Naomi Ferguson at a reception held June 24 in Sperber's honor.

Reception honors library director

The Trustees of the Winchester Public Library held a reception June 24, at the Library to honor G. Matthew Sperber, who is resigning to accept the position of director of the Hudson Valley Library System in New York. Chairman of the Board Lane McGovern praised Sperber's accomplishments, including his role in helping to form the Minuteman Library Network.

Following McGovern's speech, Selectman William O'Leary presented Sperber with a certificate from the Board of Selectmen. Representatives of the Trustees, the Friends, the staff, and the public came to offer their best wishes to Sperber in his new position.

Wings and Things

The Library's Wings And Things Summer Reading Program for children will present two exciting programs in the coming week. On Tuesday, July 17 at 3:30 p.m., the multi-talented Tom and Alice Schaefer will present "Origami With Wings," a workshop in Japanese paper-folding for ages 8 and up. The children will make a basket and fill it with origami animals. Children who attended the Library's 1989 Summer Reading Program will remember their "Schaefer Shenanigans Puppets." This program is limited to 25 children.

On Thursday, July 19 at 3:30 p.m., the science fiction movie Star Wars will be shown for all ages. Directed by George Lucas, Star Wars was the most influential science fiction movie of its day, with highly praised special effects. It was nominated for Academy Awards for Best Picture, Best Script, and Best Direction. Alec Guinness was nominated for Best Supporting Actor, and John Williams won an Academy Award for Best Musical Score.

Free tickets for these activities can be picked up in the children's room. To pick up tickets, children must be registered in the Wings And Things Summer Reading Program.

The next Evening Family Story Time for two to six-year-olds and their families will be held on Monday, July 23 at 6:30 p.m. in the Children's Room. No registration is required.

For information on children's activities at the Library, please call the Children's Room at 721-7140.

ABOUT TOWN

Be a volunteer

for Red Cross

You can be a "Neighbor helping your Neighbor" by volunteering for the American Red Cross of Mass. Bay.

Drivers for the growing transportation service are badly needed if this service is to continue. The demand for rides for medical appointments now exceeds the number of drivers available. Basic job requirements are a valid driver's license and a good driving record. The candidate also must be at least 21 years old, have at least three years of driving experience and be able to work with people.

If you can help as a driver in our medical transportation program, please call Janice Wilson, Regional Director of Volunteer Services, at 665-1351, or 508-531-2280.

Summer aerobics

Please join us for the summer session of aerobic exercise. Classes will be held in an air-conditioned facility at The Christopher Columbus Club, 15 Raymond Place, Winchester. Beginning July 10, this six week class meets Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. There is a $36 fee for the class.

This cardiovascular fitness program consists of warm-up exercises, aerobic workouts and cool down routines. Teenagers and adults, both male and female are invited to participate. To register or for more information, please call the Winchester Recreation Department at 721-7125 or Judy Whitney at 729-1599.

Senate approves

enhanced 911 network

The Massachusetts Senate last week gave its approval to a plan to create the largest statewide Enhanced 911 system in the country. An Enhanced 911 emergency calling network will use state-of-the-art technology to transmit a caller's name and address to public safety personnel as soon as a 911 call is made. Thus help can be dispatched much more quickly in case of emergency.

The legislation would also ensure better telephone access for the handicapped. Telephone companies would be required to provide free Telecommunications Devices for the Deaf (TDDs) to the hearing impaired who cannot afford such equipment. Under the proposed law, special amplified handsets would also be required in 25 percent of the state's coin-operated telephones.

State Senator Sal Albano (D-Somerville), a strong proponent of the measure, praised its passage. "At no cost to our communities, this important legislation will help public safety officials speed emergency aid to where it is most needed."

United Way applauds Visiting Nurse service

For the second consecutive year, Visiting Nurse and Community Health, Inc. was commended for demonstrating excellence in governance, administration, programs and services by the Review Committee of United Way.

United Way of Massachusetts Bay, once again, allocated $25,000 targeted specifically for use for free care home health services.

According to United Way, Visiting Nurse and Community Health, Inc. has continued to demonstrate excellent, responsive, comprehensive nursing services with both their home-based health care of the sick and disabled along with community involvement with preventive health services which include blood pressure screenings, diabetes blood pressure screenings, the Senior Health Monitor Program and counseling, along with the expansion of a new teen parenting program.

The United Way contribution helps Visiting Nurse and Community Health, Inc. meet one quarter of its health program needs and foundations and the community help constitute the remaining difference in the ever expanding health care insurance deficit.

Waligur work chosen for annual conference

Winchester resident Stephen Andre Waligur has been chosen by The Pittsburgh New Music Ensemble as one of 10 composers whose music will be premiered in August as part of their annual composer conference.

His newest work entitled "Earth Tones", scored for chamber orchestra, will be conducted by David Stock, composer in residence for The Pittsburgh Symphony. Waligur is co-director of the Winchester Concert Series and is on the staff at the Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church.

Betty Vallee

Vallee exhibits work at hospital

Born and raised in Montreal, Canada, Betty Vallee moved to Winchester with her husband and two daughters, in 1959. After graduating from business college she was accepted, on scholarship, to Ecole des Beaux Arts, in Montreal, where she studied charcoal drawing and clay modeling.

Soon after her arrival in Winchester, Vallee joined the Studio Guild and worked with King Coffin on her first oils. Later, she continued with oil and clay modeling at the Cambridge Adult Centre and studied with Arvanites at the DeCordova Museum.

In the seventies the theatre took all of her spare time, as she found herself on stage two or three times yearly.

In 1981, Vallee an animal lover, discovered William Velmure, a well known wild-life artist and worked under his tutelage in water-colours for five years. Since that time she has been studying with two popular local artists: Mary Jacobs (pastel portraits) and Carolyn Latanisian (water-colours). Vallee has also painted in several Maine workshops with the renowned Don Stone and Nancy Howell, water-colourists.

A member of the Winchester and Reading art associations, Vallee has exhibited at various banks, Hospitals and gallery shows.

A display of some of her work will hang in the Winchester Hospital coffee shop for July and August. The public is welcome.

Two participate

in summer theatre

Two Winchester residents are performing in Our Town and Cabaret at the Chapel Hill-Chauncy Hall Summer Theatre School in Waltham.

Margaret Behnke and Alec Duffy are performing in the two shows as well as taking classes in the theatre arts.

Albano's budget

amendments successful

In the early morning hours of its day long budget debate, the state Senate last week approved an amendment offered by Senator Sal Albano (D-Somerville) increasing state fuel assistance funds by $5 million.

The money is distributed primarily to elderly residents living on a limited, fixed income, unable to pay costly fuel bills during the winter months. Albano also succeeded in restoring nearly $450,000 in funds for the Commonwealth Literacy Corps, a statewide program that trains volunteers to teach reading and writing.

The Senator cited his success in the budget process as "evidence that as an effective legislator, I was able to really deliver for essential state programs that I simply refuse to see dismantled." Albano noted that the full Senate also supported his effort to add $53,000 to the Office for Children for special education advocacy work, allowing better and more cost-effective placement of special needs children.

He also led an unsuccessful Senate fight to restore funding for the Turning 22 program, which provides education, job skills, and support services for mentally retarded persons after their 22nd birthday. Albano pledged to continue working for funding of this important program as the budget is finalized over the next two weeks.

Brown & Stanton block gets facelift

By DAN CHANE
Special to The Star

On a recent Saturday morning, as Erich Worthington tended the flower beds in the square, more than a little interest was generated on Main Street as townies gathered to mark the passing of one of the great architectural abominations of Winchester.

The cement facade plastered onto the street floor of the Brown and Stanton Block had finally come down revealing the smudged and battered integrity of 110 years.

The observer noticed Helen Pottak busily recording the event with her camera — and Bill Thomas pulled a memory or two from the exposed details as we walked past the old landmark.

The Brown and Stanton Block has been the most commanding mercantile building in the center since its erection in 1879 by Doctor George P. Brown and Grocer Jacob C. Stanton, Jr. For almost 100 years a drug store operated in the rounded main section of the building at Main and Mount Vernon Streets.

The late Jim Panaligan, former Editor of The Star and lifelong town history buff could easily rattle off all the different pharmacies at that location — G.P. Brown, Drug-gist, then Covell's, A.B. Grover's, F.N. Abair's and Allen's Pharmacies were there in succession — followed by Bill Hevey, Bill Sheehan and Jack Collins and Tom Purtle. The old building seemed to lose its place upon the demise of its last pharmacy.

J.C. Stanton also set up his grocery at the southerly end of the building and boasted a completely covered "drive in" to allow free passage of delivery teams clear around the rear of the building via the alley.

J.W. Thompson, Carter and Young and Fells Market assumed the business in succession before the last of them — Winchester Provision — arrived on the scene in the late 1930's.

Upstairs, a good deal of Winchester's victorian social life was played out — in Harmony Hall — an area which was later used by the William Parkman Masonic Lodge. The Winchester Public Library was here, too, located in one room over J.C. Stanton's store.

Miss Cora A. Quimby — Winchester's Librarian Extraordinaire — once recalled having to take a chair from the library and climb up on it to snuff out the kerosene lamp lighting the stairs to the street — return the chair to the library, lock the door and go down the darkened stairs to the street. "One night I met a drunken man coming up the stairs in the dark", she said years ago, "Well, I was braver then than now!"

The facade of the Brown and Stanton Block changed forever when Fotis Antippos opened his "Splendid Lunch", taking two bays on Main Street in the late 1930's.

For years this was the place of choice for locals craving good honest food — and the camaraderie of longtime friendships.

The long oval windows of the restaurant were set in a facade of flashing blue mirrors which reflected all along Main Street.

As we poked around this past Saturday, Bill Thomas pointed out a portion of the elegantly painted ceiling of Splendid Lunch exposed when the false ceiling of the "porch" was removed.

The Brown and Stanton Block initiated a victorian element to Winchester center — and has been proprietary about it ever since.

If Mr. Quill and his associates restore the street facade of this important building with as much integrity as is evident in their Lyceum Hall project three years ago — we can soon expect another winner in the downtown area.

LOOK, I'M NOT THE BUSYBODY TYPE EITHER, BUT THIS LOOKS SUSPICIOUS... I'M CALLING THE POLICE

At the top of the escalator

By TERRY MAROTTA

I read recently that the adolescent's work of defining himself does not actually get completed by most people until their early 40s.

By that time, in some cases, our parents have died, so that the end of childhood is more complete. We move closer to that top step on the escalator of time. No longer insulated by the sheltering presence of an older generation, we know we are next, and sometimes feel like the cartoon character, who, having stepped off the cliff's edge, hangs a moment in mid-air because he has not yet registered the peril of his position.

Then too, if we have reproduced by this time, in Nature's eyes at least we fulfilled our function. If we were flowers, we'd be seeds now, our season of bloom behind us, our moment in the light at an end.

But in the human animal there is a protracted period of dependence, lasting not for months or seasons but for years. And in today's complex society the young seem to marry; to settle; to buy houses, if they're lucky enough to find the means, later than other generations have done; and so are our children for much longer, living at home, perhaps, or at least visiting a lot with bulging bagsful of laundry. This gives us all more time to consider what it means to foster the next generation, to mentor any individual — to parent, in short.

When my sister and I were kids, we were well parented; I know that now if I didn't know it before.

I talked too much in second grade and as a result was put out of the school, not just the class. The young nun snapped "You're finished here! Pack your books!" (for we bought our books in Catholic school), and sent me, a child of seven, to stand alone at the curb of a major urban thoroughfare while the Elevated screamed past overhead and my mother was notified by telephone.

Our mom was older than other kids' moms. She'd married late and briefly, was 50 as against their 28 or 30. She could do this Incredible Hulk thing when she was mad, where her face would darken and grow large. That morning she did it to that young nun in the Sister Superior's office, and the poor frail thing went away soon after for a little rest. She meant to protect us, even from consequences we had elected.

Years later she was still at it. Back in those halcyon bullmarket 80s when all things seemed possible, I got to the finals in a competition, begun before Challenger's explosion, organized to send the first Journalist into space. Mom's jaundiced Democrat's view of it: "That damn Reagan is trying to kill my baby."

She looked out for us; I liked that. At the same time she gave us the bad news about ourselves. She hated lying, and the few times we lied to her she caught us. We couldn't fool her and in the end we liked that pretty well too, because it taught us honesty.

Well, our mother is gone now. No one pushes the hair from our brows the way she once did; to no one in this world, I suppose, will we be so dear again.

For a long time after her death, I couldn't feel better. Until slowly, in the course of my own parenting, I realized that in giving what I needed to get, I could replicate the experience by re-enacting it from the other side.

A parent does a lot for a kid; steps in and takes the heat with him; stands back and lets the kid take the heat; listens as the child struggles to understand who he is; calls it as he sees it; remembers; and keeps caring long after the world has turned away to other things.

Edward Nason West once defined Agapic love as "a profound concern for the welfare of another without any desire to control that other, to be thanked by that other, or to enjoy the process." This makes a pretty good definition for parents' love too.

I gave a talk to a college writing class this past spring, at the end of which one student raised her hand and asked, "Did you always know you had talent, or did somebody have to tell you?" That question brought it all into focus for me. No one knows what they have, until they see it reflected and celebrated by a loving Other. If you're lucky, that Other will have been a parent. I know now I was that lucky: Because up here near the escalator's top, it doesn't seem so scary. And when I look back at those coming along behind me, it seems downright wonderful.

This week in history

Winchester's population was found to have increased well over 500 percent since 1880, from 3,802 residents to 20,193 in 1960.

One of Winchester's culinary landmarks had closed its doors that week when Fotis Antippos turned the key in the lock of his Splendid Lunch establishment at 555 Main Street for the last time. The restaurant was located in the center and had served local patrons for 37 years.

Betty White, the "charming personality" of the Jack Paar TV show was scheduled to star at the North Shore Music Theater on Route 128 in Beverly in "The Boy Friend," a "rip-roaring musical comedy burlesque."

James N. Mason of Sheffield West was the recipient that week of U.S. Patent No. 2,941,913 entitled, "Elastomeric Floor Covering." This invention pertained to improvements in floor coverings, which have properties similar to those of rubber.

On the Winchester Star's "New Book Table" that week was William Randolph Hearst, Jr.'s non-fiction offering, "Ask Me Anything."

The Board of Selectmen that week conducted the first session in a proposed program of regularly scheduled monthly meetings with officials of various town departments. The purpose of these hearings was to exchange and review information concerning the activities of the departments, including budgets.

As Woburn fire apparatus continually emptied their station in response to a series of fires in that city over the July 4 weekend, Winchester Fire Department personnel repeatedly answered calls for mutual aid.

Belotti Oldsmobile in Somerville offered a Cutlass "S" Holiday Coupe for $3,215 and a 98 Luxury Sedan for $4,750 during their summer sale.

E.M. Loews' Winchester Theater that week offered, "1932: The Moonshine War" and David Niven starring in "The Impossible Years," co-starring Lola Albright, Chad Everett and Ozzy Nelson and introducing Christine Ferrare.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 17 — Report No. 26
Massachusetts House and Senate.
June 30-July 6, 1990

The House and Senate — "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on 11 roll calls and local representatives' votes of 1 roll call from June 30-July 6. Roll calls from late sessions will be included in next week's report.

Firefighters (H 6052) — House 148-0, Senate 31-4, approved the bill establishing a presumption of job related-ness for firefighters suffering from specific types of fatal or disabling cancerous conditions. Supporters, noting the effect of presumption would be to entitle firefighters to higher related retirement benefits, said the bill acknowledges the heightened risks of cancer faced by firefighters. Opponents said the bill violates Proposition 2½ by requiring cities and towns to pay for a state mandated cost.

LETTERS

Galatis expresses thanks from Coalition TO THE EDITOR:

The members of the Vinson Owen Coalition came together because of a firm belief that it was in the town's best educational and financial interest to maintain five elementary schools.

When Town Meeting cast its vote in favor of our amendment to the education budget, Town Meeting sent a clear, concise message of what Winchester represents — who we are and what we value.

This vote endorsed the long term need for five elementary schools. This vote reaffirmed that the quality and character of our town is rooted in its neighborhood elementary schools. This vote acknowledged that due process and the voice of the public must always be a priority when making decisions that have long-term effect on all who live in our town.

Town Meeting patiently heard hours of debate on this multifaceted issue from many viewpoints. There was extensive discussion on several areas including the facility, effect on class size, building reuse, growth in school population and the quality of education. Town Meeting provided the vehicle for this process of open debate.

An issue of major concern was that class sizes would grow to unsound levels and that split classes would multiply system wide if five elementary schools remained open. We were convinced then and since the debate have verified with school administration that class sizes will remain low with five elementary schools. There will be between 15 and 23 students per class system-wide with the exception of one class of 31 students at Vison Owen and one at Ambrose. This represents a major reduction in the number of split classes system wide. As you can see, the town has made a wise investment and the long term benefits of this decision will be apparent year after year.

The members of the Vinson Owen Coalition would like to thank the School Committee, the Board of Selectmen, the town and school administrations, Town Meeting members, parents from other school districts and the citizenry at large for participating in the process of open debate on the issue of maintaining five elementary schools. Our thanks are also extended to the Town Moderator for guiding Town Meeting through this very delicate issue. The membership is also very grateful for the extensive town-wide support we received.

Lastly, I would like to publicly thank the members of the Vinson Owen Coalition, their families and all of the Vinson Owen community. I have had the opportunity to reflect on the events of the past year and I am proud and pleased to have represented a group of parents who always remained "on the high road." As a group they worked extremely hard and remained focused on their belief. And although many political ideas were represented in the membership, all were able to table their particular viewpoints for the well being of this town-wide issue. The issues will come and go — the people debating the issues will come and go — but the one thing that must remain constant is respect for the process because it will endure.

Cronan says thanks for recycling efforts TO THE EDITOR:

The Waste Study Committee would like to thank all those who participate in the "Winchester Recycles" project over the last year.

"Winchester Recycles" is a community-based program which seeks to promote recycling at the local level. Participants include local organizations, businesses and schools. The activities this year included: promotional days at the Recycling and Disposal Facility, complete with pastries and prizes; bicycle parades; newspaper articles; and publications.

These efforts have been successful. The Department of Public Works reports that we now recycle almost 20 percent of the waste stream. This represents a savings to the town of nearly $200,000 in avoided costs.

In particular, the Waste Study Committee would like to thank the following businesses and organizations for their help and support: John Edward Airey Disposal Co., Ann Blackham, EBM Inc., Bonnell Ford, Fells Hardware, Henderson Stationers, Winchester Cooperative Bank, Mr. Donut, George Nowell and Sons, A Better Chance, League of Women Voters, Rotary Club, Newcomers' Club, Winchester School Committee, Ms. Cavetti's fourth grade at Lynch School, Chamber of Commerce's Town Day Committee, and continued thanks to the Department of Public Works.

Remember: Don't throw your tax dollars away — recycle!

GUEST COLUMN

Must it be always "bottom line"?

By RICHARD J. DONOVAN
Special to the Star

One day recently I went shopping for paper for the voracious copying machine. The clerk held up a packaged ream and inquired "Is recycled OK?" Seeking to be both noble and shrewd, saving of both trees and money, I replied "Sure." The recycled paper brings with it disadvantages that appear minor and to me of little consequence; no free lunch. Subsequent discussion revealed that I was in fact being only noble — saving only trees. The price tag was identical on both recycled and first-time-around paper.

Reflection suggested that here I was seeing the dark side of capitalism — that ubiquitous bottom line-driven thought process. Can you think of anyone who would not be in favor of tree saving as an abstract concept? Of course not. But will anyone in the paper pipeline sacrifice a sliver of profit in order to promote the use of recycled paper and thus save some trees? Surely I jest.

Examples abound: in the literally dark days of oil embargoes much progress was achieved in developing alternative fuels. Oil from the Athabasca tar sands is one such. The R&D succeeded. Technologically the process became feasible. What happened next? The price of oil on the world market dropped. As a consequence pursuing the alternatives became infeasible, economically speaking. We'll return to them in earnest only when facing the next oil crisis.

At this point any self-respecting MBA should stop reading. The unpleasant fact emerges that for the pro bono to prevail some minority must at least in the short term sacrifice something; for example, stockholders in paper companies or in Exxon. To be fair, can we reasonably expect a tiny minority, stockholders in this case, to take the rap for 250 million Americans? Probably not.

Some wildlife workers proposed to stock an area with a certain species. A conservationist counseled that, instead, they concentrate their efforts towards making the environment just right for that species. When they did so, sure enough, the species quickly established itself, and populated the area to a proper limit. Thereafter, left alone, the numbers maintained themselves by means of (a) their innate drive to thrive and multiply and (b) the policing actions of their natural enemies.

Sound familiar? To a point. As occupant of the planet, man is busily populating it like mad. Some of our natural enemies such as war and pestilence hopefully are being overcome, at least forseeably. Not so however with famine. If we all work diligently we may succeed in removing all barriers to superficial happiness and early gratification, and shall then be free to "eat" ourselves out of house, home and planet. Essential to any construction project are the consumables — tools that are broken, nails that are driven or dropped and lost, fuel for the heaters that make possible the constructive tasks. At the end of the job the consumables, aptly named, are gone. The construction project Earth was at the outset very well stocked with consumables. And, boy, have we been consuming them! Look at a few:

(a) Food, which man has produced in prodigious and disproportionate quantities from areas in the United States and Canada, areas that in themselves are enormous but that represent a relatively minor fraction of the global land surface where man exists. This production miracle has been at the cost of soil erosion and chemical application, neither of which can be expected to endure indefinitely without adverse effects. By way of contrast, consider those areas of the earth's surface — eastern Europe, Asia, the sub-Saharan, the Jordan Valley — where the balance is at best precarious and where any but the most favorable weather can create crisis.

(b) Water, much of which globally is endlessly recycled but that, more and more, must be treated while here in order to serve and to coexist with man. Insidiously, in large areas dependent upon water pumped from beneath the ground surface, the level of that water is dropping. This is not unlike certain oil fields where for many decades the living was good and the pumping was easy. At a point it has become appropriate, economically feasible — there we go again — to reenter the field with new techniques, to try harder, to spend more money, in order to recover an ever-diminishing quantity of oil.

(c) Trees, with their water retaining, their bird and animal feeding and sheltering, their oxygen producing.

We could go on: fresh air, living space, places to put waste paper. The list is long and growing.

Perhaps the bottom line — oops! — is trying to tell us that if we are to put anything really right someone must go first. Someone must take the first step. Someone must sacrifice something. The problem is that those who already have something worthwhile to sacrifice are generally the movers and shakers of the planet.

And those fellows intend to sacrifice nothing.

Yet again, that bottom line.

New era for art community

Art Association moves into the gallery at library

By ELLEN KNIGHT
Special to the Star

A Grand Opening Members' Summer Exhibit has been organized by the Winchester Art Association to announce its new location in the gallery at the Winchester Public Library. This announcement marks not only a new exhibition but perhaps also the beginning of a new era for our art community.

"It has been a profound year for awareness of the arts in Winchester," says Whitney Gay, president of the Winchester Art Association. The year has seen town approval for the construction of the Arthur Griffen Museum, the organization of Friends of Arts to support art in the schools, the first season of the Winchester Concert Series, and the announcement of a summer theater program for children, among other activities.

For the art community itself, this year appears to be one of growing cooperative effort. Beginning this month, the Art Association will be exhibiting the library gallery, a move designed to improve the visibility of Winchester art and art awareness. "We are delighted to be moving into the gallery located in the library," says Gay. "We have a highly talented group of members whose regional exposure increases each year, and moving to the library will extend our hours and allow a greater traffic flow to participate in the viewing of the artists who are showing their work."

The first artist to exhibit at the library since the closing of the Association gallery on Main Street is watercolorist George Bennos, an Arlington resident and association member, whose works are showing during July. In August the association's annual Prize Show will be displayed. "The Prize Show," says Gay, "always seems to generate an enthusiastic turnout. I have a feeling we will be seeing much creative new work at this summer's show."

Not only will artworks by the Association be exhibited but also there will be shows by student artists, in addition to exhibits by guest artists. The tradition of an annual exhibit by the Studio

Guild should be perpetuated, and art students in the public schools will also exhibit. The high school will have a fall show under the direction of David Ardito, and it is planned that junior high school students also have a show this year.

The Art Association has supported youth artists in the past by a scholarship program and plans increased interaction with the school's art program, a vital and impressive program in which the community can justly share and take pride.

As he looks forward into the new decade, Gay observes that "it seems that the timing is right and the leadership for developing and rewarding new talent has arrived. Winchester and the surrounding towns will benefit from this cultural resurgence."

To participate in community arts awareness, this column will, from time to time during the summer, profile major artists of Winchester's past and will continue to highlight artistic events in the future.

yes.
Senator Salvatore Albano voted yes.

Approve Budget (S 1991) — Senate 28-9, gave near final approval to its own version of a $13.68 billion fiscal 1991 budget. Supporters said the budget is a fiscally responsible one which funds essential programs. Opponents said the package is loaded with waste and patronage and depends on a $1 billion tax hike.

A Yea vote is for the budget. A Nay vote is against it.
Albano voted yes.

Lottery (S 1991) — Senate 25-10, rejected an amendment reducing funding for the administration and operation of the state lottery by $6.4 million from $63.8 million to $57.4 million. Amendment supporters said the lottery is still a patronage haven and argued this 10 percent reduction can be easily absorbed. Opponents said the cut will hurt the lottery and result in decreased revenue.

A Yea vote is for the $6.4 million cut. A Nay vote is against the cut.
Albano voted no.

State Health Insurance (S 1991) — Senate 25-12, rejected an amendment directing the group insurance commission to establish a sliding scale for state employee contributions to group health insurance coverage and to submit it to the legislature. Amendment supporters said this will save $10 million annually by requiring higher salaried employees to pay more. Opponents said this amendment shifts the health care burden on the backs of working men and women.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.
Albano voted no.

Tuition Waiver (S 1991) — Senate 27-11, rejected an amendment requiring any tuition waivers at state colleges for state employees and their families to be based on ability to pay. Amendment supporters said this will put a stop to automatic waivers and will save money. Opponents said the current waiver system works well and should not be changed.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.
Albano voted no.

Scholarships (S 1991) — Senate 22-16, rejected an amendment changing the $85 million student scholarship program to a loan program. The amendment calls for establishing a sliding repayment scale based on ability to pay and includes provisions forgiving loans for persons earning under certain levels of income. Amendment supporters said this would save millions of dollars and simply requires payback by persons who can afford it. Opponents said this will hurt many low and middle income people and is unfair.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.
Albano voted no.

OBITUARIES

Peter Dillard

Dr. Peter H. Dillard of Edwards Road died July 9 at home. He was 73. Born in Bluefield, W. Va., Dec. 17, 1916, Dr. Dillard attended Harvard Medical School, graduating in 1942. He did his residency at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, N.C., and was a clinical assistant in surgery at the University of Toronto.

Dr. Dillard had been in private practice for many years. He served as in World War II as a captain in the United States Army, and also served as a major for the United States Air Force during the Korean conflict.

He was certified as diplomate by the American Board of Neurological Surgery, and was a fellow to the American College of Surgeons. Dr. Dillard was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the Harvey Cushing Society and the New England Neurological Society.

Dr. Dillard also had a number of publications in the medical field, including pieces in the Journal of N.C. Medical Association, the Journal of Neurosurgery and the Journal of Roent. and Nuclear Medicine.

Dr. Dillard leaves his wife, Elizabeth Dillard of Winchester; two sons, Dr. Peter H.S. Dillard of Andover and John W. Dillard of San Antonio, Texas; and four grandchildren.

At the request of the family, funeral arrangements will be private. Arrangements are being handled by the Lane Funeral Service of Winchester.

Johanna Olsson

Johanna E. Olsson of Brookside Avenue died July 9 at home. She was 91.

Born Nov. 19, 1898 in Sweden, Mrs. Olsson was a resident of Winchester for approximately 48 years. She was a member of the Lutheran Church of The Redeemer in Woburn.

Mrs. Olsson leaves her husband, John B. Olsson of Winchester; a son, John Rodger Olsson of Montreal, Canada; a grandson, David Olsson of Woburn; a granddaughter, Marcia Gierny of Manchester, N.H.; two great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral will be held at the Lutheran Church of The Redeemer in Woburn July 12 at 11 a.m., followed by burial at Wildwood Cemetery. Arrangements are being handled by the Lane Funeral Home in Winchester.

In lieu of flowers, donations in her memory may be made to The Lutheran Church of The Redeemer, Forest Park Drive, Woburn, MA 01801.

Richard Cantillon

Richard M. Cantillon of Sheridan Circle died unexpectedly Monday, July 9 while vacationing at Hampton Beach, N.H. Mr. Cantillon, 68, was the husband of Mildred M. (Dineen) Cantillon.

Mr. Cantillon, a retired division head with the Boston Edison Company vacationed summers at Hampton Beach since his retirement in 1981.

Born in Woburn, he was the son of the late Edward J. and Elizabeth (McDermott) Cantillon. He was a 1940 graduate of Woburn High School and immediately entered service with Boston Edison. In 1942, he enlisted in the United States Navy and served on-board a ship off the West Coast that was home-ported in San Francisco.

He returned to the Edison Company after the war and worked his way into the position of department head at the New Boston Station in South Boston.

Mr. Cantillon, since he was a youth, had been affiliated with the Lynch-Cantillon Funeral Home in Woburn, and since 1946 worked with the current owner, his brother Edward J. Cantillon, Jr. and his brother William "Gus" Cantillon in the arrangement and direction of funerals.

He lived in the north end of Winchester since his marriage and played an active role in town affairs. He was a Town Meeting member and was a former member of the Finance Committee.

A high school sports enthusiast, he was an avid follower of teams in both Winchester and Woburn. Although a long-time resident of Winchester, he never lost his loyalty to his alma mater in Woburn. He would sit on the Winchester side of the football stadium on Thanksgiving Day and root for Woburn, much to the chagrin of his Winchester neighbors.

Mr. Cantillon played an active role in the affairs and programs of the Immaculate Conception Church, which serves the north end of town and the south end of Woburn. He was a strong supporter of the bingo games and took part in the operation of that fundraising program for the parish.

He was a member of the Holy Name Society when it was active at the Immaculate.

He was also a member of the Aberjona Post Veterans of Foreign Wars, and was a life member of the Woburn Lodge of Elks and the Woburn Council No. 77 Knights of Columbus.

Surviving are his wife Mildred M.

ton. The meetings will be held for six consecutive Tuesday evenings, beginning July 24, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Hospice Care office, 21 Maple Street, Arlington.

This group is designed as an opportunity for people to share their experience of loss in the atmosphere of a small, supportive group. Participants need not be associated with Hospice Care. The series is open to all interested bereaved persons. A donation of $25 is suggested to cover the cost of the group.

Cantillon of Winchester; two sons: Joseph of Reading and Richard M. Jr. of Littleton; and four daughters, Janet McMahon of Lowell, Brenda Foley of Winchester, Joan Parker of Woburn and Anne Cantillon of Winchester.

Mr. Cantillon is also survived by his two brothers Edward J. Cantillon, Jr. and William "Gus" Cantillon, both of Woburn; and nine grandchildren.

The funeral will be held from the Lynch-Cantillon Funeral Home, 263 Main Street, Woburn on Thursday morning, July 12 at 9:15 a.m. followed by a funeral Mass at the Immaculate Conception Church, Winchester at 10 a.m. Interment will be at Calvary Cemetery.

Donations in his memory may be made to the American Diabetes Society, 190 No. Main Street, Natick, Mass. 01760.

Georgina LaFauci

Georgina B. LaFauci of Cambridge Street died June 24 at Winchester Hospital. She was 59.

Mrs. LaFauci was born in Nova Scotia, the daughter of John and Katie (Delaney) MacLellan.

Mrs. LaFauci was a resident of Winchester since 1960 and had been a housewife and member of St. Mary's Church in Winchester. She was a devoted wife, mother and grandmother.

Mrs. LaFauci is survived by her husband Hugo J. LaFauci Sr. of Winchester.

She also leaves her daughter Marlene Lepore of Winchester and her son Hugo J. LaFauci Jr. of Winchester.

Mrs. LaFauci also leaves her grandchildren Katrina and Taormina Lepore, her daughter-in-law Linda LaFauci and her brother-in-law Andrew Lepore. She also leaves her four brothers: Alex, Roddie and Eddie MacLellan, all of Ontario and Walter MacLellan of Nova Scotia; and her six sisters: Mary Anne Boyd, Sister Catherine MacLellan, Gertrude MacQuarrie and Betty Grant, all of Nova Scotia, Sally MacGillivray of Dorchester and Florence Benoit. She was also the sister of the late John R. MacLellan and the late Rev. William MacLellan.

The funeral was held at St. Mary's Church June 27, followed by burial at Wildwood Cemetery in Winchester. Arrangements were made by Lane Funeral Service in Winchester.

SENIORS

Jenks Center helps transport senior citizensBy Mary Kelly
Special to the Star

The Jenks Senior Center sponsors a variety of transportation services to Winchester seniors. All arrangements are made through the Center's reception desk volunteers between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Volunteer Drivers, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. A corps of volunteer drivers share blocks of time between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to be matched up with senior riders. Requests must be made to the reception desk 48 hours prior to the time the ride is needed. Recruited volunteer drivers must call back the rider to confirm the time and place. Rides will be provided for seniors with no other means of transport, within Winchester, and for medical appointments to towns contiguous to Winchester. Co-chairpersons of the Volunteer Drive Committee are Jenness Eugley and Eleanor Farrell.

Senior Van Transport, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The Senior Van picks up and returns seniors who participate in the Wednesday and Friday Eating Together program. The Van can accommodate two wheelchair seniors and eight other passengers at one time. Rides to medical and other essential appointments within Winchester can be accommodated as they mesh with the ET transport needs on these days. The Salter family has donated the use of the Wednesday and Friday van.

Monday Share a Ride Van, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The Council on Aging has contracted a Share A Ride van to pick up and return participants in the Monday ET program. Some essential appointments within Winchester will be allowed as they mesh with the ET transport.

Pictured is Thomas Dean, one of the Senior Van drivers from the Armstrong Ambulance Company, sponsored by the Salter Health Care Group, who pick up and bring back seniors who sign up for the Mall trips ahead of time. The Van is available the last Thursday of the month and has accommodations for eight persons and two wheelchairs. Persons in wheelchairs must be accompanied by friends. Seniors are urged to take advantage of the good weather and the air-conditioned Burlington Mall. Call in and sign up with the desk receptionist for the trip, 721-7136. Pick up and drop off will be at the Jenks Center.

Seniors are asked to make requests for van transport, giving name, address and telephone number, when reserving lunch, at least 24 hours prior to lunch date. Desk volunteers handle many varieties of requests and it is helpful if complete information is given when requests are made.

Mall Van, 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., one trip last Thursday of month. There will be one shopping trip each month to the Burlington Mall, on the last Thursday of the month. The Van will leave the Jenks Senior Center at 9:30 a.m., with return trip pick up at the Mall at 12:30 p.m. Mall reservations must be made at the reception desk. There is space for eight seniors and two wheelchairs but, if the demand is greater than the space, in order to be fair, reservations will be honored for those seniors who have not ridden previously. Arrangements have been made with the Salter family for this extra service.

A reminder please, about the Mall Van: the Mall trip has not been used by many different seniors, therefore people are encouraged to make use of this trip in order to substantiate its continued use.

A morning for senior citizens at the Fed

The Public Services Department of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston will once again host free morning programs for senior citizens on Friday, July 27, and Friday, Aug. 3, from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon. Each session will feature a tour of the Bank's operations, a discussion of the Federal Reserve and consumer protection regulations, and light refreshments.

Participants must register by phone as each session is limited to 50 people. For reservations, please call 973-3452, Monday through Friday, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Upcoming events

Fahey commemorated at hospital

Former Winchester resident, the late Robert J. Fahey, M.D., was recently honored with the dedication of the Robert J. Fahey, M.D. Health Sciences Library at the tenth annual Lawrence Associates Brunch held at Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford.

The Lawrence's Board of Directors voted to name the library in his memory to recognize Fahey's interest and commitment to medical education and to the Lawrence. Robert J. Fahey, M.D. served for 24 years as the Chief of Staff at the Lawrence from 1961 to 1985, and as the Lawrence's Chief of Staff of Medicine from 1953 to 1985. He was appointed to the Lawrence's Medical Staff in 1949. Fahey was an emeritus clinical professor of medicine at Tufts University, the institution where he earned his medical degree.

Throughout his medical career, Fahey helped to guide the careers of hundreds of young physicians and medical students. In 1969, while he was Chief of Staff, Fahey founded a teaching program for second-year medical students. In 1978, he initiated the Lawrence's Postgraduate Training Program, in affiliation with the New England Medical Center, to provide interns and residents with clinical exposure and training by staff specialists.

At the dedication, LMH President Charles F. Johnson presented a special resolution in recognition of Fahey saying, "Dr. Robert Fahey was a powerful force behind the progress and growth of Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford. His leadership had much to do with the Lawrence's reputation today as an outstanding community hospital."

Johnson presented a bronze relief of Fahey which was sculpted by 94-year-old Emilius R. Ciampa, a Winchester resident and long-time friend of the Fahey's. The relief hangs outside the Robert J. Fahey, M.D. Health Science Library.

Mrs. Margaret Fahey, who attended with four of her six children, thanked everyone for their support to the Medical Education fund established in memory of Fahey, saying, "Robert's devotion to his patients and to the Lawrence was second only to his love of his family."

Over 150 attended the brunch, which was held to recognize donors to the special gifts club, The Lawrence Associates. In its first decade of support, the Lawrence Associates has raised over $1,500,000 for patient care equipment and services at the Lawrence.

Real Estate & You...

When Your Realtor's Advice is Hard to Take

Sometimes, a good Realtor has to persuade people to do things they really don't want to do to achieve goals that are very important to them - getting you moved into your new home as quickly and easily as possible.

When we advise you on what has to happen to make a transaction work, we are acting as part coach and part business consultant. When you find the house you love and want to sleep on it for a few days, we know that you risk losing it. When you want to complicate your offer with clauses that make the contract unattractive to sellers, we may ask you to consider some modifications less likely to turn off the sellers. When you decide that you want your old law school classmate who practices aviation law to do your settlement, we are very clear that it isn't a great idea. When you call the week before settlement with an attack of buyer's remorse, we know the prescription for its cure. If your Realtor tries to talk you into doing something that you find yourself resisting, you will probably increase your chances for a successful move if you just do it!

Ponds may get treated

budget constraints however, will prevent DPW employees from raking up the dead algae from the ponds after the treatment, said DPW Director Anthony Celli.
Commissioners indicated they would send a notice to abutters notifying them of the procedure, the restrictions and the potential odor that could emanate from the dead algae for a two- to three-day period.

The Conservation Commission wrapped up the public hearing in short order and issued an order of conditions, which must be held on a 10-day appeal period, before work can begin.

Within the 10 days, work could begin on the project at the risk of the aquatic control company.

Man stabbed in robbery attempt

Police indicated the man did not realize he had been stabbed until he felt blood on his lower back.

Officers Gary Rogers and Jonathan Dean interviewed the victim while Officers Daniel Perenick, Thomas Romeo and James Covino checked the immediate area. However, the assailant was not located, police reports said.

The victim was transported to Winchester Hospital by ambulance where he was treated and released.

Inspector James Gray was called in to further interview the victim and possibly draw a composite sketch of the attacker.

According to Lt. James Pierce, police are pursuing a possible suspect. "We are investigating some leads," Pierce told the Star. Inspectors Daniel McGee and Gray are conducting the investigation, he noted.

representatives to figure out a way to pay the fees. Continental Vice President and District Manager Edward T. Holleran had said it was not the company's policy and that he did not want to "set precedent."

Svahn contended Continental would spend $20,000 less than the anticipated $175,000 the company had committed to the project. This figure represents rent paid to be the town for lease of space at the high school for a five-year period ($100,000) as well as complete renovations to the area at the high school where the studio would be stationed and classrooms moved around ($75,000).

Because the work would have to be done during the summer months, it is unlikely Continental would be operational in the high school until after the summer of 1991. This, Svahn said, would result in a savings of one-fifth of the rent ($20,000).

While Holleran had said he accepted the figures, he said he believed the $100,000 had been an estimate, and not the actual fair market value of rental property at the high school.

But Holleran stood fast to his company's policy at the committee's Monday night meeting. "We're not going to be able to increase the rent, and I couldn't think of any other way I would find palatable to pay the fees," said Holleran.

Svahn suggested his committee should go into executive session to discuss whether or not to put out an RFP (request for proposal) if Continental were unwilling to pay the legal fees.

Member Robert Ruxin cited state law which allows cable companies to pay for a town's legal fees incurred during negotiations, citing a 1987 state cable committee decision.

Continental Attorney Susan Eid noted the opinion was an advisory opinion.

Holleran again said Continental had told the town it would not foot any legal bills when negotiations began. "I really don't understand where, given all the negotiations, it's incumbent upon the company to pick up overspending you made," said Holleran. "You went and spent two times as much as the town appropriated. I can't be responsible for that." The Board of Selectmen appropriated $10,000 for the Cable Advisory Committee to use toward Horton's fees.

"We're asking you to spend what you originally committed," Svahn said. "How the money gets spent, that's what we're focusing on. Because of the delay, you get the benefit of $20,000," he added.

However, Holleran said the company's expanded senior citizen discount plan would ultimately cost the company $15,000 to $20,000, which could also be counted as the rental difference.

"I guess we have a financial and philosophical difference in this," Holleran said.

Chairman Lawrence Worthen said his group had also said from the beginning it would make efforts to include the attorney's fees in negotiations. "I don't think you have any advantage over the committee on that point," Worthen said.

The committee then voted by roll-call vote to go into executive session. Following a 30-minute break, the group reconvened, at which time Svahn said the committee would not require Continental to pay legal fees, but wanted the document accepted "as is."

After a brief private discussion, Continental representatives agreed.

Cancer bill aids firefighters

the House and Senate and onto the governor's desk for approval July 5.

"This legislation helps the family," said Duffy. "It's fair to the family — the wife and the children."

Duffy added that most of the firefighters who will be covered under the new provision will have already earned pension rights for length of service.

"The type of job we have is inherently dangerous," said Duffy, a 20-year veteran of the Winchester force.

Duffy cited the growing risks firefighters encounter with hazardous waste and chemicals. Firefighters, he said, are being drawn into such environmental concerns as they had been drawn into the emergency medical service 15 years ago.

And Duffy said while the job has become more difficult, the equipment for firefighters in Winchester has not kept pace. "[Winchester] has been much slower to catch up," said Duffy, "and the incidence of getting cancer will increase."

Duffy predicts the measure will cost Winchester an average of $2,000 to $5,000 per year. The cost to the state overall, said Duffy, will be $250,000 to $300,000.

However, higher estimates were quoted in the July 3 issue of The Boston Globe varying from $49 million to $294 million statewide over the next 15 years.

But according to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer, it is "impossible" to determine how much the measure will cost the town. "Unfortunately, it is dependent on an adverse condition being developed by a firefighter," said Maurer.

"It's impossible to assess the cost, because it's impossible to know how many people are going to be sick," he said.

Maurer said he is troubled cities and towns will be required to bear the financial burden of the new legislation. "I think it's unfortunate the legislators, both Rep. [Paul] Casey and Sen. [Salvatore] Albano did not push to have this a state mandated program so it would not put the cost onto local communities," he added.

Maurer said the measure "softens Proposition 2½" by making cities and towns foot the bill. "The firefighters should have lobbied for the state to assume the cost," he said. "It's another way of getting around [Proposition] 2½. That's the disturbing part of it."

"Any legitimate job-related disabilities are the responsibility of the employer," said Maurer. "I don't think if they're legitimate we should have a problem paying them."

Duffy said previous legislation has covered firefighters without question in the case of heart and lung cancer for the past 20 years. Now, cancer of the skin, central nervous system, lymphatic system, digestive tract, blood, urinary system, skeletal system, mouth or prostate would also be legally assumed to be work-related illnesses.

Duffy added that newly-hired firefighters must be non-smokers, therefore limiting the instance of cancer due to cigarettes.

The disability pension would provide firefighters stricken with cancer with 72 percent of their last year's salary, tax free. The stipulation is that the cancer is a permanent and disabling illness, said Duffy.

Host families needed for students

Arlington residents Nancy and John Montanaro are hoping Winchester families can bridge the gap between Spain and the United States by sponsoring foreign high school students for a four-week stay in the area.

The Montanaros are program organizers for Educational Foundation for Foreign Study (EF), a non-profit organization that brings foreign students to America for homestays from four weeks to one year.

"They are great kids, they really are," said John Montanaro, a native of Italy. "[The homestay program] cuts through the stereotypes of foreigners and lets Americans see how others live. What better way to learn about Europe?"

The program is an educational homestay — American families get a dose of Spanish culture, while the Spanish students get a chance to brush up on their English and see the U.S. up close.

During their stay, the students, who range in age from 13 to 18 years, will take an English as a Second Language course four days a week for three hours in the morning. The remainder of their weekdays will be packed with sightseeing, trips to the beach, softball games and other activities orchestrated by the Montanaros and several other chaperones.

The students will also take a three-day trip to New York City during their second week. Free time on two Sundays and a few afternoons can be used for American families to get to know their Spanish guests.

Nancy Montanaro, who is now a French teacher, was an exchange student when she was in high school. Montanaro says the experience made her more aware of issues on an international level. In addition, by the end of her stay, she was fluent in French.

"[The homestay program] makes you more aware. It's easy to think everything revolves around America. The program gives you more international exposure," she added. "It's taking an active part in moving toward better world understanding."

The Montanaros stress that the level of involvement of the American family is as little or as much as that family chooses. The requirements for a host family are a bed in a private area for the student, sharing evening and weekend meals with their guest, and providing bag lunches during the week.

And the families won't be faced with a language barrier, say the Montanaros. The students are well versed in English, although the younger guests will benefit from the experience of speaking English with their American families.

The students, who have spent four weeks in Northampton, will be arriving in Arlington July 29 and will be heading back to Spain Aug. 26.

A scholarship opportunity is also available for a teenager of a host family to travel abroad.

Of the 33 students however, only 10 have been placed at homes in the area, and only one has been placed in Winchester (four in Arlington and none yet in Belmont). The Montanaros add that a family can take two students, and suggested two busy families could split the four-week period into two two-week intervals.

Any family, with children or without, is encouraged to contact the Montanaros regarding the EF program at 648-7431. The EF program's national headquarters are in Cambridge and a strong support system exists through the headquarters and local program directors.

Bambino All-Stars capture district title

The Winchester NEWPRO Bambino All Stars captured the District 3 championship with a come-from-behind effort and 10-5 win July 7 over Dracut. Dracut had returned to face Winchester by winning the consolation bracket and was faced with having to beat the locals twice in order to capture the crown. On this day, the locals were too much for the tournament host.

Dracut opened up the top of the first with two hits, a walk, and an error and tallied two runs. Winchester, trailing 2-0 came to bat in the home half of the inning. After two were out, Andy Sullivan hit a line drive home run to bring Winchester within one.

In the second inning, Winchester pitcher, Eric Grant settled down and retired Dracut with no runs. Winchester went quietly in the second as well. Grant continued his good work in the third striking out two and not allowing a run. Winchester came to bat in the bottom of the third trailing 2-1. After one out, Paul McGowan singled. With two outs and McGowan now on second, Andy Sullivan stepped up. Dracut appeared to want to intentionally walk Sullivan, but after two balls decided to pitch to the Winchester slugger. That turned out to be a big mistake.

Sullivan deposited the very next pitch high over the right center field fence and gave Winchester a 3-2 lead. Mike McGreenery then reached on an error. Bob Marrone walked, and Jarrod Galante lined a base hit driving in another run and giving Winchester a 4-2 lead. In the fourth inning, starter Eric Grant ran in to some control problems and was replaced by Mike McGreenery. One run was in and the bases were loaded with one out when McGreenery came in, who struck out the number three hitter and the number four flew out to end the threat.

The bottom of the fourth saw Eric Grant walk and Paul McGowan single. Grant was thrown out at third on the play in a very questionable call. At the end of four the score was Winchester 4, Dracut 3. The fifth inning proved to be the most critical of the game. Winchester decided to leave their gloves in the dugout! Two hits and two bit errors yielded 2 runs for Dracut and a 5-4 lead. But make no mistake, this Winchester team has character and guts.

After one was out, Jarrod Galante singled, Bill Shields singled (Ben Albani went in to pinch run), Brian Caruso singled, Paul McGowan walked, Steven Cucinatti reached on an error, Andy Sullivan was intentionally walked for the second time in the game, and Mike McGreenery reached on an error (Tim Zue pinch

Pisces falls to Lombardi's

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

The teams were the same, but the battle ended differently this week as Lombardi's Real Estate Development topped Pisces Pantry 7-2.

Pisces came out head of Lombardi's 4-3 in extra innings last week in a hard-fought game.

Lombardi's started its scoring against Pisces Sunday night in the second inning, and kept a steady pace throughout the game. Leading off in the second, Sam Bellino drove the ball to center field for a single, followed by Gary Errico's single past third base. Paul White flew out, but Lombardi's Paul Mathson followed with a single by third to drive in a run in hopes of starting things up.

Tom Cavaretta followed with a hit that was picked off by Pisces second baseman Dave Leathers, forcing Mathson out. Errico attempted to put another run on the boards for Lombardi's, but was tagged stealing home. Pisces attempt at a drive in the second was stopped by fly balls.

Lombardi's made its biggest jump in the third inning. Starting things off, Ron Divincenzo flew out to right field, but singles by Mike White, Scott Binding and Ken Jacobson quickly followed. Power hitter Jeff Stackpole sent the ball reeling with a homerun, putting Lombardi's ahead 5-0. Brian Carroll and Bellino flew out, and a drive by Paul White to the shortstop ended the inning.

Pisces began a rally in the third as well, as Gary Delgreco drove to right field for a single. Luz flew out, but was followed by Sam Higgins' single. With men on first and third, Doug Meahl sent a grounder out into right field, scoring Delgreco and putting Pisces on the board.

Pisces attempt was stopped when Lombardi's third baseman Mathson snagged a line drive by Leathers to close out the inning.

In the fourth, Lombardi's again put its mark on the boards. Errico flew out to the outfield, but White and Mathson followed with singles. Tom Cavaretta loaded up the bases with a drive down the third base line, and Pisces pitcher Jack Cavaretta walked Divincenzo, forcing a batter home and bringing the score to 6-1.

Mike White then plated Mathson, but a throw to catcher Charlie Colter caught Tom Cavaretta at home for a second out. Binding drove the ball to third, but DiRe picked it up, getting the forced runner at third.

Pisces again made an attempt at a rally in the fifth, but to no avail.

In the sixth, Lombardi's pitcher Tom Cavaretta walked Pisces' Vozzella, and Delgreco sent a drive down the first base line for a single. Luz followed with a single to load up the bases, and Higgins hit a sacrifice fly to Carroll, scoring Vozzella. But a quick play relaying the ball from Carroll to Paul White home to Jacobson caught Delgreco at the plate and put the brakes on Pisces.

Meahl then doubled to the Ginn Field wall, putting men on second and third. But a bloop to Tom Cavaretta by Leathers finished out the inning, the score 7-2. Pisces was

Swiss Stone tied for first after double win

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

Double plays in a double-header was the key to Swiss Stone's victory and consequent move into first place.

Seemingly invincible in Sunday night play, Swiss Stone moved into first place, neck in neck with Lombardi's Real Estate Development in men's softball A league play as both tout 12-6 records.

In early evening play Swiss Stone first topped McGoldrick's 8-5.

According to McGoldrick's manager Jack Pierce, "The whole key was [Swiss Stone] got seven runs in the second inning on seven or eight hits." Although McGoldrick's started a come-back in the sixth inning, Pierce said they hit into an inning-ending double play with bases loaded, ending the drive.

Swiss Stone then faced Harpoon Ale, winning that game 8-2.

Although Harpoon opened the game with a run, the team struggled to get men across the plate, not scoring again until the final inning.

Swiss Stone and Harpoon battled back and forth in the second inning, with intense play but no score.

In the third, Swiss Stone started its scoring drive. A line drive to left field put John Ganem on first, followed by a double by Bobby Burns. With men on second and third, Mike Walsh hit a sacrifice fly, sending Ganem home and putting Swiss Stone ahead, 2-1.

Kevin Holding then plated Burns with a triple to right field, and was then sent home on a single by Mark Lawson, bringing the score to 4-1.

Harpoon's Mike Harrison snagged a drive by Swiss Stone's Tom Dattilo, and Mark Lawson stole second. Harpoon's Pizzi then fired a fly-ball by Jeff Lawson, gunning down

Twilight booters have winning season

You have seen enough Worldcup soccer on the small screen and are eager for a real game? Or maybe, you want to relive some of the successes of the Winchester boys' teams of the past? Well, go and see Winchester's Twilight, summer league team. Comprised of two very talented and successful age groups, this team is capable of playing excellent soccer; they would give most college teams a close game.

The backbone of the team are the recent high school graduates who now play college ball: Vandy French (Brown), Paul Erbfina (B.C.), Mike McGeehan (Clark), Dave Ducharme (RPI), Stephen Reeve (Wheaton) and Andy Shao (Brandeis). A solid dose of maturity is provided by players from the successful "late seventies" group such as Gary Martin, Randy Mahoney, Ted Guthrie, Tim Caesy and State Rep. Paul Casey.

Although the successes of this group may be mostly forgotten by now, a fact is that they got farther than any other team in the history of the Winchester soccer club by making it to the regional semi-finals in 1979. If these players are the seasoned veterans, it is the recent high school graduates Jan Pyro, Mike Queenan, David Rodriguez and Kiley Hertel who represent the youth.

Other excellent players who fill out the team's lineup include Paul Capodanno, David Romboli, JJ Alberts, Dan Kennerson and Andre Behrmann, with occasional 'cameo' appearances by others. Almost half-way through the season the team is 5-0-1 in games with teams from surrounding communities and colleges and looks a sure bet to make the playoffs in August. During July, the team has a home game at Lynch field every Thursday, except for July 19.

Under 10s end season with win

Winchester's under 10 boys division I spring soccer team ended its season with an exciting 4-1 win over Reading of the Middlesex League a week ago Saturday. Billy Baldwin scored 3 goals and Jeff Stevens scored 1 to avenge an earlier loss to Reading, and capped a season that ended with 3 wins and 6 losses.

Wins and losses weren't the entire story. Because Winchester's 10 year old team went to the BAYS League, this "10 and under" team was made up of boys 9 and under. At the beginning coach Val Livada announced, "This is going to be a character building year." Through hard work and determination, coach Livada and assistant coach Neil Hurley helped the team become competitive with its older and larger competition.

Look for a strong 10 and under

Bohlin, Rowe win

By ALEX POPP
Special to the Star

Forget about watching "War of the Roses" or any other movie about the battle of the sexes. The real battle took place over the June 30-July 1 weekend at the Winchester Swim and Tennis Club.

Twenty-four teams participated in the Annual Mixed Doubles Blind Draw Tennis Tournament with the fourth seeded team of Jill Bohlin and Rich Rowe coming out on top.

Rowe and Bohlin took out the top seeded team of Nicki Campbell and Chris Aronson 4-6, 6-0, 6-4 in the semi-finals and then bested Bonnie Totman and John Heffernan 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 in the finals. The usual rule in mixed doubles is the woman wins it and the man loses it but Rich Rowe, who has been absent from tournament play as of late, proved too tough throughout the tournament with topspin forehands as heavy as bricks.

Finalists in the Winchester Swim and Tennis Club's 1990 Mixed Doubles Draw were, from left, Rich Rowe, Jill Bohlin, Bonnie Totman and John Heffernan.

In the other semi-finals Totman and Heffernan took out Craig Putter and Carol Breur 6-0, 6-2.

Nancy Hintlian and Alex Popp won the consolation with a 6-4, 6-2 win over Cindy Randall and everyone's favorite player and name, Bud Bing.

Tennis director Judy Nicholson would like to thank tournament directors Bonnie Totman and Rich Colozzi for their fine efforts in organizing and running the event.

If players are still talking to each other the whole thing will be back at it in 1991. No matter what the score or outcome of the match, it still beats cleaning out the garage or unstacking the dishes.

Season a success for under 12s

The Winchester Boys Under 12 A team completed a successful spring season winning the Middlesex League Division 1B and the post season league tournament — the Commissioner's Cup. The team was 8-2 in league play and 12-4 overall including tournament play.

The boys finished tied in the division with N. Reading at 8-2 during regular season play but won an exciting 2-0 post-season playoff victory. At the League Commissioner's Cup tournament, held in Burlington June 23-24, Winchester defeated Burlington, the Division 2B winner in the final 1-0 in the second overtime period. That game proved that in soccer defense can be exciting as there were several potential game winning shots stopped or played away by the Winchester goalkeeper and fullbacks.

In what was probably the most sensational play of the game, Chris Ebeling, playing left wing fullback, headed out a Burlington shot at point blank range after the shot had passed the Winchester goalkeeper.

During the season strong goalk-keeping and defensive teamwork resulted in nine shutouts including five in a row. The scoring was also shared with 12 of the 16 players on the team scoring a goal. Overall, the team outscored their opponents 52-15.

The supporting cast consisted of coach Don Wright, assistant coaches Bob Racioppi and Aram Goudsouzian and the players' enthusiastic parents and fans.

NEWPRO Bambino All-Stars open districts

The NEWPRO Bambino All-Stars opened their quest for a district three title and a berth in the State tournament on Saturday, June 30 in Dracut. The feeling among the other district teams was that the Winchester team would not fair well. The home team set out on a mission to prove the "experts" wrong.

The opening game for the NEWPRO All-Stars was with Revere. Revere has been a perennial power in District 3. Andy Sullivan drew the pitching assignment for Winchester. In the top of the first Sullivan retired Revere in order. In the bottom of the first, Winchester struck quickly. Paul McGowan led with a walk and was followed by walks to Sullivan, Mike McGovern, and Bob Marrone to score the first run. After a Jarrod Galante fielders choice brought another run, Greg Miles singled bringing across a third run.

Sullivan retired Revere in order again in the second. In the Winchester half of the second, the home team put the game out of reach. McGowan doubled to lead the inning, Steven "Cucinatti" Cucinatti reached on an error, Sullivan walked, McGovern walked, Bob Marrone doubled, Jarrod Galante singled, Greg Miles walked, Paul McGowan singled for his second hit of the inning, Cucinatti reached on an error, and Sullivan and McGovern both singled for a total of 9 runs and a 12-0 lead.

Sullivan gave up two walks and no hits or runs in the third. Winchester added to the lead in the third when Tim Zue walked, Mike Pacheco reached on an error and Paul McGowan singled for a 13-0 lead. Revere tallied a run on one hit in the fourth and added another run on no hits in the fifth for the 13-2 final score. The game was ended after the top of the fifth because of the mercy rule.

This game was the Paul McGowan-Andy Sullivan show. McGowan was 3-3 for the day with a walk and three runs scored. Sullivan, pitching with a fervor, threw a one hitter for the victory.

Moving on

The NEWPRO All-Stars advanced to Sunday to face Concord-Carlisle who was also a victor on Saturday. Winchester started the game quietly in the first. The only base runner was a walk to Sullivan. Concord tallied two in the bottom of the first off starting pitcher Eric Grant on a walk and a home run.

Then in the top half of the second the Winchester bats went to work. Bob Marrone singled and was forced on a fielder's choice by Jarrod Galante, Bill Shields followed with a hit and after a walk to Greg Miles, Eric Grant singled. Steven Cucinatti walked and Andy Sullivan doubled to give Winchester four runs and a 4-2 lead. Concord went in order in the second.

In the top of the third Winchester struck again. Bob Marrone walked, Jarrod Galante singled, Bill Shields walked, and Greg Miles singled scoring two runs and advancing the runners. Concord made a pitching change and just as Eric Grant stepped in to hit, the skies opened and the rains fell. The game suspended and picked up again on Monday night.

On Monday night, Grant finally stepped in after a 24-hour time at bat and singled, driving in a run. Grant stole second and two more runs scored on a double by Paul McGowan for a 9-2 lead. Concord was not through however and tallied four in their half of the third making the score 9-6.

Winchester racked up five more in the fourth on hits by Galante, Grant, McGowan, Cucinatti, McGovern, and Marrone.

This made the score 14-6. Concord again fought back against relief pitcher Mike McGovern for a run in the fourth and two more in the fifth making the score 14-9 and putting them right back in the game. In the top of the sixth, Winchester dashed any hopes that might have remained in Concord by scoring five more times.

McGowan, Cucinatti, Sullivan, McGovern, Marrone, Galante and Mike Pacheco all had hits for the locals. In the bottom of the sixth, Concord led with a base hit but could get no more. The final score was 19-9, Winchester.

This game featured a strong performance by the entire team. Eric Grant pitched well and added three hits. Mike McGovern pitched well in relief and added two hits. Paul McGowan and Jarrod Galante had three hits each. Steven Cucinatti, Andy Sullivan, and Bob Marrone had two hits each. Winchester had 21 hits in all. Mike Pacheco and Bill Shields had their first hits of the tournament.

NEWPRO All-Stars advance to district championship.

Advancing
On Thursday night the NEWPRO All-Stars played for the winners bracket championship against Dracut. Dracut opened the top of the first inning with the leadoff batter hitting one deep of the centerfield wall for a homerun and a 1-0 lead. After two strikeouts, Dracut got a single and a double and a hit batter to load the bases. Andy Sullivan ended any thoughts of a big inning with his third strikeout of the frame.

Winchester came to bat in the bottom of the first and Paul McGowan quickly started the NEWPRO offense with a line single to center.

After a strikeout, Andy Sullivan blasted a homerun to deep right field and a 2-1 Winchester lead. Dracut went in order in the second. Winchester tallied five times in the bottom of the second on base hits by Bill Shields, Eric Grant, Paul McGowan, Steven Cucinatti, a walk to Sullivan, and RBI doubles to Mike McGovern and Bob Marrone leaving the score 7-1 after two innings. Sullivan struck out six over the next three innings and allowed only one hit.

Winchester on the other side was held quiet by strong Dracut relief pitching. In the top of the sixth Dracut mounted an attack. They got three hits and three runs before a game ending ground out to Steven Cucinatti at second base.

All in all a strong effort by the home team. The strong hitting continues and the big inning has been the trademark of this team. Sullivan pitched a strong game although not his best striking out 10 and walking none. He gave up seven hits and hit a batter. Paul McGowan continues to be a tower of strength in the leadoff position for Winchester.

Winchester now plays for the district championship on Saturday against the winner of the losers bracket. (See related story for report of that game.)

Swiss Stone wins

Mark Lawson at the plate to end Swiss Stone's first drive of the night.

While Harpoon was able to make some key plays in the field, they were struggling at the plate to make a stronger mark on the scoreboard.

Swiss Stone again mounted an offensive attack in the fifth inning. Jeff Lawson singled to right field, Ganem flew out, but sent Lawson to second, followed by Burns' single. Harpoon threw home to keep Lawson at third, while Burns moved to second.

Doug Lawson hit a sacrifice fly, plating his brother, followed by Holding's single which sent Burns over the plate, bringing the score to 6-1. A drive by Mark Lawson put men on first and third, and Dattilo's single racked up another run for Swiss Stone.

Harpoon began a late rally, but to no avail, as the game ended 8-2.

Swiss Stone Manager Mark Lawson cited teamwork by Gary Brayboy and John Ganem, who totalled six double plays in two games, as key factors in both wins. "We also had some clutch hitting," he said, adding that pitcher Mike Walsh "held them in check."

Award winners

Two Winchester residents received special varsity sports awards at Belmont Hill School for the spring sports season. Michael J. Ricciardelli, left, son of Dr. Louis A. and Mrs. Josephine Ricciardelli, received the award for most improved lacrosse player. Robin B. Shahani, a member of the tennis team and son of Drs. Bhagwan T. and Maya B. Shahani, was awarded the Sawyer Sportsmanship Award.

unable to make a move in the top of the seventh, and Lombardi's walked away with another win.

The two had faced each other in a closer battle last week, with Pisces slipping by Lombardi's, number one ranked in A League softball, 4-3. In a game that went into extra innings, Pisces snagged a win in the bottom of the ninth, in what Pisces Manager Jay Hosmer called a "well-played game."

Although Pisces was down four key players, Hosmer said the team "really pulled together."

"It was the most intense game I've ever played in," agreed Pisces catcher John Frongillo.

"Both sides played great defense," said Hosmer. "We've been playing well lately."

"Somebody's got to win the game, and we blinked last," he added.

"I'm not afraid of what we did here tonight," Hosmer said of Sunday night's match-up. Citing Lombardi's as "the best defensive team in the league," Hosmer added, "We're just as glad to play well every game as to win some. At this point, it's playing a good game and getting the guys here [that matters]."

PEOPLE

Harvard

Harvard University granted 5,600 undergraduate and graduate degrees for the 1989-90 academic year at its 339th Commencement Exercises on June 7. More than 20,000 graduates, alumni/ae and guests attended the traditional ceremony in Harvard Yard. Among those students were three Winchester residents.

Dennis Allen Clarke, graduated with a bachelor of arts in history and literature; John Charles Serieka, graduated with a bachelor of arts in economics; and Lester L. Lien, graduated cum laude in field with a bachelor of arts in biochemical sciences.

Denison

Two Winchester residents were among 519 graduates awarded degrees at Denison University's 149th commencement held May 13. Those awarded bachelor's degrees from Denison include: Kyle James Bairnsfather, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Bairnsfather, of Copley Street. A graduate of Winchester High School and a psychology major at Denison, Bairnsfather earned a bachelor of arts degree.

Kevin Joseph Racek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Racek of Arlington Street. A graduate of Winchester High School and an art history major at Denison, Racek earned a bachelor of arts degree.

Culinary Institute

Shawn M. Powers, son of John A. and Gail D. Powers of Woodside Road, was awarded an associate degree in occupational studies on May 18 from the Culinary Institute of America.

While attending the Culinary Institute of America, Powers was a member of the Ice Carving Club. His four month externship was completed at the Sheraton Boston Hotel and Towers.

Colby

Scott H. Kessel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald H. Kessel, and Suzanne M. Quill, daughter of Attorney and Mrs. Henry F. Quill, both of Winchester, were two of 454 seniors who received bachelor of arts degrees at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, on May 27.

Quill graduated magna cum laude with distinction in her major, English and Kessel graduated with a major in economics.

Quill, who was recently inducted into the Main Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, was a dean's list student at Colby. She was involved in a student-organized social outreach program, and also participated in performing arts productions. She spent a sophomore Jan Plan studying Spanish in Cuernavaca, Mexico and a junior semester at University College in London, England.

Quill plans to attend Boston University Law School.

Army

Maj. Andrew R. Twomey has completed the Army Command and General Staff College regular course at Fort Leavenworth, Leavenworth, Kan.

The regular course at the Army's senior tactical school produced graduates who are competent military problem solvers. Emphasis was placed on career development for the officer's future duties as a senior commander or staff officer.

Twomey is the son of John A. and Dorothea M. Twomey of Prospect Street in Winchester.

He graduated in 1973 from Winchester High School, and received a master's degree in 1986 from the University of Chicago.

Dickinson

Two Winchester residents are among approximately 500 students who will attend Dickinson College this fall.

Stephanie Tosi Lawlor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Lawlor of Everett Avenue and Kara Lynne McGillicuddy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. McGillicuddy of Cox Road will head to Carlisle, Pa., to attend Dickinson.

Wentworth

Winchester residents were among those 603 students to graduate at Wentworth Institute of Technology commencement exercises held recently.

Fifteen years: Evelyn Trageser.

Local youth has a space adventure

Charlotte Milstein of Winchester trained for a space adventure and explored the future of scientific exploration at U.S. Space Academy Level I in Huntsville, Ala.

Space Academy trainees in grades 7, 8 and 9 sample astronaut training by using Multi-Axis Training Simulator, an adaptation of early Mercury program training equipment.

Trainees also bounce high in the air while experiencing the Microgravity Training Chair, which is similar to equipment Apollo astronauts used in training for missions to the Moon. They also spin and turn in the Five Degrees of Freedom Trainer, which was used by Gemini astronauts preparing for early spacewalks.

Space Academy Level I trainees use the nation's only full-scale Space Shuttle exhibit to get a better understanding of how the shuttle works. Then they use Space Academy's realistic mission control and Space Shuttle orbiter mockups for training prior to a pair of simulated space missions.

Each team of 20 trainees is divided for the missions, with half in mission control, monitoring activities aboard the shuttle. Each person has a specific task: mission director, flight director, principal investigator and more. All must work as a team with the shuttle crew to ensure a successful mission.

The orbiter crew includes a commander and pilot, whose controls move the hydraulically-powered cockpit. Mission specialists don space suit mockups and are strapped into spacewalk simulators for work outside the orbiter. Others perform experiments using Space-lab and Skylab hardware that was used for actual astronaut training.

At NASA's nearby Marshall Space Flight Center, trainees watch as engineers and scientists design and build prototypes of the 1990's Space Station Freedom.

They also enjoy the many hands-on activities and demonstrations at the U.S. Space and Rocket Center. And they learn the history of space exploration by touring the Space Center's rocket park, the most comprehensive collection of manned spaceflight rockets on Earth.

Space Academy also offers the advanced, college-accredited, Space Academy Level II, an eight-day program for high school students, and Aviation Challenge, a five-day program patterned after the training of high performance jet pilots.

"Here Comes The Bride"

Tradition

1926: a Wedding Reception is held in the George Washington Ballroom and 50 years later in 1976 a 50th anniversary for the same couple is held in the same room...1952: John F. Kennedy announces his candidacy for Congress...1975: Joseph Kennedy Jr. makes his same announcement in the same Ballroom...1938: a young couple hosts a Christening party for their infant daughter...1961: the same young lady returns to the George Washington Ballroom to celebrate her Wedding. This is how "History is made" at the Sheraton Commander.

Mr. Formal, 411 Waltham St., Lexington has been in business for over 21 years. Featuring the contemporary and traditional stylings of Christian Dior and "After Six". Mr. Formal is offering these lines on a special for all weddings booked at their present location. All outfits will be priced at $55 if reserved before July 31st.

The reason for this special price is that Mr. Formal has moved to a new and larger location at 411 Waltham St., Lexington in July. Only 1½ miles down the same road, this new store will enable Mr. Formal to keep prices low and quality high. Remember, the grooms tux is for free with a party of six or more.

SCHOOLS

Filtzer earns Newton

Country Day diploma
Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart recently held commencement exercises for the class of 1990.

Among the thirty-six graduates who received diplomas was Siobhan Filtzer, daughter of Mrs. Marigrace Filtzer of Winchester. Filtzer will attend Simmons College.

Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart, an independent, Catholic, college-preparatory school for girls in grades 5 through 12, was established in 1880.

Methodist Nursery School raises funds for Easter Seals

Youngsters from Methodist Nursery School in Winchester hoped to help people with disabilities, raising $885.45 in an Easter Seal Hop-n-ing.

The children spent the previous week learning about disabilities — what causes them, how disabilities affect people's everyday lives, the equipment used to cope. After that, they were ready to help.

Each child secured pledges from family and friends for every hop performed during a three-minute Hop-n-ing. The funds raised help provide Easter Seal services for men, women and children with disabilities.

Easter Seal services include: summer camp, therapeutic swim programs, home health care, physical and occupational therapy, speech therapy, equipment loan, support groups for people recovering from strokes and information and referral services.

Last year, more than 12,000 children across Massachusetts learned about disabilities and hoped for Easter Seals, raising $225,000. The Hop-n-ing is sponsored by the TJX Companies, Inc.

Dallow receives Winsor diploma

Katherine Celeste Dallow of Winchester was graduated on June 8 at the 104th commencement of the Winsor School, Boston.

She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard L. Dallow. She received five awards at graduation, including the field hockey and squash awards, the best all-around athlete trophy, the science prize and the Charles Butcher Foundation science essay prize.

Next year Dallow will attend Princeton University.

Grant graduates

from Hebron Academy

The administrators of Hebron Academy in Hebron, Maine, recently announced that Benjamin Lee Grant, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Grant of Winchester, graduated on Saturday, June 2.

Grant received honors for academic excellence during his junior year and was active in football, recreational skiing, lacrosse, tennis and conditioning.

Hebron Academy, founded in 1804, is a college preparatory secondary school for boarding and day students located in the Oxford Hills of western Maine.

Barone contributes to book on P-38s

Dr. William D. Barone contributed to new book published "P-38 Lightning Commemorative History Book" recently by the Turner Building Company of Paducah, Ky., "The classic lines of the Lockheed P-38 Lightning identify one of the best fighter planes of WWII. It fought in every theater of operation and was loved by its pilots for its speed, performance and firepower, and for the safety edge given by its two powerful engines. It could take a beating, lose one engine and still get home," says the book.

Barone served as flight surgeon to P-38 pilots in the European theater of operations and states that his most thrilling flight was in May, 1945 when his commanding officer, Robert Holbury of Pontiac, Michigan flew him from Nuremberg, Germany to Rome, Italy... Piggy-back. "Since it was only a one-seater plane, there was no room for another parachute. Flying over the Alps at 18,000 feet, one oxygen mask served both of us," said Barone.

The P-38 served as bomber escort, day/night fighter, precision bomber, long range photo reconnaissance plane, tank buster and in numerous other capacities.

The book is dedicated to the men who designed and test flew the Lightning and to the men and women who flew the P-38 during WWII. The plane is a legend in the history of Airforce.

The book is a hard black covered volume with silver lettering and the Lightning plane. It is 144 pages of historical facts and photos.

marketing at LeaseFirst in Michigan, Vancini will be responsible for developing a national telemarketing effort for Bell Atlantic Tri-Con's Vendor Service Group. The program will involve telemarketers stationed in each of the company's four U.S. regions and is intended to complement Tri-Con's direct sales initiative.

Vancini will report directly to James Vandervalk, Senior Vice President. Vancini graduated from the University of New Hampshire, Plymouth State, with a bachelor's degree in business.

Harris named

assistant headmaster
Charles P. Harris has been appointed assistant headmaster of the Landmark School in Prides Crossing.

A graduate of Tufts University, Harris has been director of administration at the Germaine Lawrence School, a residential center for adolescent girls, located in Arlington.

Harris returns to Landmark having served the school in a variety of administrative capacities since 1971.

Recognized internationally as a leader in the education of children and adolescents with dyslexia, Landmark offers a variety of academic and tutorial programs to enable students to realize their maximum potential.

Harris and his wife Mabs are the parents of five children. They live in Winchester.

Resident honored by Liberty Mutual

As part of Liberty Mutual Insurance Company's Employee Recognition Program, Roseann C. Gulla-Devaney, of Winchester was recently awarded Liberty Mutual's Individual Award. This award honors those employees who demonstrate outstanding job performance and policyholder service well beyond what is required to fulfill the responsibilities of their position. The number of recipients is limited to two percent of the total of Liberty Mutual employee population.

As a symbol of her achievement, Gulla-Devaney received an emerald-shaped crystal paperweight etched with the company logo.

Gulla-Devaney, a service representative in the personal sales department at Liberty Mutual's Lexington office, joined the company in 1983. She and her husband, Paul, live on Allen Road.

accounting group

Stephen R. Dooley, Partner of Mullen & Company, a Boston certified public accounting firm, recently addressed a group of accounting professionals on the subject of estate planning for a closely-held business owner. Two days later he spoke at two sessions of the fifth annual construction industry conference. Dooley gave a panel discussion on the tax law changes that have affected the construction industry. These discussions were sponsored by the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Dooley, a resident of Winchester, is partner-in-charge of Mullen & Company's tax department and specializes in closely-held corporations. He is listed as one of the top tax planners in the industry in Money magazine's fall 1987 issue. He also is a co-author of a book entitled "Personal Financial Planning."

Arlington career 'imagineers' teach clients

By Maureen McLellan

STAFF WRITER

Picture a group of professional men and women in their 30s, 40s and 50s sprawled across a floor with paper and magic markers making posters "about who they are."

This may sound like a description of a New Age encounter group, but it is actually a typical scene from sessions at CareerScape, an atypical career consulting business that aims to help people identify and pursue their "dream jobs."

Such seemingly simple exercises as drawing pictures are designed to get people to stop thinking about how to match their skills to the job market and start letting their imaginations literally run wild, says CareerScape co-founder Ken Lizotte.

One client compared the interactive group sessions to "therapy once a week."

"People start to get in touch with that child-like sense of themselves," Lizotte said.

He says the people who are most successful at finding satisfying jobs do not rely on formulas, networking, job fairs or slick resumes but on their own beliefs in what they want and their commitment to attaining it.

He said the concept of pursuing one's ideals as well as a regular paycheck has struck a chord in baby boomers, who make up the majority of CareerScape clients.

"If you look at research on baby boomers, you'll find they're not terribly different from when they were college activists," said Lizotte, who is in his early 40s. "A lot of us have gotten into the work world with the idea of changing things, but institutions move slowly."

Lizotte and partner Barbara Litwak started the Arlington-based business two years ago after spending 1½ years researching their subject. It appears from the dramatic growth of CareerScape and from clients'

It's time the U.S. provided time off to care for sick children

By Amanda Smith

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE

"We get five days off each month to care for a sick child, but if we don't use it, we can't save it for the next month," a young mother in Prague, Czechoslovakia, complained to me during a trip there.

"Children don't always limit their sickness to five-day periods."

"In the United States," I told her, "most people get no time off at all to care for a sick child."

She stared at me, shocked.

I remember how my secretary, Connie, a young single mother, had struggled every time her daughter was ill, juggling office responsibilities and frantic calls to doctors and day care. Her whole life would have been different if she'd had some time off with pay.

But surely, I thought, the cost would be exorbitant. This must be an example of why communist economies are crumbling, top heavy with too many benefits and no incentives to work.

When I returned to the United States, I decided to do a little investigating.

According to an International Labor Office survey, it's true that 11 European socialist countries have child-care leave. So do 19 European market economy countries. So do 97 other countries in Africa, Asia, the Pacific, the Middle East, North and South America. And most have leave with pay.

Japan gives 12 weeks, with 60 percent pay. West Germany gives 14 to 19 weeks with 100 percent. These nations are not crumbling. But even impoverished Ethiopia thinks that leave to care for sick children is a priority.

What is the connecting principle between these countries? It's not economics. It's not politics. It seems to be a belief that it's important for people to be able to take care of their families.

Who's not on the list? The United States, Oh, and China.

There was a Family and Medical Leave Act approved in Congress, but it was vetoed by President Bush. Had it become law, it wouldn't have caught us up with the rest of the world. Because of limitations excluding businesses with fewer than 50 employees, it wouldn't have changed anything for 95 percent of the employers and 61 percent of the workers in the United States.

Unpaid leave could have been taken to care for a newborn or adopted child, or for serious illnesses such as cancer. However, chicken-pox and the flu, the type of illness that most parents need time off for, weren't even covered.

President Bush promised to veto the bill, reflecting fears from the business community that this benefit will lead to others. As conservative critic James Kilpatrick put it, "Parental leave is a light burden, but so was the one that broke the camel's back."

Whoa. Which camel?

The government camel? Then maybe we'd better unload some of the rest of its pack, such as planes that don't fly. Or paying welfare and unemployment benefits to people who only need to have their own jobs waiting for them when the family crisis is over.

The big business camel? Business is carrying the burden now of losing trained workers who have to quit their jobs to care for their families.

Or the individual employee camel? Here's the real point. As things stand now, America's workers are paying the whole price, in anxiety and lost jobs and lost income.

Governments and commerce exist to serve the people, not the other way around. It's time we got that straight.

Dream seekers

Arlington career 'imagineers' teach clients to get in touch with feelings to get the right jobs

Dream seekers. From 1 comments that many have found its somewhat unorthodox strategy effective.

The service has grown from about 50 participants the first year to another 350 the second, Lizotte said.

Some CareerScape clients end up changing their career goals only slightly, while others make drastic changes. Lizotte cited people who have switched from personnel director to theme party organizer, lawyer to weaver, accountant to marketing specialist, factory worker to private detective and scientist to biology professor.

A consultant and education trainer since 1970 and a freelance writer for 12 years, Lizotte himself came to the realization a few years ago it was time to do something different.

"I reached a stage where I realized that on a long-term basis nursing was not going to provide me both the satisfaction and financial rewards I wanted."

Chew-Hoong Koh,
BANKER AND FORMER NURSE

"For most of those years as a writer, it was wonderful, challenging and exciting, but during the last couple of years ... it didn't have that inner satisfaction anymore," said Lizotte. "I was spending too much time alone. A part of me yearned to come out and interact with people."

He teamed up with Litwak, a former communications consultant to Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government who holds a master's in mass communications and an MBA. Litwak's focus is on the marketing and program development part of the business, while Lizotte's specialty is client consultations.

Calling themselves "imagineers," the pair offer one-on-one consultations, nine-session "Dream Team" programs, "Dream Career Weekends" and "Action Evenings" designed to help people go after their dream jobs.

"Initially, we stay away from practical stuff and look at what the blocks are getting in your way. In a lot of ways, we don't identify with traditional career consultants," said Lizotte.

He said the most commonly raised issue in sessions — and one many people never address in their careers — is fear. Lizotte said job seekers fear both failure and success, finding excuses not to pursue goals.

The economy and the perceived lack of jobs in a given field are reasons people often give for not launching an aggressive job search.

But Lizotte calls those who do stick with their plans "career heroes" and tells people "this is a brave thing you're doing."

As for how job hunters should go after what they want when they decide what it is, Lizotte basically advises against trying to do and say all the so-called right things or to set a record for making the most networking contacts.

"This is where most career consulting falls down," said Lizotte. "It puts people off because it's so clinical. You (the employer) want to have someone basically that you like, who you think you can work with and who you think can do the job."

He also says "the best jobs are gotten without a resume. The problem is as soon as you present a resume to someone, you are identified as someone looking for a job. You're sort of filed away."

Instead, Lizotte says, people should send letters to several different people in a company saying they are "exploring new opportunities."

One CareerScape client who is doing just that is a 34-year-old woman who has worked in advertising and fields and, with the help of CareerScape, has pursued both an acting career and one in training and development.

"During the course of this class, I ended up doing a play on the North Shore," said the woman, who requested anonymity.

This summer, she is also scheduled to perform a stand-up comedy routine. In addition, she recently began volunteering at CareerScape to help Lizotte run Dream Team sessions.

She said one of the most important aspects of CareerScape is its "safe environment" and supportive atmosphere. She pointed out that the other members of her Dream Team group attended her play.

David Freeman, who works as a management trainer for The Bottom Line Inc. from his Brookline home, said CareerScape helped him "not settle" for one of a number of offers he received in the training field. A Yale University graduate with an MBA from Columbia, Freeman, 36, taught at Boston University.

He said he has spent large sums of money on career consulting over the years, but never found it as effective as CareerScape.

"I was looking for a company that was a little bit special," said Freeman.

He said that while many training programs involve standing in front of large groups of people, he prefers working one-on-one — which he does as a Bottom Line trainer.

Chew-Hoong Koh, 31, was a nurse "trying to get more focused" about a career change when she came to CareerScape last year.

"I reached a stage where I realized that on a long-term basis nursing was not going to provide me both the satisfaction and financial rewards I wanted," she said.

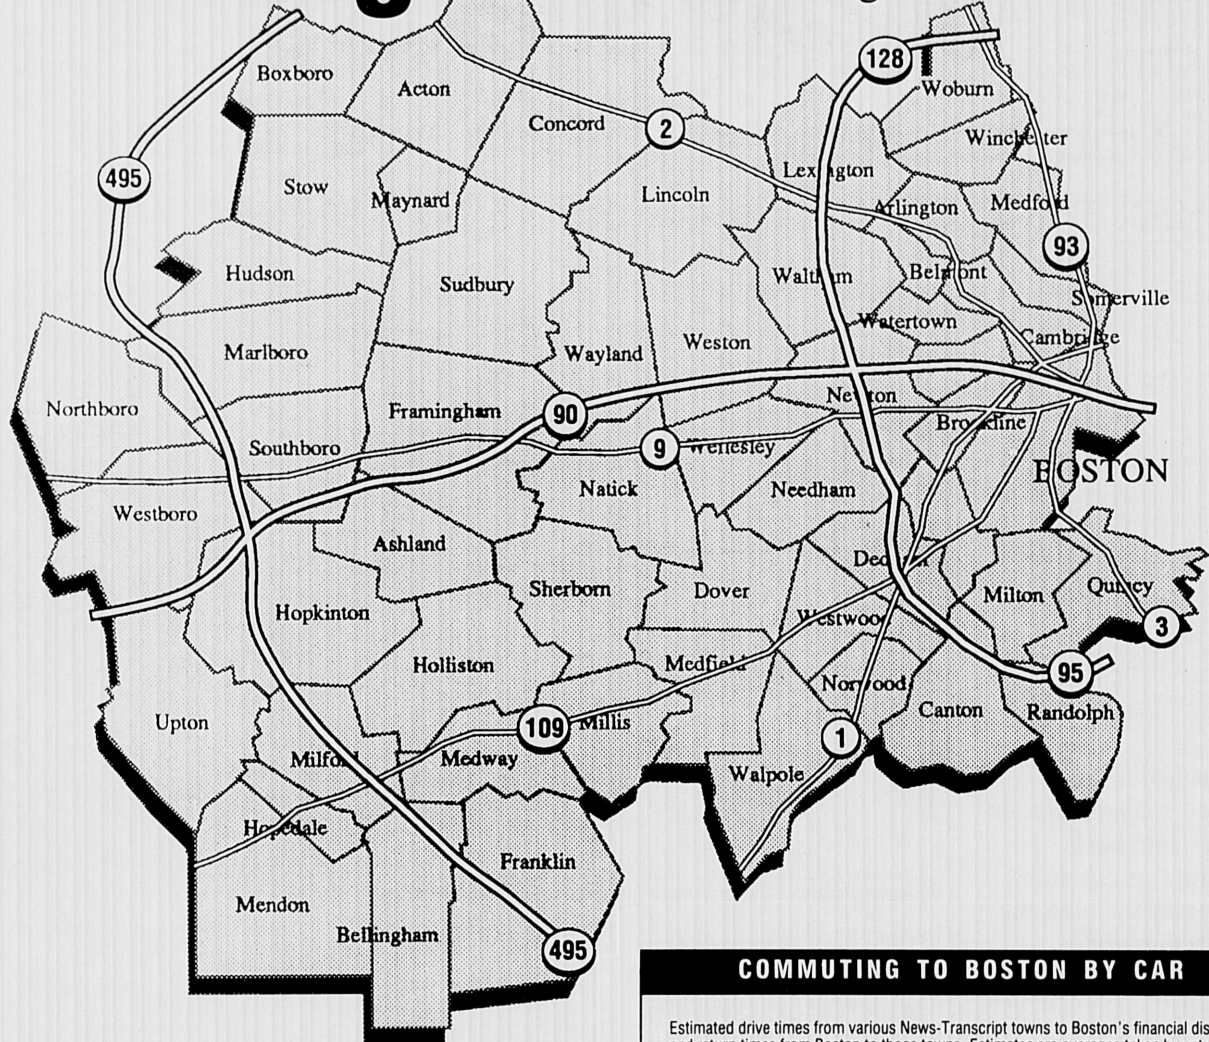

Koh now works as an account executive in the Concord branch of the Bank of Boston, using the communication skills she developed as a nurse in the business setting she longed for.

Koh said Lizotte's bold but playful approach to Dream Team sessions did not lead her to a specific job by the end of the program, but helped her find "the things that were important to me."

Two groups discuss quality education

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

Members of the School Committee and Board of Selectmen agree selling town-owned property is not the best alternative for raising additional revenue.

In the first of a series of joint meetings on educational quality, the two groups agreed to meet quarterly to work on maintaining quality education, projecting revenue and identifying alternative sources of revenue.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer outlined budget projections for fiscal year 1992 (FY92). At present, Maurer projects estimated revenue for FY92 at $31,348,000, while the anticipated budget is $31,186,930, with no wage adjustments for municipal employees.

However, after considerable discussion, Selectman Robert Deering noted that without widespread support for the sale of properties, the School open for at least one more year. As part of that agreement, the two groups agreed to meet quarterly to work on maintaining quality education, projecting revenue and identifying alternative sources of revenue.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer outlined budget projections for fiscal year 1992 (FY92). At present, Maurer projects estimated revenue for FY92 at $31,348,000, while the anticipated budget is $31,186,930, with no wage adjustments for municipal employees.

However, after considerable discussion, Selectman Robert Deering noted that without widespread support for the sale of properties, the

'The Vinson Owen School allowed a lot of people to hide from the basic issue.'

group should attempt to maximize revenue from leased properties, and move on to other topics of discussion. Any increase in lease would result in little additional revenue for the town, Deering said, and other members agreed.

Sullivan kept discussion focused, and noted that the issue of finding alternative sources of funding "is a complicated one and one that will understandably take a lot of time."

Sullivan outlined a number of possible sources, including the sale or lease of the following town- or school-owned properties: Mystic School, Parkhurst School, Sanborn House, Carriage House, railroad station building, town-owned houses. He also suggested as topics of discussion municipal fees, school fees, and the school tuition revolving account.

Selectman Judith Muggia spoke twice on what she saw as a need to determine what residents should pay for with taxes and what they should not.

"If these two committees can agree on a policy, at least we have a floor on which to build," she said.

Muggia later said of the revenue question, "It isn't just this year or next year, it's on-going. What is the policy here? What we need to work on is a policy basis and let the money come second."

However, discussion shifted to the subject of town- and school-owned property when Selectmen Chairman Steven Powers cited a letter sent by his board to the School Committee regarding the upcoming renewal of the lease of the former Parkhurst School. That site is currently let to the Bartlett School.

Powers said he wanted to know whether the School Committee was in favor of selectmen renewing that lease, or if any consideration had been given to reconfiguring the schools to use either the Parkhurst or Mystic buildings.

School Committee member Alice McCarter said the group would need to determine the relative size of the buildings, and what the expected lease would be from Parkhurst versus Ambrose.

Superintendent of School Dr. Charles Mitsakos added that it

Star moves to temporary offices

Local residents and groups should drop off press releases for The Winchester Star at the paper's temporary offices at 27 Waterfield Road starting Monday, July 23.

The Star relocates to temporary offices during renovations of the 3 Church St. building. The Star has signed a temporary lease with the town of Winchester for space at the old train station, above the Chamber of Commerce.

The Star building was sold in May to Wadsworth Realty Trust, and will be renovated by that company.

The Winchester Star has signed a long-term lease with Wadsworth Realty Trust, and will move back into the 3 Church St. site once renovations are complete.

Water project causes potholes

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

The price of better water pressure in an area of Winchester appears to be an obstacle course of potholes on the roadways.

A project started in the spring to increase water pressure in the north end of town by reconstructing several water mains and cleaning and lining other mains, has apparently inconvenienced some motorists and pedestrians in the area.

At the Board of Selectmen's July 16 meeting, Town Meeting member Michael Saraco described the condition of many roadways in the area as covered with depressions in the asphalt a few inches deep in most cases.

Saraco added that the holes on Wildwood Street had been properly brought up flush with the rest of the roadway, but that Water Street, South Border Road and Highland Avenue in particular are in disrepair. Saraco added that a barrel at the intersection of South Border and Highland is a hazard to motorists.

"The actual work may be terrific," said Saraco, "but not the finished product."

Selectman Judith Muggia indicated she had received only positive telephone calls from residents, who were pleased with the project.

Maurer however, added that a correspondence was received from Reverend John H. O'Donnell, pastor of the Immaculate Conception Parish at 1004 Main St.

O'Donnell called the north side of Sheridan Circle "a mess" and said in his letter dated July 5, "It is easy to see that the Town still considers our area unequal to the service to the 'West Side'."

In correspondence dated July 10, Maurer apologized for the inconvenience but added the project is "long overdue, and once completed represents a major improvement to Winchester's water system in terms of water pressure and fire protection. It is unfortunate that positive improvements such as this have to be preceded by the adverse condition that you describe."

Maurer said the work was not yet completed, all the pavement would be brought back up to the level of the street, and the area around the Immaculate Conception Church would also be repaired.

Selectman Robert Deering said a full change of seasons is necessary in order to fill in the depressions to a proper grade. Selectman Thomas Schmitt said the situation with the barrel on South Border Road would also be investigated.

Phonebook listing is serious mistake

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

An embarrassing error in the Winchester Telephone Guide and Directory has left the publisher red-faced and the League of Women Voters steaming.

A proofreading error in the telephone guide, let slip a listing of the League of Women Voters as the League of Women Vultures.

"We're frankly appalled. Unless we find out otherwise, we consider this a deliberate attack on the League," said Lindsay McSweeney, president of Winchester's organization.

"We're taking it very seriously and are working with the publisher to mitigate the damage, if that's possible," added McSweeney.

Stig Bergquist, owner of the printing firm, said he was made aware of

Schatz switches channels

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

Walking through the entrance of 30 Rockefeller Plaza and into her office as NBC field news producer used to be an everyday experience for Carolyn Schatz.

But beginning in September, Schatz will be strolling the ivied halls of Harvard University and MIT on a fellowship, dropping in on classes in behavioral science and soaking up the atmosphere of pure academia.

The 42-year-old Johnson Road resident was with National Broadcasting Company in New York for 12 years as a medical/science producer before trying her hand this year at freelance television production. She's kept her contacts at NBC and has landed several freelance projects for NBC Nightly News and the Today show, and has worked on documentaries for Public Broadcasting.

Recently, Schatz was informed she had received the coveted Knight Science Fellowship for the academic year 1990-91. The fellowship is designed to advance the knowledge of science journalists in their field.

Schatz took the opportunity to switch gears two years ago when the local school system where she lived in New Jersey lost its accreditation. That was the cue for her and her family to move back to the Boston area, and settle in Winchester where her son will start school in September.

Schatz recalls some hectic moments with NBC, like the time she was sent to up-state New York to produce a piece for the lead spot on the news at 6:30 p.m. with Tom Brokaw. The piece turned into what broadcasters call a "hall-runner" or a "crash and burn," when the tape is finished so close to broadcast time, it's simply edited, reworded and

Monday, July 16

10:22 p.m.
 Officer Arthur Houllahan responded to a Fells Road address on a possible breaking and entering. Upon arrival, the officer was met by the owner of the house.

Police discovered a screen on a window had been ripped and the window taken off the tracks, but several plants on the sill had not been disturbed. Inside, the windows were opened, but all doors to the house were closed and locked, according to the owner.

The owner told police the break could have occurred between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. No items appeared to be missing at the time of the initial investigation, reports said.

Saturday, July 14

11:37 a.m.
 Officer Steven Fields stopped a car on Main Street with an expired registration sticker dated June, 1990.

A computer check was run, which confirmed that the registration was expired, said police reports.

The operator of the car, a 20-year-old Arlington man, was advised that the car would be towed from the scene. The owner of the vehicle, who was the passenger at the time, was advised of a citation that would be issued for the expired registration, said reports.

Friday, July 13

8:09 p.m.
 Officer Peter MacDonnell and Auxiliary Chief Halpin were called to Sheridan Circle for a report of a motor vehicle accident involving a house.

On arrival, the officers observed a vehicle backed into a house. Both the car and the house had heavy damage, said police reports.

The operator of the car was a 61-year-old resident of Sheridan Circle. The man had been backing out of his driveway when he accidentally hit the accelerator instead of the brake and crossed the roadway and hit the house directly across the street from his own, said police reports.

According to police, the car was leaking gasoline and the owner of the home found damage to the brick foundation. Sargent John Guarente and Fire Department personnel also arrived at the scene. The driver refused medical treatment and police assessed that the man was not intoxicated, reports said.

The Department of Environmental Protection was notified of the gas leak.

Wednesday, July 11

7:24 a.m.
 Officer Paul Austin was called to a Kendall Street home on a past breaking and entering.

The owner told police he had gone to bed at 12:15 a.m. and awoke at 7 a.m. to find the downstairs rooms had been entered. One item of value was missing from the home, said police reports. Police believed the house was entered through a screen door on the side of the house. An inspector was called to the scene to investigate.

Tuesday, July 10

2:10 p.m.
 Officer Peter Hersee was called to a reported larceny on South Gateway Road. The owner told police she believed the incident might have occurred on Friday when workpeople were in the home to perform maintenance duties.

The woman reported that some cash and a pendant were missing from the home. An investigation continues.

Nelson's Bakery changes hands

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

Downtown shoppers who pop into 2 Mount Vernon St. for a traditional steaming cup of coffee will find the same assortment of muffins and sandwiches on the bill-of-fare — the difference will be the name on the lease and the person behind the counter.

Nelson's Bakery, which has changed hands several times in the last few years, was once again before the Board of Selectmen at its July 16 session.

Selectmen approved the transfer of the common victualler's license from Ernest J. Battinelli, current proprietor of Nelson's to Addezio, Inc., the corporation of Alfred Addezio and his parents Salvatore and Angela, who own Salvo's Bakery at 741 Main St.

Alfred Addezio, 22, will run the bakery and draw from his experience as manager of his parent's bakery.

Winchester Trails

Steve Lewis spoke to the Board of Selectmen on behalf of the Winchester Trails and outlined that organization's plan to raise between $1,000 and $5,000 to repair the boardwalk on Locke Farm Pond conservation land.

Lewis said the target date for completion of the project would be this September so that the conservation area could be used by schoolchildren. Selectmen agreed the money raised would be tax exempt and encouraged the Trails representatives to go ahead with the plan.

Winchester Star

A request by Century Newspapers, publisher of the Winchester

Star, to obtain a staging permit for the erection of the Winchester Star sign over the newspaper's temporary quarters at 27 Waterfield Road was approved by selectmen contingent on a written tenancy agreement.

Selectmen Chairman Steve Powers asked that the lease agreement be put in writing and be considered for approval at the selectmen's next scheduled meeting. The staging permit however, was approved contingent on a written agreement to be presented to the board immediately.

Recall petition stalled

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

The summer months have apparently cooled off the drive to oust two members of the School Committee targeted in a recall petition.

The petition was begun at the same time the School Committee voted 3-2 in favor of closing the Vinson Owen Elementary School, but petition supporters have charged the action was in response to the 3-2 vote to offer Superintendent of Schools Dr. Charles Mitsakos a five-year contract.

The tumult surrounding the recall petition dropped to a whisper however, when Town Meeting voted in June to keep Vinson Owen open.

Town Meeting member Mary Pronski, who helped organize the recall effort, said recently in an interview with the Star that she had "tried to get a meeting scheduled" during the summer, but found many petition supporters were on vacation or out of town.

When asked if the petition had been put on hold indefinitely in lieu of the Town Meeting action, Pronski said she could not comment because it would be "my personal opinion and not that of the committee."

Pronski said she hoped to organize a meeting sometime in the Fall to discuss the action.

School Committee member Alice McCarter and Chairman Donna Brandt Landry were targeted in the recall petition, which drew criticism from the Board of Selectmen.

Also, rumors circulating the town that School Committee member Michael Ronayne would be leaving his post were quashed recently when Ronayne assured the Star he had no intention of relinquishing his seat.

SENIORS

Volunteers give hand to ET program

By MARY P. KELLY
Special to the Star

One of the programs continuing through the summer, at the Jenks Senior Center, is essentially a nutrition and socialization program conducted in a pleasant, air-conditioned atmosphere.

Although the program is underwritten by a contract between the Council on Aging (COA) and Minute-man Home Care (MMHC), through a grant from the Executive Office on Elder Affairs, it depends on volunteers to help with the implementation of the program: people in the kitchen, people who sign in participants, people who play the piano, people who set up the tables, and all those others who perform the tasks necessary for this successful luncheon program.

The Eating Together (ET) site manager, Cay Fleming, directs the program and is assisted by many volunteers, some of whom are pictured in the accompanying photograph. In addition to the "hands on" volunteers, there are three seniors from Winchester who are on the Regional ET Nutrition Council: Norris Fenton, Rena Labadini and Sylvia Saslow, who evaluate and make recommendations to MMHC about this ongoing program.

Transportation by van is offered on the three days the program is offered, Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays, and newcomers are always welcome. The meals and transportation must be signed up for a day ahead.

The seniors enjoy music by volunteer piano players for group singing of old favorites. If you have not already been to one of these lunches, come and enjoy and get acquainted with the program.

Tuition-free

courses for seniors

Coming in September is a tuition-free education program available to Winchester residents over 65 years of age with courses in liberal arts and business administration being offered by University College, a part-time undergraduate division of Northeastern University.

The location, starting in September, will be the Winchester High School, and classes will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings. Although the courses are tuition-free, enrolled seniors will pay fees such as registration, lab and textbook costs. Applications for senior scholarships are available at the Jenks Center or calls may be made to Mary Leahy, Office of the Dean, University College of Northeastern University, 617-437-2412.

Calling all chess and cribbage players

Games Day is scheduled at the Jenks Center each Wednesday afternoon from 1 to 4 p.m., and seniors participate in various games in which skill, socialization and fun are all very important factors.

In cool, air-conditioned surroundings, a good time is had playing cribbage, cards, scrabble, pool and chess. The cribbage players are always looking for more participants. There must be seniors interested in chess in town. Men and women are welcome. Come and join Games Day fun.

Nurses needed

The Jenks Center's Keep Well Clinic is in need of two volunteer nurses (R.N.'s) to assist one or two times each month on Thursday mornings at taking blood pressures and reviewing medications and weights.

Call the Center, 721-7136, if you can help out at this important preventive health program.

The wall comes crumbling down

By CHRIS ALEXANDER
Special to the Star

As the Berlin Wall lies in rubble, and the altered political infrastructure of East Germany is making news throughout the world, one can identify evidence of the massive political change as far across the Atlantic as Winchester, Massachusetts.

For the next few weeks, an East German family is experiencing their first taste of Western culture and American life at the home of the Kingsbury family on Ginn Road.

Michael Dietz, his wife Gabriela and their daughter Klaudia arrived in the United States last week with the knowledge that "the dream we had, the dream of seeing America, would finally become a reality."

Dietz and his family met the Kingsburys little more than a year ago. During a vacation in Europe, the Kingsburys found themselves in a restaurant in Prague at a table for six. The Dietz family sat down with them and they struck up a conversation, despite the language barrier. The two families have corresponded ever since.

Getting off the plane in Newark, N.J. Dietz says, was most exciting. "We saw the New York skyline from the train, there were so many different people... Black, white... Everyone was friendly and easy to talk to."

The contrast to their own hometown of Quedlinburg, East Germany was enormous. A medieval town that is more than 1,000 years old, Quedlinburg has a population of about 30,000 inhabitants and is situated near the Harz Mountains. Dietz has resided there all his life.

The Dietzes are very impressed with Boston, and have thus far visited several of the historical sites, as well as the Children's Museum and the Aquarium. Gabriela was struck by the open displays of fruits and vegetables at the Haymarket. "The presentation is so free," she said. "In East Germany there is much less variety, and you must stand in line for everything. Here there is an abundance of wonderful things."

The Dietzes look forward to the changes coming to their country as a result of sweeping political and economic reform for which they personally helped fight. Since last August, Michael and Gabriela have regularly attended demonstrations, and founded a local chapter of the New Forum, an activist group which has since become famous.

They describe the feelings of their countrymen toward the change as two-fold. "On the one hand, there is great hope for the future," Michael said. "On the other hand there are fears. The young fear for a good job and a good education. Now they shall have to compete with the young West Germans who have been ambitious along, and will have to keep up."

"It's not that the East Germans have no faith in their young people," he added. "It's just such a big change. People are naturally apprehensive. The old are afraid, too, since their pensions will not go up that much and now they shall have to pay higher prices."

Gabriela mentioned there is also a concern for preserving some of the East German ideals and systems. "There are positive things about East Germany," Gabriela stressed. "There is excellent childcare. People feel responsibility to the state—not just themselves. There is a true solidarity which East Germans don't want to see destroyed."

Michael and Gabriela disagree about exactly how long the transition East Germany faces will take. Michael says that in four to five years, the process of melding together with West Germany will be over. Gabriela feels it will take longer.

"West German companies must start to invest in East Germany and that's not happening. It will take considerably longer than five years," Gabriela asserted.

When asked about their preconceptions of America compared to the America they had seen thus far, the Dietz family was struck by the

"You see the reality of America and then you think back to what you were taught in political science class in East Germany. What a difference! We were told that America is a dying, decaying, parastical, capitalist country, which is obviously not true," Gabriela said.

"Also, that there was incredible segregation and racial hatred here... That if a dying black man entered a white man's hospital, he would not be treated. It has been most interesting to see how reality differs from what we've been taught," she added.

Her daughter Klaudia noticed differences of her own. She wondered why people in America were "so rich", while people in Africa were "so poor". She said she was surprised to find out there were people in America living in poverty as well.

The Dietz family will remain in the United States until Aug. 5. They plan to visit Cape Cod, Connecticut, New York City, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and Vermont. They eagerly anticipate the rest of their journey, which for them has truly been "a dream come true."

The hustle and bustle of summer

By DAN CHANE
Special to The Star

On a recent Sunday — the perfect summer's day — Winchester Square was alive with fresh beginnings, comforting familiarity and a few endings.

Many of the town churches that Sunday had combined parishes for the annual Summer Union Services, this week at the Methodist Church, while some of the larger parishes remained in their own buildings as evidenced by Officer Art Houllahan's waved greeting as he executed police detail at St. Mary's on Washington Street.

Down in the square, which the Chamber of Commerce has made cheerful with beds of yellow marigolds and blue ageratum, Joe Polvere of "One or Two Things" (Which always seems to be open for business) was bandying small talk over his counter — while farther down the street, the historic Brown and Stanton Block awaited its impending restoration.

New beginnings downtown also include the renovation of The Star Building, a redesign of Danny O'Connell's Gulf station and the fresh new logo of the Chamber of Commerce displayed in windows of local businesses.

Over at Mill Pond the Canada geese still linger in large numbers — and the observer understands the new "No Feed" sign put up by the Board of Health ended up in the pond last week.

With the endless clatter of the waterfowl dirtying up public areas, it is amusing to notice how the public foul these same areas with all manner of man-made trash — without the slightest notice.

The lovely day also illuminated an ending. The Town Christmas Tree — the so-called Parkhurst Tree — is dead, a silent rebuke to lack of protection during Town Hall construction. A planting of marigolds in a flower box outside of "Bookends" bodes well to follow the same path due to lack of care.

The leisurely stroll also raised questions about the continued run-down condition of the service station at Main and Park Streets — and the shabbiness of "The Block" partially boarded up since a pre-Christmas fire. It was with great difficulty that a town trash receptacle was found that was not overflowing, as well.

The small patches or neglect were far outweighed by the economic health — Shawmut Bank, in the old Parker-Lane Building is completing its new roof, and at Winchester Ltd., jewellers, Dick Malcolm was overseeing a freshening up of his establishment for next week — and Nelson's, behind a large sign advertising "The $1.95 Sandwich," was getting a good going-over for the coming week.

Brigham's was open for a welcome coffee — though it was hard to resist the "Raspberry Ambrosia" cunningly advertised in the window.

In an aside missed by most during the week, the ages past residential character of Thompson Street was revealed as many living upstairs in the old wooden houses opened their front doors to catch the languid summer breezes.

Longtime resident Keith Leonard — stalwart of many a successful Winton Club show — enjoys Winchester for its small town ambience. "It's quiet and peaceful — but sometimes too quiet," he said.

Just then the bell clanged at the fire station, as we stood on Mount Vernon Street, the ambulance manned by Pete Gove and Tim Coss, followed by Engine 3 piloted by David Dalton Jr. and Lt. Bob Walsh flashed by toward an emergency on Main Street.

Although summer in Winchester is quietly reminiscent of another age, this seasonal shut-down is filled with the beginnings, constants and endings of a thoroughly modern town — one preparing for a bright future.

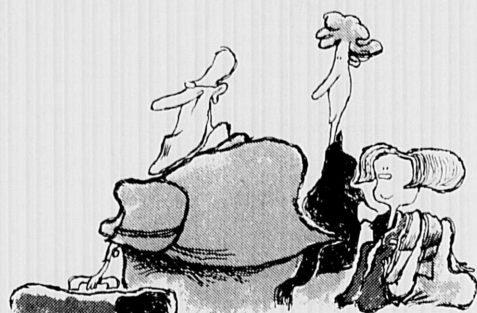

SO... THAT'S A

TOWN... ANYTHING

NewsItem: EAST GERMAN FAMILY VISITS WINCHESTER

The wheels of justice keep churning

By TERRY MAROTTA

If you keep your eyes down when peered at by the Bailiff and refrain from squirting tobacco juice out from between your teeth in front of the judge, then you can learn the answers to all kinds of questions in a court of law.

The first thing you can learn is that it's important to dress nicely. Some don't. They come in beat-up hush puppies and rumpled suits, have facial hair and laughably out-moded Beatles-style haircuts, spend lots of time shuffling around out in the hallways mumbling to each other — and it's only much later that you realize that these people are the lawyers.

The spiffy-looking people in court of course are the criminals. (I mean the alleged criminals, since here you're innocent 'til proven guilty, which is different from how it is in some European countries we could name where you're guilty 'til proven innocent, and very different from how it is in certain near eastern domains where they cut out your tongue first and ask questions later.) Many of the accused wear prom suits, and have hair sculpted like frosting on a wedding cake. They look like screen stars on Oscars night.

If you go to court as part of a school field trip, you can learn several more interesting things like: if you stab someone in the neck he can bleed to death in two or three minutes; if you use a steak knife from a local chop house, it may well break in half; if you are an alien to begin with, you will (a) get a translator for the trial, and (b) see bail set at about a zillion dollars since if they let you out you're likely to take what's known as the Pan Am Defense. The D.A. might say to you as he said to this group that they arrested the steak-knife man several days and showers and trips to the laundromat after the crime was committed, and still when they placed him and his clothes under certain special scanners, he was seen to be drenched in his victim's blood. "There is a way to remove these invisible stains," he added; "but I'm not going to tell you it."

Other business that might bring you to court might occur in connection with a summons involving a speeding ticket.

Another individual might have got a ticket the very same day as you from the same officer, as in this case: That man's turn came first. The charges were read and he was asked if he had any questions. "Yes. Was there or was there not another truck in front of mine, going even faster than I was going?" he began, hoping to prove that the officer had confused the two.

"Not that kind of question," the judge snapped, rolling his eyes. So the man asked instead how accurate the officer's radar was and when he last had it checked. The officer said, "Very accurate" and "That morning." He was found guilty, assigned a stiff fine and ushered promptly away.

So when the person alleged to have been speeding in your car got her turn, she might take a different tack. When asked if she had any questions, she might point out how well and fully the officer had responded to that question in the case before hers. When asked for a statement, she might consider briefly making some remarks along the lines of what lovely blue eyes His Honor has.

There would be more questions about what would cause a nice mother like her to be speeding in the first place, and in the end she might be found not responsible on the grounds of compassion, an excuse not used in her defense since she wet her own and some other people's pants on the camp bus after being chosen last for the big kickball game at Dead Squaw Falls.

Beyond all this, as a visitor to court you can learn other things too: like the fact that there are surprising numbers of babies there; that folks leave graffiti even in that august spot ("Papa Smurf," "Stud Man," "Budweiser"); and that a young lady of 20 or so with very long legs can get the absolute book thrown at her for driving 105 miles an hour on a crowded artery and still feel good enough about life to give her lawyer a lingering and by-the-looks-of-it very wet kiss on the mouth when the whole thing is over.

The wheels of justice still grind on in the various courtrooms of the Republic. Watching them do so is still an instructive experience.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 17 — Report No. 27
Massachusetts House and Senate.
July 6-13, 1990

The House and Senate — "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on 2 roll calls and local representatives' votes on 7 roll calls from July 6-13.

Tax Package (H 6060) — House 80-75, Senate 20-16, gave near final approval and sent to the Governor the conference committee version of the controversial $1 billion plus tax package. The package hikes the income tax, gas tax and capital gains tax and expands the sales tax to hundreds of previously exempt services.

Supporters said the package is fiscally responsible and is necessary to erase the deficit, fund necessary programs and improve the state's dismal credit rating. Opponents said this largest tax hike in the state's history is an outrage which will hurt taxpayers and businesses and lead the state to economic disaster.

A Yea vote is for the tax hikes. A Nay vote is against the tax hikes.

Representative Paul Casey voted no.

Senator Salvatore Albano voted yes.

Suspend Rules (H 6060) — House 112-43 and 113-44, Senate 24-9, suspended rules to allow immediate consideration of the tax hike. Supporters said rule suspension will simply allow immediate consideration of the tax hike.

Opponents said rule suspension will allow tax hike supporters to railroad the hike through the legislature in the dead of night. They urged defeat of rule suspension to allow public input and to allow members to read the language of the bill and find out what is in it.

A Yea vote is for rule suspension. A Nay vote is against rule suspension. The first House roll call is on the 112-43 vote for suspension. The second is on the 113-44 vote.

Casey voted yes on both House roll calls.

Albano voted yes.

Recess to Monday (H 6060) — On Friday at 9:39 p.m., the House 104-50 refused to recess until Monday and later 106-49, again refused to recess until Monday. Recess supporters said sneaking through a tax hike in the dead of night while voters are sleeping or on vacation is undemocratic and outrageous. Opponents said the House should continue debating the package and vote on it soon.

A Yea vote is for the recess. A Nay vote is against the recess. The first roll call is 104-50 defeat. The second is 106-49 defeat.

Casey voted no on both roll calls.

Close Debate (H 6060) — At 2:18 a.m., the House 86-65, approved a motion to end debate on the tax hike at 3 a.m. Supporters said there has been extensive debate and argued it is time to vote. Opponents said shutting off debate is simply another undemocratic move to crush the opposition to this outrageous tax hike which is going to hurt millions of taxpayers and harm the state's economy.

A Yea vote is for ending the debate at 3 a.m. A Nay vote is against ending the debate at 3 a.m.

Casey voted yes.

Deficiency Budget (H 5858) — House 94-54, refused to reconsider its earlier action which sent the $8.7 million fiscal 1990 deficiency budget back to the Ways and Means Committee.

Reconsideration supporters said they wanted to keep the bill on the floor so they can propose amendments to weaken or repeal the $1 billion plus tax hike. Opponents said amendments to the tax hike should be put on hold until the Supreme Judicial Court rules on the constitutionality of the hike.

A Yea vote is for reconsidering sending the bill to Ways and Means.

A Nay vote is for leaving the bill in Ways and Means.

Casey voted no.

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 17 — Report No. 26 (Part 2)
Massachusetts House and Senate.
July 5-7, 1990

The House and Senate — "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on one roll call and local representatives' votes on four roll calls from July 5-7.

Tax Hike (H 6060) — House approved 80-76, Senate approved 21-16, the controversial House-Senate conference committee version of a $1.2 billion plus tax package. The package extends the 5 percent sales tax to several areas of professional services including legal, financial, engineering and architectural but exempts the first $20,000 per year for each purchaser of these services. The tax also extends to many other services including auto and computer repair, entertainment tickets over $30, piped-in music and landscaping work over $100 and to businesses for purchases of electricity, gas, heating fuel and building repairs.

Other provisions include a retroactive hike to Jan. 1 in the income tax to 5.95 percent, a boost to 6.25 percent in 1991 and a drop to 5.95 in 1992 and subsequent years; an increase in the capital gains tax from 5 percent to 6 percent; and an immediate 6 cent per gallon gas tax hike followed by another 4 cent hike in January.

Supporters said the package is a fair and responsible compromise which will eliminate the deficit, improve the state's credit rating and fund necessary programs. Opponents said the package is an outrageous hike which will hurt taxpayers and businesses and lead the state to economic disaster.

A Yea vote is for the tax hike. A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Paul Casey voted no.

Senator Salvatore Albano voted yes.

Deficiency Budget (H 6080) — House 87-56, gave initial approval to an $8.7 million fiscal 1990 deficiency budget including the controversial "workfare" proposal allowing the Human Services Secretary and Welfare Commissioner to implement a program requiring certain welfare recipients to accept public sector jobs or lose their benefits.

Supporters said the package is necessary to close out the books on fiscal 1990 and fund necessary accounts. Some opponents said the package includes waste and unnecessary spending. Others objected to the "workfare" program. (See ROLLCALL, page 7A)

Correction

Due to a typesetting error, a letter from Vinson Owen Coalition Chairman William Galatis was misprinted in last week's edition of The Star.

The following is the corrected portion of that letter:

"An issue of major concern was that class sizes would grow to unsound levels and that split classes would multiply system wide if five elementary schools remained open. We were convinced then and since the debate have verified with school administration that class sizes will remain low with five elementary schools. There will be between 15 and 23 students per class system-wide with the exception of one class of 31 students at Vinson Owen. Also, there will be only one split grade at Vinson Owen and one at Ambrose. This represents a major reduction in the number of split classes system wide. As you can see, the town has made a wise investment and the long term benefits of this decision will be apparent year after year."

The Star regrets the error.

WINCHESTER PAST AND PRESENT

Brown and Stanton block to return to original style

Special to The Star

Jubilation filled the hearts of everyone with a sense of historicity this 29th of June when the stucco defacing the exterior of the Brown and Stanton building came off. Accompanying the excitement, however, has been the question of just what is being done to the building and what will be the result.

To the town's great benefit and the owner's credit, the project has been entrusted to a firm very experienced in historical work. The architect, Alan Schoenegge, the principal architect behind the restorations of the Lyceum building and of 32 Church St., plans to restore the facade to its original appearance as far as possible.

Regrettably, but unavoidably under present conditions, it will not, however, be a 100 percent restoration. "The recent demolition of the stucco," Schoenegge said, "resulted in some very positive things, but also some conditions we will have to accept and do our best to work with."

The restoration plans have evolved somewhat, according to what has been found underneath the stucco. Disclosure of a steel structure, which would require a massive investment to remove, plus serious damage to the sandstone lintels presented serious impediments to a complete renovation. Yet, as the fine-scale demolition continues, aspects of the original structure, such as the recessed brick panels and the tapered sandstone base, are reappearing and being worked into the plans.

The current project will be staged so that only one shop will be inconvenienced at a time and so that all may be open at all times. A completion date is envisioned for this fall.

The Mount Vernon side of the building will be restored virtually completely to its original appearance. Restoration of the doorway leading to the upstairs offices will, in fact, include the return of copper-roofed entrance canopy (not visible in the accompanying photo), complete with verge board detailing. The recessed brick panel already visible on the Mount Vernon wall will be replicated to the left where an old doorway has been covered over, and another such recessed panel is being uncovered where the curve meets the Main Street facade. The shop doorway will be restored to its original position at the corner.

On both Main and Mount Vernon sides of the building, brick denticulation, much of which was destroyed, will again run around the building between the first and second stories, and at the ground level, the stone base, made of sandstone sitting on cement, will be restored. The sandstone beltcourse will also be kept and restored.

At the far right of the Main Street facade, the archway will be returned, though as a display window rather than an entrance. This bay, along with the three bays to the left, will be brought out to the sidewalk, eliminating the recessed walkway (a 1962 renovation). Each doorway will be individually recessed between wooden-framed and awning-covered windows, as originally configured, and will have its own short set of steps, as originally designed. As with the Lyceum building, these steps will be paved with granite.

Because of the steel structure and the destruction that occurred around it, what will not be restored are the sandstone lintels above the windows, the arches over the doors, the exact design of the original windows, and the brick piers on either side of each doorway. The steel (which is located just below where the lintels are in the historic photo) will be clad in copper, the same material to be used for the second-storey gutters and the canopy roof.

Above this, sign panels will cover the destroyed detailing which, according to Schoenegge, is beyond repair. As many courses of brick as possible will be left exposed between these panels and the brick denticulation above.

In short, as much of the original structure and decoration as is possible to keep or restore will be kept or restored, barring the removal of the steel structure and the rebuilding of all the stone piers. Where exact duplication is not possible or advisable, Schoenegge still plans to adhere to the style and feel of the original building.

As soon as financial considerations permit, the second story windows will be restored, though not as part of the present project. At this time, snow guards will be added to the roof. The current project will be staged so that only one shop will be inconvenienced at a time and so that all may be open at all times. A completion date is envisioned for this fall.

"It is a pleasure for me to do this, because I like to contribute to downtown Winchester," said Schoenegge. It will be a pleasure for others also, not only for the sake of the building itself, but also, as Mary McKenna, chair of the Historical Commission, observed, because "the Brown and Stanton building is the keystone building in the downtown historic district" and the entire downtown area will benefit.

"I'm all for it," declared Joe Stanley, whose business, Book Ends, is located in the building. "I think it's

The renovation is, indeed, "great." It is great because the Brown and Stanton building will once more have architectural integrity and be a pleasure to behold. It is especially great because it was not required of the owners. Owners Murray and Quill, who also authorized and funded the restoration of the Lyceum building, are, once again, along with Schoenegge and associates, to be more than commended — extolled — for this contribution to the town. Because of them, the Brown and Stanton building will re-emerge as the imposing and significant structure it was when it first joined the community, served it, and helped it develop.

RECREATION

Dixie Devils perform in Mill Pond concert

On July 25, the Dixie Devils (Dixieland at its best) will perform outdoors. Admission is free but donations will be accepted at the pond to help defray expenses. In case of inclement weather, the concert will be held in the Town Hall auditorium.

Pari's Gourmet Foods of 555 Main St. has available picnic suppers. Call and order by 11 a.m. if interested (721-0554).

Relax and enjoy the music. The concert will start at 7 p.m.

Camp programs

The Recreation Day Camps are located at the McCall Junior High School and at the Lincoln School.

There are several openings available in Session III, July 23 to Aug. 3.

Camp Sunshine, a special program for those age 3 by Jan. 1, 1990 through age 5, has openings in the a.m. and the p.m. classes. The fee is $79. There are also several openings for Session IV, Aug. 6 to Aug. 17. Camp Superfriends (students entering grades 1 and 2) and Camp Sachem (students entering grades 3 to 6) both have openings in Session IV, Aug. 6 to Aug. 17. The fee for the two week session is $139.

Camp Adventure Connection (students entering grades 6 to 8) has four openings in Session IV. The fee is $199 for the two weeks.

Tennis ladder

This new program is open to all youth interested in game play. Supervisors will arrange matches. The fee is $1 per day, payable at the courts. The matches will be Monday through Friday from 3:15 p.m. to 4:15 p.m.

LIBRARY LINES

Wings and Things

The Library's Wings and Things Summer Reading Program for children will present Dick Lucius and his birds of prey on Wednesday, July 25 at 3:30 p.m. Master Falconer Dick Lucius will bring live birds such as a red-tailed hawk, a prairie falcon, a great horned owl, and a golden eagle.

Lucius has more than 35 years experience with birds of prey and holds permits from both the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the U.S. Government to rehabilitate injured raptors and practice the sport of falconry. He cares for a golden eagle under a special educational permit from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

This program is recommended for children aged 6 and up. Free tickets for this event can be picked up in the Children's room. To pick up tickets, children must be registered in the Wings and Things summer reading program.

Storytime

The next evening family story time for two to six-year-olds and their families will be held on Monday, July 23, at 6:30 p.m. in the Children's Room. No registration is required.

For information on children's activities at the library, please call the Children's Room at 721-7140.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

A Yea vote is for the budget. A Nay vote is against it. Casey voted yes.

Workfare (H 6080) — House 119-25, rejected an amendment striking the section of the deficiency budget allowing the implementation of the "workfare" proposal requiring certain welfare recipients to accept public sector jobs or lose their benefits. The amendment would replace "workfare" with a study of the welfare system.

Amendment supporters said workfare is misguided and would create a costly new bureaucracy and "make work jobs" without enhancing the possibility of long term training and employment. Opponents said workfare could save some $100 million annually and simply requires able bodied people to work.

A Yea vote is against workfare and for a study of the welfare system. A Nay vote is for workfare. Casey voted no.

Trucks (H 6080) — House 139-4, approved a deficiency budget amendment reducing licensing fees on commercial trucks over 5,000 pounds from $15 per thousand to $12 per thousand. Amendment supporters said the recent hike from $7 per thousand is excessive and claimed the rollback to $12 per thousand is reasonable. They noted it will help truckers who have experienced enormous fee hikes in licensing, titles, gas taxes and tolls.

Opponents said a comprehensive package is being prepared to help truckers and urged the House to wait for that package. A Yea vote is for the reduction from $15 to $12. A Nay vote is against the reduction. Casey voted yes.

Summer theater underway

The first ever Winchester Cooperative Theater for Children Summer Program is officially underway.

Many Winchester residents are familiar with the Cooperative Theater's spring musicals, of which the most recent was "Sleeping Beauty." Every year children in grades four through six perform a full scale musical production to capacity audiences, an annual event which has become nothing less than a Winchester tradition.

Residents of Winchester will be pleased to know that this year, they won't have to wait until next spring for another Cooperative Theater show. For the next few weeks, 28 students will be rehearsing the WCTC's first summer musical, to be presented in the Lincoln School Auditorium in early August.

The show shall be the culmination of a four week summer program headed by Coop founder and director Catherine Alexander, Musical director Lori Lerman, Choreographer Linda Vacovek, and Producer Pam Jervey.

Every morning, Monday through Friday, the children are given instruction in drama, music and dance. In order to foster an especially relaxed and enjoyable atmosphere, the children work as a group, and everyone takes an active role in all aspects of the production.

"I am trying to make the summer program an entirely different experience than the spring show," Catherine Alexander said. "It's a chance for those students who find theater intimidating to really get comfortable onstage in front of a group."

Alexander stresses that the emphasis will be on the process rather than the product, although the children are preparing an original musical which will be presented to the public.

The show is an original play for children written by Chris Alexander, whose work audiences will remember from the WCTC's spring production of "Sleeping Beauty" for which he wrote the book and most of the lyrics. Chris has integrated music from Broadway shows such as "Gypsy" and "The King and I" into the script, which is titled "The Stuff Friends Are Made Of," making it a musical for both young and old alike.

The children have begun rehearsing, and are having a wonderful time. David Lerman, one of the participants, said, "This has been fun, I like the acting because I haven't done very much before. And we all really get along."

The program will run until the first week in August, when there will be several performances for the public. Show dates and times will be announced later in the month.

Bereavement group meets on July 24

A bereavement support group will be offered by Hospice Care, Inc. to persons who have experienced the loss of a loved one.

This series will be conducted by Jean Marchant, Coordinator of Pastoral Care at Hospice Care in Arlington. The meetings will be held for six consecutive Tuesday evenings, beginning July 24, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Hospice Care office, 21 Maple Street, Arlington.

This group is designed as an opportunity for people to share their experience of loss in the atmosphere of a small, supportive group. Participants need not be associated with Hospice Care. The series is open to all interested bereaved persons. A donation of $25 is suggested to cover the cost of the group.

Reservations to participate in the group are necessary in order to assure we have a specific number. To register for the group or if you would like additional information, please call Jean Marchant at 648-3172.

Learn to save a life

Knowing Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation, or CPR, can mean the difference between life and death. Winchester Hospital's Education Department now offers CPR classes to the community. These classes teach participants how to perform CPR and the Heimlich maneuver; a technique used to dislodge foreign material from the breathing passages.

Instructors demonstrate CPR through Mannequin practice and a special film presentation. Participants who have successfully complete the course will receive a one-year certificate from the American Heart Association.

This CPR course is offered in two part classes — July 23 from 6 to 10 p.m. and July 25 from 6 to 10 p.m. at Winchester Hospital. The CPR course fee is $40 per participant.

Businesses and organizations may call the Hospital's Education Department to schedule classes for members or employees. To register call the Education Department at Winchester Hospital 756-2220.

Hospital offers HOPE program

Losing a child at any age is a traumatic and heart-wrenching experience. For those parents who have lost a child through miscarriage, still birth or within a few weeks of the birth, there is HOPE (Help Other Parents Endure).

HOPE, offered to the community by Winchester Hospital, is a peer-support group to help parents recover from their loss. HOPE will meet Wednesday, Aug. 8 at 7:30 p.m., and continues to meet the second Wednesday of every month.

For more information, call Winchester Hospital's Social Service Department at 756-2633.

Culver ends term as Winton leader

It started in 1911 as 17 young women who got together to sew linens for the local "Little Cottage Hospital." Today, nearly eight decades later, Winchester Hospital's Winton Club is still lending its support with money for linens and a lot more.

Diane Culver, a Winchester resident who recently completed a two-year term as the club's president, said the Winton Club has evolved beyond sewing linens to become an important support to the hospital community. The Winton Club's active members operate the hospital gift shop and put on the annual cabaret show, a widely anticipated review featuring local talent that is held each winter. Active Winton Club members raise money by selling ads in the cabaret program, which sold during the performances.

While economics dictated the end of the sewing in 1979, Culver said the nearly 300 members of the club have pledged $30,000 annually towards the purchase of new linens. During the last two years, the Winton Club's efforts raised an additional $75,000 which went to help expand the hospital's maternity center. It has pledged an additional $25,000 by October 1991, a goal Culver felt would be met easily.

"It's been a very satisfying affiliation for me," Culver commented on her term as president. "In addition to working for something that I feel is a very important part of the community, everybody is extremely cooperative and very dedicated to the cause."

Since joining the club in 1974,

Culver served twice as chairman of the cabaret and took responsibility for the cabaret two other times. Culver will be succeeded as president by Betty Sorger, but still intends to remain active in the Winton Club for "quite some time."

Hospital offers CPR recertification

Did you know your American Heart Association CPR Certificate is valid for only one year? Keep your CPR skills up to date.

Winchester Hospital will offer CPR recertification on July 25 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington. The course fee is $25.

For additional information and registration, call Winchester Hospital's Education Department at 756-2220.

WHEN YOU GET YOUR ESTIMATED SETTLEMENT CHARGES

There is a federal law that requires mortgage lenders to give prospective buyers a written itemized good faith estimate of their settlement charges. People tend to arrive at the settlement table with this document firmly clutched against their chests, questioning each item on their HUD form that does not match perfectly. It makes settlement attorneys crazy.

This is just a reminder that those good faith estimates are just that - estimates. The lender's own charges are fairly accurate, but the charges for attorneys, termite inspections, title insurance, and other items that appear on the sheet are probably going to be a little bit off. So will some of the prorated items, like taxes or home-owner's association fees, if you don't settle on the date that was fed into the equation the lender used to get the estimate. The purpose of the law is to disclose the lender's charges and give you a close idea of how much you must bring to the settlement table. But we can almost promise you that it won't be the penny - probably not even to the dollar!

If you are considering a move, contact the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7800 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester. ***

would be necessary to determine the cost of bringing Parkhurst up to code. Because the School Committee exceeded that building and it is now leased through the selectmen, it is no longer required to meet codes for a public school building, and may need to be updated, he said.

Sullivan encouraged discussion on the possibility of reconfiguring the system. "I don't want to leave this hanging," he said. Sullivan added that such discussion could cause divisiveness in town, similar to that surrounding the Vinson Owen School.

However, he reminded the group its purpose was to address the bottom line — quality education. "The key is for us to put the building discussion behind us a little bit, and out of the way of quality education," said Sullivan. He noted the "building question" would be "a convenient place to hide" from discussing quality education. "The Vinson Owen School allowed a lot of people to hide from the basic issue," he added.

The group also touched on the idea of excessing Lincoln School, which in the past has been targeted as a potential site to gain revenue through a use such as elderly housing. School Committee member Edward O'Connell said he "strongly suggested" the group consider the sale of the Sanborn House, which he said would have no impact on quality education.

Saying the town was a "poor landlord" when it came to leasing property, O'Connell said he did not think leasing buildings brought a significant amount of additional revenue to the town.

School Committee member Mark Lombardi suggested a subcommittee be formed to look into these possibilities.

The group later decided Maurer and the administration would provide technical data available on town-owned property by September for the group's examination.

The group will meet again in October.

Helping out

The ABC (A Better Chance) group in Winchester recently held a bottle drive at the Sons of Italy parking lot to raise funds for the house. The bottle drive was a success with people like John Moore, Ted Martin and Rodger Sudbury helping out.

From broadcasting to academia

played right into the program.

Schatz says a scene from the film "Broadcast News" when the secretary ran down the hall with a tape was a pretty accurate depiction, but adds in true broadcasting, the editor wouldn't trust the tape to anyone and would make the run down the hall herself.

Schatz says when she was at NBC, doors were opened a lot easier with the phrase, "I'm Carolyn Schatz with NBC," and not "I'm Carolyn Schatz, a freelance producer." And she also remembers the phrase "if you can make it in New York, you can make it anywhere."

But while Schatz misses the fast-paced world of broadcast journalism, she doesn't miss the pressure of being "only as good as your last piece."

With a bachelor's degree in English and a masters in broadcast journalism from Boston University, Schatz had virtually no background in science or medicine when she came to New York. But, she says, as she works on pieces and documentaries, she has "learned by osmosis" and has become well versed in many areas of science.

Schatz says the fellowship will give her time to brush up on some fields where she may need more expertise, such as genetics or immunology, and also to pursue her special interests, like neuroscience and the study of human behavior.

Schatz says she'd like to stay in broadcast journalism, but may try her hand at print in the future.

She predicts a bridging between the quick turn-around of a story or event on network television and the often delayed response of public television to such coverage. Schatz says this may be resolved in the form of expanded cable coverage of science and medical events on a timely basis.

The Knight Science fellowships were awarded to eight science journalists for the academic year 1990-91. The group was chosen by a selection committee and on their arrival to the campus in September, the new fellows will be joined by separately funded journalists from foreign countries to be selected this summer.

the error while on vacation July 3 when he received a call from his office.

"Obviously it was an error, but I don't think it was malicious," said Bergquist in a recent interview with the Star. "As best I can determine it was some type of Freudian slip."

Bergquist has accepted full responsibility for not catching the McSweeney has indicated however, her organization plans to pursue "any other course of action to maintain the integrity of the League."

Bambinos win opener

The Newpro Bambino All Stars opened their summer league. The first opponent was Lexington. This game was to serve as a tune-up for the upcoming Bambino State tournament.

Jarrold Galante was the starting pitcher for the locals. After an error and a walk, he retired visiting Lexington in the first. In the home half of the first, after two were out, Andy Sullivan lined a home run deep over the right field fence. Mike McGreener, Bob Marrone, Galante, Tim Zue, and Mike Pacheco each followed with two out hits. This barrage yielded five runs and was all that the locals would need.

Galante rolled through the next two innings, retiring Lexington with no hits and no runs. On the other side, Winchester put men on base each inning and could not score. In the Lexington fourth, Galante was replaced by Bill Shields. Shields took some time to warm up, since he had not pitched in nearly a month. He walked the first three batters he faced.

The fourth Lexington batter of the inning hit a very hard ball to the (See BAMBINOS, page 2B)

All-stars lose in tourney bid

The Newpro All Stars were eliminated in two straight games in the state tournament played at Raynham.

Winchester's first opponent was Easton. Easton opened up the top of the first inning with a two run homer and a 2-0 lead. Winchester answered immediately when Steven Cucinatti walked and Andy Sullivan hit a towering fly ball to the opposite field for home run and a tie score. Both teams went quietly in the second and Easton went again in the third. Winchester took the lead in the third when Cucinatti again walked and Sullivan lined a home run deep to right field. The top of the fourth proved to be the most critical of the tournament for Winchester. Easton sent 14 men to the plate.

Easton mounted a seven hit attack and Winchester committed three critical errors. Most of the seven hits were of the seeing eye variety which created much frustration for the home crew. When it was all over, Easton had 8 runs and a 10-4 lead.

However, Winchester was not ready to roll over. Eric Grant lead the home fourth with a base hit. Paul McGowan followed with a hit, Sullivan walked, Bob Marrone walked and Jarrod Galante doubled giving Winchester 3 runs. Trailing 10-7, Jarrod Galante relieved starter Andy Sullivan. He yielded a run in the fifth and gave Easton an 11-7 lead. Winchester put two men on in the fifth and again in the sixth but could not score.

The Winchester team gave a valiant effort but, just did not have enough to come back in this game. Jarrod Galante pitched well in relief and added three hits in the game. Paul McGowan added two hits along with Andy Sullivan who had two home runs. The total collapse of the defense caused the problems in this game.

On Sunday, Winchester played host team Raynham in the losers bracket. The simple story of this game was pitching. Raynham's Otto (See TEAM, page 2B)

Local athletes take part in Bay State games

A number of Winchester residents will be taking part in the 1990 Bay State Games, to be held from July 19-22 at several area athletic fields.

The program, presented by Bank of Boston in association with the Bay State Health Care, Prime, and New England Telephone will include baseball, basketball, fencing, field hockey, gymnastics, ice hockey, lacrosse, soccer, table tennis, track and field, volleyball, and wrestling, as well as three on three in basketball, and six on six in soccer.

Many of the Bay State Games events boast their strongest lineups ever, with the apparent balance of strengths in several sports making this year's competition the most difficult to handicap in years.

By the time the count is completed, the total number of games participants in 1990 is expected to be more than 9,000.

The finals are the showcase of the best in Massachusetts Amateur Sports.

From Winchester, Brittany Boulanger, Sara Ciotti, Michael Cramer, Emily Lewis, Stephen Mueller and Courtney Perkins will be participating in soccer.

Tony Fortunati, Jeffrey Foster and Gerard Marino will compete in the wrestling program.

Taking part in the lacrosse programs will be Melissa A. Lowe, Jamie J. Mabardy, Patrick Mulvaney and Anthony B. Sartin.

Winchester's Girls Under-10 Division 3 spring soccer team is shown holding the trophies they earned for winning their section with a 9-1 record. Winchester's team featured a tenacious defense with outstanding goalkeeping that allowed only six goals all season, combined with a well-balanced offense in which eight of the girls scored at least once.

Division 3 play is in a six-versus-six format so that each player gets a maximum of ball-handling experience and field responsibility.

Coach Steve Lynch said, "Our success this season illustrates the depth of Winchester's soccer program. Most of our girls had played three years of fall soccer and that experience really showed against the other towns. And I'm sure the skills we developed this season will contribute to the fall program in turn."

Ken's topples VFW

By KAREN BUCKLEY

Star Editor

Meeting the VFW team on the diamond was something Ken's Sub Shoppe was looking forward to — and in the end, was something they were glad they did.

In a battle to end all battles, Ken's squeaked by VFW 6-5 in men's softball B league action Tuesday night. The win secures a second place standing for Ken's, providing a guaranteed slot for play-off action.

Both went scoreless in the first inning, but in a play that could have changed the outcome of the game, VFW had a run called back when a player failed to tag third base.

Opening the second inning, VFW's Dave Tamulymas flew out to left field, but Jim MacKenzie quickly picked up the pace with a single. Mark Bingel's double moved MacKenzie to third, setting up Jim Saunders, whose ground ball drove MacKenzie home and put VFW on the scoreboard.

Ken's Chris Morris led off the bottom of the second with a single. Jon Pooler followed up with a double, putting men on second and third. Although bat and ball were connecting, it almost seemed Ken's might remain scoreless when Jim Doherty and Dave Johnson flew out. But Jim Galipeau's single drove in Morris, tying the score at 1-1, before the inning ended.

Not wanting to leave things hanging, VFW came back in the third with a series of singles by Scott Bell and Mike Carney, resulting in another run. But a key defensive play by Ken's stopped VFW, leaving men on base. With men on first and second, a ground ball was hit to second baseman Jon Pooler, who dove for the base outstretched to nab the forced runner, putting an end to VFW's drive.

VFW again tallied runs in the fourth, bringing the score to 4-1. Tombolinas and MacKenzie, who both reached base on singles, were eventually plated.

But Ken's came back strong, tallying two more runs, coming within one run of VFW. Richie Queen opened the second half of the inning with a single, and was soon driven home on a hit by Ben Budds. Morris' sacrifice fly plated Budds. Jon Pooler then was tagged out on a relay from second baseman Dave Bernadini to shortstop MacKenzie. Singles by Jim Doherty and Dave Johnson made it seem Ken's was ready to start another rally, but a grounder by Galipeau forced the runner out at first and ended the inning.

VFW rallied again in the fifth, when a hit by Cahill was bobbled, and resulted in another run for VFW.

Not about to give up, Ken's battled back in the bottom of the fifth to gain what would eventually be the game-winning run.

Things started slowly as Eric (See KEN'S, page 2B)

James is victorious in NELTA

By ALEX POPP

Special to The Star

Over the beautiful week-end of July 6, 7 and 8 unseeded Lance James swept through the first N.E.L.T.A. Sanctioned Tennis tour-namment held in Winchester defeating Rob Miller 6-2, 6-2 in the finals.

James, who has won the town tournament the last two years, took all five matches he played without losing a set. In the championship match he constantly kept Miller of Newton off-balance and out of position with crisp groundstrokes and excellent volleys.

Miller, who is ranked 10th in the New England 35 and over singles, could not handle what James kept (See TALENT, page 2B)

Bambinos win

Winchester right side. Rich Guiderson made a sparkling play on the grounder and forced the lead runner at home. Shields then settled down and struck out the last two batters to keep Lexington off the board. In the fifth, Shiel's yielded two base hits, but settled in to strike out two more and again kept Lexington off the board.

Winchester mounted a bit of an attack in the fifth. Singles by Marrone and Brian Caruso and a walk to Shields loaded the bases. The Lexington pitcher took a note or two from Shields and retired the next three Winchester hitters and no runs scored.

Lexington finally reached the score board in the final frame with two runs on two hits and an error.

bringing in.
James reached the finals with a 6-2, 6-2 win over 21st ranked Neil Westerman of Malden in the semis.
Miller took out Nick Lidskog of Concord in the other semis in a marathon 2½ hour battle 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

In doubles action Larry Pratt of Woods Hole and Kurt Frisrup of Mansfield, ranked number 5 in N.E.L.T.A. 35 and over doubles, outlasted Rob Miller and Mike Blauer
6-3, 3-6, 7-6.

Pratt and Frisrup defeated Chris

Ken's gets win

(From page 1B)

Ramstrom was caught on a groun-der. But with Ken Johnson Jr.'s single, the faint sounds of a victory song were beginning to be heard
'round the diamond. Ken Johnson Sr. followed with a fly ball. But with two outs, Ken's wasn't about to give up. A strong drive to right field by Jim Cassidy put players on first and second. Queen followed with a single to right field as well, scoring Ken Johnson Jr. The score: VFW 5,
Ken's 4.

When VFW attempted to throw the latter Johnson out at the plate, players moved to second and third. Then, Budds put the icing on the cake. Still with two outs, Budds hit a ground rule double on the Ginn Field wall, scoring Cassidy and Queen.

With little action in the sixth,
Ken's was holding on tight to its one-run lead. A single in the seventh by Mike Carney breathed a bit of hope into VFW, but Ken Johnson Sr. struck out Scott Boyd, and spirits soared.

"We held them the rest of the way for the win," said Coach Ken Johnson Sr.

Ken's plays again next Tuesday night. VFW has three games remaining. A loss would result in a tie for first place between the two teams.

What's the right Nursing Home for you?

Family Health & Safety associates suggest you ask some questions...

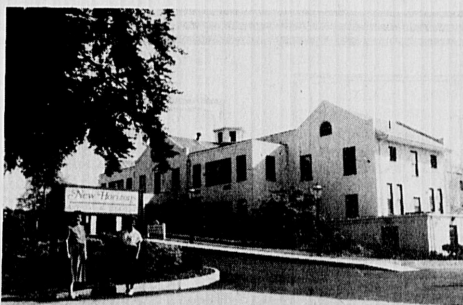

"Is there suitable space and adequate equipment for recreational activities?"

The nursing home may have a social activities schedule that you can review. Does the activities schedule include trips outside the home, as well as programs involving community groups?

All About... New Horizons At Choate (The Inside Story)

New Horizons at Choate is a not-for-profit senior adult congregate living center, sponsored by Cummings Properties. It is located on the exquisitely landscaped grounds of the former Choate Hospital at 21 Warren Avenue in Woburn.

New Horizons is specifically designed to offer seniors a desirable residential community where they can continue to live the lifestyle to which they are accustomed. Walk through the front doors of New Horizons and leave all the daily responsibilities and worries of living alone behind.

According to Executive Director Mary Ann Outwater, R.N., "New Horizons is an affordable living alternative for seniors who enjoy an independent lifestyle yet appreciate the benefits of a community environment. The sixty private housing units consist of one, two or three room suites, each with a full private bath, a hospitality kitchen, ample closet and storage space, and all the comforts of home!"

Convenient medical help is another important feature of New Horizons. Winchester Hospital's new Woburn Walk-In Clinic is in the same building with New Horizons. A major physical therapy center and a mental health clinic are also already fully operational with many more services soon to come to the Choate Medical Center.

An all-inclusive monthly charge of just $900 per person covers the cost of accommodations and three delightful meals per day plus all regular services offered by New Horizons. These regular services include activities, local transportation, housekeeping, linens, heat, light and air conditioning. New Horizons is a totally not-for-profit facility which requires a minimum $55,000 Entrance Deposit. This deposit is fully refundable upon departure, and its return will be assured by a written Bank Guarantee.

The first phase of New Horizons at Choate will open August 15, 1990. Interested persons can meet with the New Horizons staff and view the progress without appointments each Saturday from 9 AM to 5 PM, and Sundays from noon until 5 PM. For information call (617) 932-0800.

ABOUT TOWN

A Better Chance has annual meeting

The Winchester Committee for A Better Chance, Inc. held its annual meeting Wednesday, June 20. Officers elected for 1990-91 are: Kathy Bodie, President; Denis Byrne, Vice-President; Peggy Roll, Clerk; Pam and Bill Jervey, Co-Treasurers; and Elisabeth Sayre, Personnel.

New committee chairpersons include Hal Richardson, bottle drives; Margie Harvey, enrichment; Dot Butler and Louise Sawyer, fall event; Donna Down and Meri Jordan, host families; Dee Rotondi and Jim Maconochie, housing; Colleen Hertel, newsletter; Jane McIntosh, nominating; and Dave McGarry, tutoring. Chairpersons are still needed for the spring concert and transportation and an additional volunteer is needed to help with housing.

Winchester ABC recently graduated its 49th student, Roberto Saez, who came here from New York as a freshman. He was selected from many applicants to participate in the ABC program which is designed to give promising minority students the opportunity to have a challenging secondary school education.

David Brooks to perform in festival

By DAVID WELDON

Special to the Star

Residents heading for the Berkshires this weekend will be in for a special treat if they take in the Berkshire Choral Festival, which will feature Winchester's own David Brooks.

Brooks will be one of several singers participating in the one-day festival on July 21, at 8 p.m., at the annual festival in Sheffield. Brooks has been spending the week in Sheffield rehearsing his parts, which are from the music of Gluck, Wagner, Tchaikovsky and Mussorgsky.

The Berkshire Choral Festival, which features great opera choruses, is held at the Berkshire Choral Institute. It is a form of music close to Brooks' heart, but not the one for which is perhaps best known.

Brooks, who lives on Forest Street, is also a principal member of the Northshoresmen barber shop chorus. A former president of the chorus, Brooks is the only member from Winchester and one of the best-known in the country.

According to Brooks, the Northshoresmen are one of 757 barber shop chapters in the United States and Canada, which boast over 37,000 members. The Northshoresmen are currently based out of Beverly, meaning their president lives there, and has 65 members.

Ranked as one of the 10 best choruses in the Northeast, the Northshoresmen have been chosen to compete this October in Portland, Maine against the best choruses in the country. Closer to home, the group recently staged its annual musical, "Broadway Review," for an audience of over 2,000 barber shop fans at Lynn City Hall. According to the groups publicity director, John Moore, "For over four years this musical has been a popular musical event on the North Shore."

Brooks said the group is part of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA). Like its name, the group was founded on the principal that "the old songs ought to be revived."

Started in 1938 by Owen C. Cash and Rupert Hall, the society began to revive the popular tunes from the age of Vaudeville, where barber shop quartet singing had its heyday. With the coming of the Depression, Vaudeville lost its appeal and was replaced by the new jazz sound. The old songs began "slipping by," Brooks noted.

"What we're doing is preserving the old folk songs," Brooks explained.

In addition to their selections of music, what distinguishes barber shop quartets from other choruses is the emphasis on harmony rather than melody.

"In normal glee club singing the top voice carries melody, while the alto, tenor and bass put in harmony," said Brooks. "In barber shop singing the melody is carried by the voice that is second down. What makes barber shop harmony different is basically the arrangement of the chords."

Brooks explained that when the four parts of a barber shop quartet are each singing properly, they actually create a fifth sound, the perfect blend of the other four.

Brooks said his love of barber shop singing officially began in 1951 when he joined the Genesee Chapter in Rochester, N.Y. That chapter had two choruses, one of which eventually ranked eighth. "It was an excellent introduction," he noted.

His love of music in general stems from his youth in the 1930s, when he would spend hours listening to the radio. "I use to try to harmonize with Nelson Eddy when he sang with Jeanette McDonald," he admits.

When he was at college, Brooks took in the annual show of the Genesee Chapter. From that point on "I was hooked," he said.

Explosion of jobs expected in such specialized fields as ultrasound technology and physical therapy

By Maureen McLellan

STAFF WRITER

A nursing shortage that plagued area hospitals a few years ago appears to be over, but it has given way to growing demand for other highly skilled health care workers such as physical and occupational therapists and radiologic and ultrasound technicians.

Some area hospitals, in fact, are facing shortages of candidates for the so-called "allied health" professions, while the number of these jobs is expected to increase dramatically over the next several years, creating abundant opportunities for job seekers.

"I dread turnover," said Linda Arslanian, Newton-Wellesley Hospital's director of rehabilitation services.

This fear is well-founded in light of national statistics. According to the U.S. Department of Labor's 1990-1991 Occupational Outlook Handbook released earlier this year, health care jobs account for nearly half the fastest-growing occupations in the U.S.

Jobs for medical assistants, for example, are expected to grow 70 percent by the end of the century and those for radiologic technicians and technologists 66 percent. Opportunities will also grow nearly 64 percent for home health aides and 57 percent for physical therapists.

Reasons for this trend vary slightly with each job title, but industry professionals point to, among other things, the fact that people are living longer and scientific advancements are keeping more people alive after serious accidents, especially head injuries. This accounts for the rising demand for rehabilitative services like physical and occupational therapy.

Hospital physical therapy departments also face stiff competition from private home care organizations able to pay therapists significantly higher salaries because they are not covered under the same fee

Tips for communicating more effectively in small groups

By Paula Ancona

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE

Experts have dispensed much advice about how to avoid dissolving in fear during a formal speech.

But what about the many times we speak informally in meetings, before small groups of customers or co-workers and at social gatherings? Those situations may seem more relaxed, but they can make one's heart pound uncontrollably.

Try these ideas for communicating clearly and confidently in informal settings:

- Have something relevant to say before you speak. No amount of preparation or smooth speaking techniques will make mush sound like wisdom.

- Take a deep breath or a mental pause before you respond to a question or comment. It gives you time to collect your thoughts and encourages people to listen.

- When unexpectedly asked to give your opinion before a group, first restate the topic. Others might have missed the question. Then clearly state your position. Be succinct.

- Next, give your rationale. Try to begin and end with your strongest reasons. People tend to forget what was said in the middle.

- Relaxing helps cure several speaking pitfalls. It can help lower the pitch of your voice; a high voice can be annoying and may be tuned out.

Relaxing also can help you avoid speaking too loudly. Learn relaxation exercises from books or audio tapes.

- Work on your listening skills. Concentrate on the substance of the speaker's comments, the words used to express it and non-verbal cues like tone of voice and body language. Think about what the speaker is saying, not what you want to say next.

- Watch for overbearing body language. If you're nervous or feel strongly about the topic you may lean forward too much and appear to crowd your audience.

- Speak slowly and carefully. Don't run words together or talk so fast that you make glaring pronunciation and grammar errors.

- If you have an accent, try to soften it just a little so others won't spend all their energy deciphering your speech. But don't try to erase it; that would sound false and stifle an important part of your character.

- Wipe out verbal fluff that weakens your message: "ah" "er" "um," "you know," "really."

- Eliminate distracting nervous physical habits: twirling your hair, tapping fingers, jiggling change, bouncing knees or feet, drumming pencils, rocking back on your chair. Relaxing can help here, too.

Explosion of jobs expected in such specialized fields as ultrasound technology, physical therapy

restrictions that limit profits.

In addition, the diagnostic equipment handled by radiological and ultrasound technicians and nuclear medical technicians and others is becoming increasingly sophisticated, and colleges must scramble to update programs and implement new ones to adequately train students for certification.

In addition, while nursing salaries have increased markedly in recent years and helped attract more people into the profession, pay hikes for allied health jobs have not kept pace. Some experts say, however, this is changing with demand on the rise.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor's 1990-1991 Occupational Outlook Handbook released earlier this year, health care jobs account for nearly half the fastest-growing occupations in the U.S.

Linda Spink, associate dean for biomedical sciences at Massachusetts Bay Community College in Wellesley, said that for some fields — like ultrasound technology — there is a more basic reason for worker shortages.

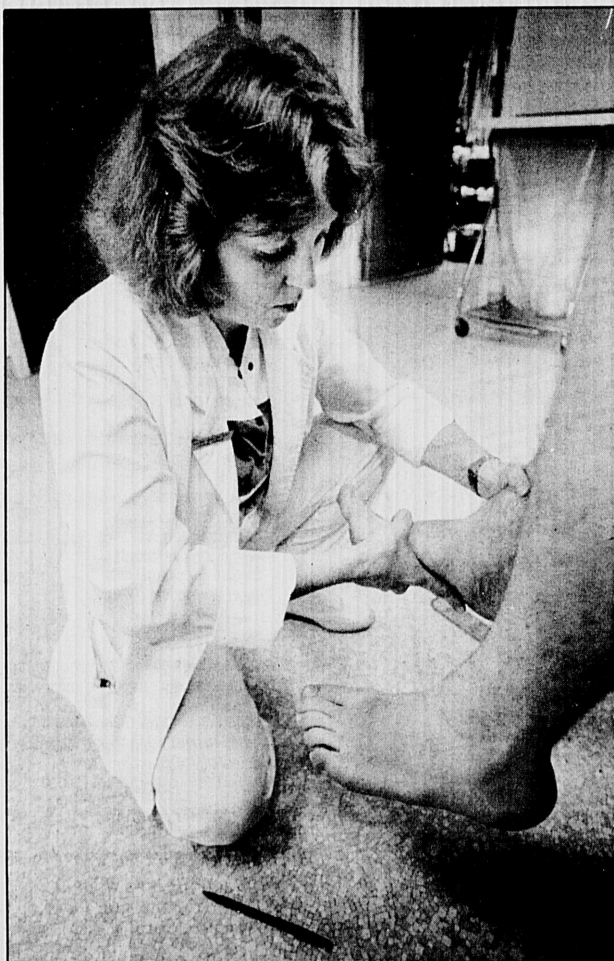

"These jobs are very specialized and a lot of high school students don't know about them," she said.

Spink and others further pointed out that coursework for health care programs is rigorous, with a heavy emphasis on the sciences and clinical practice.

Mass. Bay programs include medical radiography, diagnostic ultrasound and biotechnology.

Locally, hospitals have had an easier time filling jobs this year than last due to the state's economic troubles.

James Simon, spokesman for the Massachusetts Hospital Association, said that according to a February survey of 80 hospitals throughout the state, allied health jobs had a vacancy rate of 5.7 percent, compared to 9.3 percent for the same period last year.

Laurie Howland, a registered physical therapist at Natick's Leonard Morse Hospital, tests the range of motion on David Mackintosh's injured ankle. According to the U.S. Department of Labor's 1990-1991 Occupational Outlook Handbook released earlier this year, opportunities for physical therapists are expected to grow up to 57 percent by the end of the century. NEWS-TRANSCRIPT PHOTO BY PAUL KAPTEYN

"A normal rate is from zero to 5 percent. Anything over 5 percent is cause for serious concern," said Simon.

Another boon for job seekers in the health industry is the variety of positions available within specialties. Those in the professions also talk about the sense of personal satisfaction that comes with helping people, and using their technical knowledge and experience.

Physical therapists, for example, can specialize in working with children, the elderly, athletes or in orthopedics.

And occupational therapists can specialize in therapy for injured hands or psychiatric occupational therapists can concentrate on helping severely mentally ill people be self-sufficient.

Physical therapists help patients minimize physical disabilities, while occupational therapists help people adapt to physical or mental difficulties.

Physical therapy experts say they are deeply concerned about conditions in their field causing many therapists to leave hospitals for more lucrative home health care settings. Connie Sullivan, director of physical therapy at Natick's Leonard Morse Hospital, said these problems are compounded by a new push for physical therapists to spend five or six years in school before being certified, graduating with master's degrees and often heavy debts.

"These jobs are very specialized and a lot of high school students don't know about them."

Linda Spink,
MASSACHUSETTS BAY COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Newton-Wellesley's Arslanian said that five years ago, private physical therapists could make $75,000 to $80,000 in gross annual pay, while starting salaries for hospital physical therapists currently average about $25,000 for this area.

Terry Litterst, Newton-Wellesley's chief of psychiatric occupational therapy, said the movement, begun in the 1960s, to get patients out of hospitals and back home as quickly as possible has contributed to the need for her profession. She said that with the vast majority of mentally ill people living in communities, there is a greater demand for support services.

"Occupational therapy as a whole is definitely expanding, but not as many people are choosing psychiatric occupational therapy because it's hard to do it," said Litterst. "Someone coming out of school has to deal with very sick people."

But she said the profession offers challenges to those interested in human services and who enjoy working in groups.

"I think it makes a tremendous difference in people's lives," she said.

Job Hunting STEP BY STEP

Looking for a job can be an exercise in frustration or an exciting challenge, depending on how it's approached. Planning your approach step by step can lead to a successful outcome.

1. The Resume

An employer will get many responses to an advertisement. He or she often will review resumes first to decide which applicants are to be interviewed.

A resume is an introduction. It should be concise (one page if possible) and easy to read. Avoid irrelevant information such as age, height, weight, family details and detailed military information (date, highest rank, and brief description of responsibilities are enough.)

There are two primary ways to prepare a resume. The form used may be based on the information to be presented.

Chronological ▶ Resume

This resume is prepared with experience listed in sequence starting with the current or last position and working back. This is especially good if the work background is consistent and shows good progression from early jobs to the present.

◀ Functional Resume

When there is a variety of unrelated job experiences or when different skill areas need to be emphasized, the best resume format to use is the functional resume. In this format, the information is presented in a way that makes it easy for the employer to pick out your area of expertise.

2. Personal Assessment

What can I do? What do I want to do? What do I do best?

These are questions that need to be answered. You can't sell yourself until you know your product well! The period between jobs is a good time to analyze strengths, weaknesses, likes and dislikes.

Here is a simple project:

List all the work duties you have had in the past. The list probably will be varied and long. That's fine. Add anything that comes to mind, no matter how small.

Now, highlight all the things on the list you really enjoy doing. Next, check all the things you were successful doing. Ideally, there will be some overlapping.

Now, list all the skills required to do the highlighted tasks.

DUTIES

order parts
deliver parts
arrange for courtesy pickups
repair transmissions
greet customers
operate forklift
do inventory
✓ operate computer to monitor parts flow
do monthly sales totals
sell additional services
✓ repair warehouse equipment
pack and ship orders
✓ do monthly forecast
keep customer records
prepare sales target lists
supervise loaders

SKILLS

use catalog/fill out forms
driving/map reading
scheduling/communication
mechanical communication
driving
math
math/typing
math
communications/sales
mechanics
detail/manual dexterity
math
organizational organizational
communication/leadership

What this shows you is that your favorite duties are the ones that require math skills. Your strongest areas were math and mechanics.

This understanding will make it easier to explain your strengths to an interviewer. The jobs that are geared toward using these skills would be the most suitable and satisfying.

3. Research

Knowing about the company with which you are interviewing will set you apart from most of the others being interviewed. Spending time to find out about the services, products, market area, primary concerns, focus and financial history will make you a concerned and knowledgeable applicant.

Once an interview is scheduled, find out as much as you can. There are some tools in the library that make getting information easier than you may imagine. Check:

- Standard and Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives
- The Thomas Register of American Manufacturing and Thomas Register File
- Moody's (lists more than 20,000 corporations)
- The Million Dollar Directory and The Career Guide by Dun and Bradstreet offer information on companies in alphabetical order, by career field and geographical area. On microfiche is another listing of local business. Check with your local librarian if you need help. There are many other books, magazines and even videos and a computer available for information gathering.

Another good source is the chamber of commerce. Chambers will have not only a list of all chamber members, with product and service information, but a list of manufacturers.

With the information you've accumulated, you can ask questions relevant to that company. During your interview, mention what you've learned. The interviewer will be impressed with your interest. Do your homework. It will pay off.

Job Services

There are free job services available through the Mass. Dept. of Employment and Training. Some "job centers" in this area include:

Framingham: 46 Park St. 508-875-5237.

Norwood: 17 Center St. 762-9450.

Roslindale: 980 American Legion Highway
469-4620.

Waltham: 119 School St. 899-9340.

Each office provides all or most of the following services free of charge:

■ Job search workshops on interviewing and resume writing.

■ Job referrals and an automated job list system. Some 25,000 companies in Massachusetts list jobs with the state.

■ Use of resource office equipment for a job search, such as fax and copy machines, personal computers and telephones.

■ Employment counseling, career assessment and skill transferability assessment.

■ Written reference materials on jobs and industries.

■ Labor market information and data on occupational trends. A reference document titled "90 jobs for the 1990s" is now available.

■ Each job center also has information about career services provided by local agencies, colleges and libraries in the service area.

4. The Interview

Don't underestimate first impressions. Being properly dressed won't get you the job, but being poorly dressed can certainly cause you to lose it.

It's often hard to know exactly what is appropriate for a particular company. For a professional position, it's safe to wear a suit. For other positions, if you are familiar with the company, dress as people do in that position. If you're not sure, play it safe. Dress slightly more formally than what the position calls for. Example: When interviewing for a warehouse position that probably requires jeans, wear slacks and a nice sport shirt.

Get there early. This will allow you time to fill out an application and relax a few minutes. It also will give you a chance to visit with the receptionist. One often can get a real feeling for the office environment and its mood. Are the people cheerful? Do they seem to enjoy being there? Do you get a feeling that they are an efficient group?

When called in, stand up, smile and shake hands. YOU'RE ON! Most interviewers want you to be comfortable and will help you relax. They want you to be able to be at your best.

Now you can go into detail about the information in your resume. You've analyzed your strengths; tie them in with your accomplishments that are examples of those strengths. Personal information is OK because it gives a better picture of who you are, but keep it brief. Be positive about past jobs. You don't have to belittle others to sell yourself. If there has been a problem with a past job that needs to be discussed, do it in a factual manner and without emotion.

Interviewing actually should be an exchange of information. Just as the employer wants to know your experience and what you can bring to the company, you will want to know about the company and the position available. This exchange of information is critical if there is to be a proper fit. Use your judgment about how and when to ask questions. You don't want the interviewer to feel interrogated. You may want to ask some of the questions listed below.

Questions to ask the employer

- What is the last person who had this job doing?
- What are the job responsibilities?
- What skills are most important for the job?
- What kind of training is provided?
- What is the company's history?
- What are the company's goals?
- Where does the job lead?
- What is the salary range?
- What benefits are offered?
- Does the company have a personnel and procedures manual?
- What are the strengths and weaknesses of

the supervisor? (Don't be afraid to ask.)

- What is the management style of the company?

Questions to ask yourself

- Do I understand the job responsibilities?
- Is the job location within a comfortable driving radius?
- Does the personality of the company fit with mine?
- Does the position fit with my goals?
- If moving to another location, does the change in salary fit with the difference in the cost of living?

5. Follow-up

When the interview is over, the interviewing process is still incomplete.

A thank-you note should be sent to the interviewer. You may include something you have forgotten to mention during the interview. If you don't have anything to add, restate your reason for feeling you are a good candidate for the position. Emphasize again your interest in the job.

Getting the job you want requires planning, determination and follow through. With the proper effort, the reward will be a fulfilling part of your life, a great job.

MacDonald to head up Lincoln School

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

Bruce MacDonald, currently a teacher in the Lexington public schools, will become the new principal of Lincoln Elementary School in September, and hopes to bring a sense of stability and leadership to a school community that has had more than its share of upheaval.

MacDonald will be the fourth principal in just five years to take the helm at the Lincoln School, which has the largest enrollment of any elementary school in Winchester.

The post became vacant within the last year as a result of the death of Elizabeth Murray. William Maher then took over as acting principal, but has since found another post.

At the School Committee's July 24 session, members Mark Lombardi and Edward O'Connell came out against appointing MacDonald on the first vote, stating their preference for another candidate.

After discussion, the motion was reconsidered and O'Connell voted in favor of MacDonald. Lombardi again came out against the appointment, thus ending the issue on a 4-1 vote.

MacDonald, a 14-year teaching veteran, told School Committee members he had been seeking an administrative position since the spring. During the interview of the three finalists, MacDonald was questioned on topics of curriculum, administrative abilities and problem-solving techniques.

MacDonald told members he felt math and science should not be purely driven by computations, but should instead tie in to how the subjects can be "used in the real world."

He said he believes a principal should have had the opportunity to "hone teaching skills" in the classroom in order to work effectively within the role of administrator.

MacDonald also said that the constant changes experienced within the Lincoln community could be offset with stability and visibility in the principalship.

"There is a time for change, there is a time for stability. But you can't start to change [a school] without first knowing it," said MacDonald.

MacDonald called the prospect of requesting an assistant principal's position at Lincoln in the future "intriguing," but said that his schedule would have to be established

Salespeople trouble police, residents

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

Winchester Police are frustrated with out-of-state door-to-door salespeople as the residents in Winchester who are the targets of these hard-sell tactics.

And when the magazine salespeople are in town, complaints from residents start pouring into the station, according to Detective Lieutenant James Pierce.

In particular, one magazine-selling outfit based in Michigan City, Indiana, known as American Community Services, has blanketed the area recently with young, and often aggressive, salespeople.

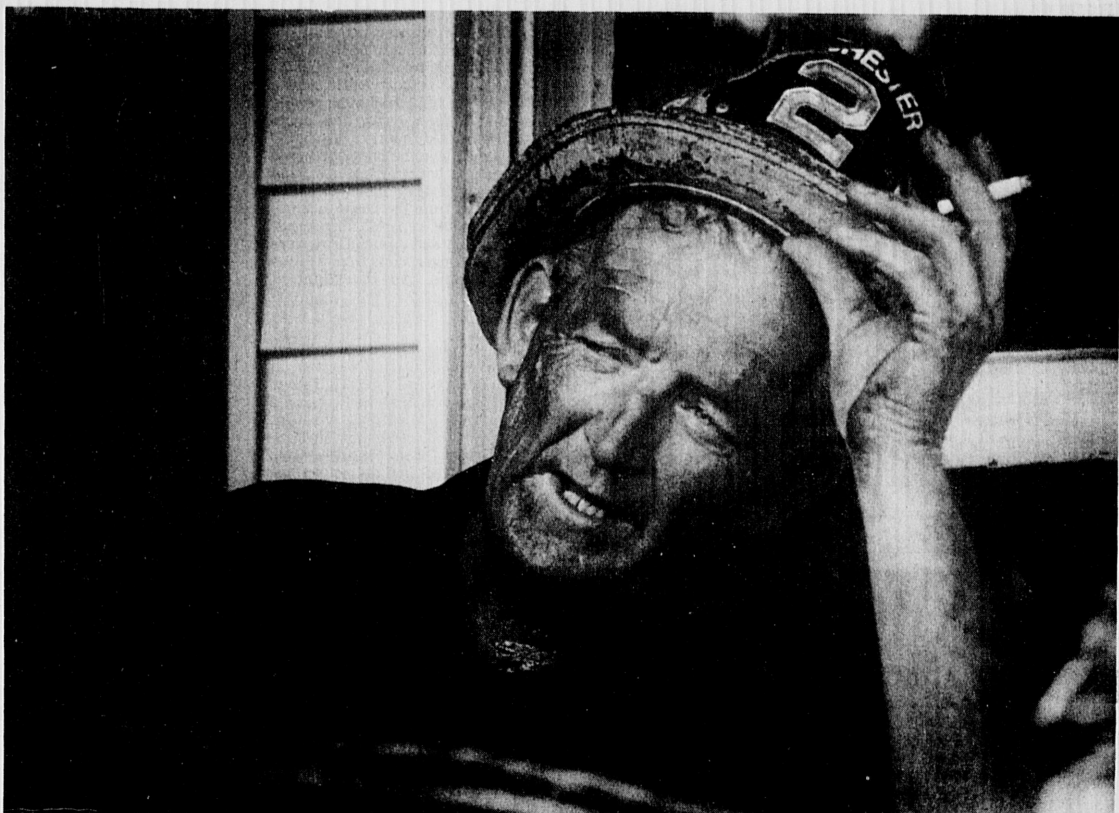

But, the company has drawn even more concern due to an incident in Woburn two weeks ago when a salesperson from American Community Services was charged with the murder of an elderly woman in her home. That incident is still under investigation.

Around the Fourth of July holiday, residents of Village Condominiums on Swanton Street were visited by the salespeople from this group. According to resident Leigh Smith, the salesperson who knocked on her door was "overly aggressive."

The tactic of the salesperson, said Smith, was to keep up the selling pitch until a magazine was sold. Smith's salesperson told her that her company would not allow her to eat that night until she had made one more magazine sale.

Blaze hits Irving Street home

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

Excessive heat from a gas clothes dryer was the apparent cause of a massive fire at 67-69 Irving St. that destroyed the inside of the two-family dwelling and left in its wake an estimated $50,000 in damage, according to fire officials.

The blaze began in the basement of the three-story home just before 1 p.m. July 19. According to fire reports, the home is owned by Joseph Capone. Nicolino Capone resides in the dwelling, along with Maryann and Stephen Baron, her daughter and son-in-law.

The couple and their children were outside in the yard at the time of the blaze and notified Mrs. Capone, who was in her apartment at the time, said fire reports.

According to Fire Chief Charles McNutt, the dryer had just been used prior to ignition of the blaze and apparently clothes stacked around the dryer prevented adequate ventilation.

Fire personnel were first notified of smoke coming from a window at the residence at 12:57 p.m. and all apparatuses responded. Firefighters observed heavy smoke coming from the second floor windows. According to fire reports, the basement was fully involved with fire at the time of arrival and at 1 p.m. a second alarm was sounded.

At this time, Stoneham and Medford arrived on mutual aid and Woburn firefighters filled in at Winchester headquarters.

Firefighters ventilated the upper floors and broke open several windows to relieve the dwelling of smoke and gases, reports said.

"It was a brutal day," said McNutt of the combination of 90 degree weather outside and the intense heat from the fire inside. Due to the thick smoke, firefighters first thought the fire might have been in the upstairs bedrooms of the duplex, but McNutt said firefighters could hear the flames crackling in the basement.

"It was [a difficult fire to fight] because we had to work down on the fire while it was coming up at us," said McNutt.

Although no one was injured in the blaze, firefighters had to be relieved periodically to prevent heat exhaustion, McNutt said.

McNutt said the fire was contained within a half hour of the first alarm and within a few hours firefighters were cleared from the scene.

"[The crew] did a tremendous job stopping it," said McNutt.

Captain Norman Delorey was in charge during the fire operations.

Fire officials reported heavy smoke damage to both residential units and heavy fire damage to the basement, clothes, beds, mattress, clothes dryer and doors.

Take time to cool off, says Koppel

By ELLEN FANNING
Star Assistant Editor

As the unrelenting heat sears its way through another week, health experts warn the elderly, children and those with chronic health problems to keep cool.

Paula Koppel, gerontological clinical nurse specialist at Winchester Hospital, says when the temperature climbs toward 90 degrees for three to four consecutive days, health problems associated with the heat also begin to escalate.

The elderly in particular are most adversely affected by the sustained heat, which ultimately can lead to heat stroke and possibly death. Older persons often have chronic illnesses such as heart disease, diabetes and respiratory problems and are more likely to be taking medication, both of which can reduce the body's ability to cool off, says Koppel.

Also, due to age-related changes in the body's metabolism, the elderly experience a decline in the number of sweat glands and the ability for those glands to work properly to bring down the body's core temperature.

If the temperature outside climbs to 90 degrees for a period of one or two days, says Koppel, the body is able to cool off within a reasonable amount of time. But when the body's core temperature rises steadily over a period of more than three days, the elderly are at high risk, says Koppel.

Infants, persons with chronic health problems, such as asthma, diabetes or any respiratory problem and extremely overweight people are also at risk for heat exhaustion or heat stroke.

"These people have a much more difficult time cooling down," says Koppel.

She suggests limiting activities such as working in the yard or cooking in a hot kitchen. Those with-

The continued "soft" trend in the economy is paying off for a local bartering network, as businesses seek creative ways to get the goods and services they need.

The Unlimited Business Network (UBN), which includes several Winchester businesses, is currently enjoying its most successful year. Based in Melrose, the network has a membership of more than 650 client businesses from the Greater Boston area. All are looking for the additional business a bartering network can bring them.

According to Ron Campisi, owner of Shield Systems on Main Street in Winchester, "There are several

5:17 p.m.

Officer Arthur Houllahan was called to a South Border Road address on a past breaking and entering. On arrival, the officer spoke with the owner of the home. The owner told police the inside and outside doors of the garage were found wide open when he returned home that evening.

Police determined that the intruder(s) entered through the front door after breaking an adjacent window. The intruder(s) then ransacked the home and exited through the garage doors after discovering these doors were open, said reports.

Police believe the break occurred between the hours of 7:15 a.m. and 5:10 p.m. Several items of value were taken from the house, according to police reports. Inspectors Paul Deluca and James Gray were able to lift fingerprints from an item in the home. An investigation continues.

Officer Peter Hersee was called to the scene of a two-car accident at Highland Avenue and Fairmont Street. The driver of the first car, a 52-year-old Medford woman, stopped at the intersection on Fairmont Street, then continued onto Highland Street and did not see the second car, which was traveling south on Highland Avenue, said reports. The two cars collided on Highland Avenue.

The second car, driven by a 54-year-old Stoneham man, sustained damage to the passenger side door, rear fender and axle. The first car sustained damage to the driver's side front fender, bumper and light assembly.

Officer Steven Fields responded to a two-car accident on Church Street. The driver of the first car, a 73-year-old Lexington woman, was proceeding east on Church Street when she struck a parked car, owned by a Church Street resident, said reports.

The woman told police she was distracted by something in her eye. The woman's car sustained damage to the front fender, bumper and grille and the second car had damage to the left rear end.

Sunday, July 22
11:09 p.m.

Officer Arthur Houllahan was called to the scene of a one-car accident at Cambridge Street by Church Street. The driver of the car was being treated by Fire Department personnel at the time of police arrival.

The driver had been travelling north on Cambridge Street when he apparently lost control of his vehicle and struck a Boston Edison pole, according to police reports.

The man was transported to Winchester Hospital with minor injuries. Damage to the car was extensive however, and included a smashed windshield, bent steering wheel and crushed front end.

The car was towed from the scene, and the driver, a 34-year-old Burlington man, was treated and released, said reports.

Saturday, July 21
1:18 p.m.

Officer Peter Hersee was called to the scene of a two-car accident at Washington Street and Kenwin Road.

The driver of the first car, a 26-year-old Medford woman, stopped at a stop sign and then continued to cross Washington Street to Kenwin Road. The woman did not see the second car, said police reports.

The second driver, a 34-year-old Arlington man, was travelling north on Washington Street and attempted to avoid the collision but struck the first car.

The second car sustained damage to the front fender, right mirror and speedometer. The first car sustained damage to the passenger door and rear bumper.

Friday, July 20
3 p.m.

Officer Arthur Houllahan was called to the scene of a three-car accident at Cambridge and Wildwood streets.

The driver of the first car, a 61-year-old Indian Hill Road woman, hit the second car, which was stopped at a red light. The second driver, a 38-year-old Main Street woman, then collideded with the third car, driven by a Woburn woman.

The first car sustained damage to the front end, the second car had damage to the front and rear end, driver's side door and rear quarter and the third car sustained damage to back bumper.

The accident caused no personal injury and all the drivers drove their cars from the scene, said police reports.

Thursday, July 19
6 p.m.

Officer Kurt Ellis had been investigating a motor vehicle accident with property damage that occurred on Stowell Road on June 23. After several weeks of inquiries, the officer found sufficient evidence to charge a 17-year-old Winchester youth with leaving the scene of an accident with property damage.

After speaking with the youth, the youth's father and several residents of Stowell Road, the officer found probable cause to file the charges, said police reports.

An anonymous witness identified the youth as the driver of the truck seen fleeing the scene of the accident by several neighbors. Also, the youth admitted to traveling on Stowell Road that night, but told police he had been in an accident in Arlington, which he did not report. The youth maintained he had not been in an accident in Winchester, said police reports.

The vehicle in question, the youth's father's truck, was also found to have sustained damage that would match the accident on Stowell Road. Also, light covers retrieved from the scene were found to match the make, model and year of the vehicle in question, reports said.

Tuesday, July 17
5:25 p.m.

Officer Lawrence Hill was called to a Cross Street address to investigate a breaking and entering. When the officer arrived, he spoke with a Woburn man who owns a garage at the rear of the property.

According to police reports, the man indicated that two broken garage door panels had been observed by the maintenance man and since boarded up. Police determined the doors were the point of entry for the intruder(s) and the break occurred sometime between the evening of July 13 and the morning of July 16. Several items of value were taken from the garage, said police reports.

LT. James Pierce responded to the scene to conduct an investigation.

BDRC to propose outlook

By DAVID WALSH
Special to the Star

The Building Design Review Committee will have to wait until August for a public hearing on its proposed construction of a outlook on Mill Pond.

Due to lack of a quorum, the official Conservation Commission business scheduled for discussion July 23 was postponed until Aug. 13. Among those items to be discussed was the Building Design Review Committee's (BDRC) proposal. However, those present, including Conservation Administrator Elaine Vreeland and members Steve Lewis and Jane Spencer offered informal advice to BDRC member Sandra Rogers. A public hearing on the matter is set for Aug. 13.

The plan, supported by selectmen last week pending the Conservation Commission's approval, calls for a brick area at the corner of Main Street and Mystic Valley Parkway to view the pond. The area would be similar, but smaller, than the one at the corner of Converse Place and Main Street.

The proposal currently under review involves construction through private funds at a cost between $13,000 and $15,000. According to Rogers, the funding is "A gift to the town. The money is there ... and we have no problem with the funding." The outlook was included as part of the downtown revitalization several years ago, but (See OUTLOOK, page 10A)

Academy still going strong

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Star Editor

When nearly 300 physicians journeyed to Boston this summer for the American Academy of Clinical Neurophysiology annual meeting, they came at the invitation of Winchester resident Dr. Bhagwan D. Shahani.

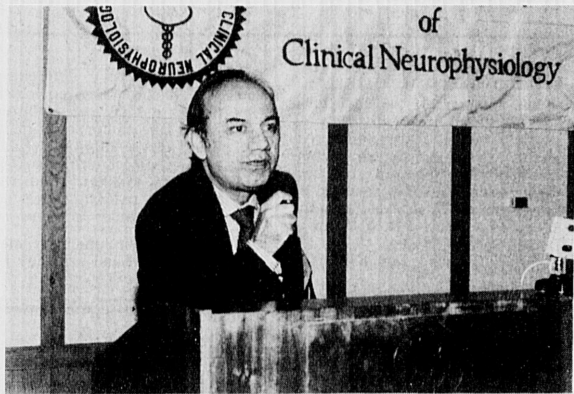

Shahani, who is director of the clinical neurophysiology laboratories at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston and Harvard Medical School, founded the group six years ago, and has helped plan an annual meeting ever since.

According to Shahani, his desire to begin the group stemmed from what he saw as a need to bring various medical fields together under one roof to share knowledge.

"I always thought that in this country, this particular field was fragmented," said Shahani. Clinical neurophysiology is a discipline that includes scientists and physicians working in areas such as neurology, neurosurgery, internal medicine, orthopedic surgery, electroencephalography, electromyography, cognitive physiology and others. It addresses all neurological problems, including everything from multiple sclerosis and Parkinson's disease to lower back pain and rehabilitative medicine.

With numerous small groups across the country, Shahani said physicians would have to go to 10 to 15 meetings each year to keep up-to-date on new developments in the field. Because neurophysiology covers so many aspects of the medical world, the academy has brought numerous specialists together to discuss mutual interests, said Shahani.

Through the annual meetings, Shahani said doctors have an avenue for networking, as well as for learning recent advances in the field. Topics of discussion range from nerve disorders, rehabilitative medicine and molecular biology of long-term memory to magnetic stimulation, AIDS, epilepsy and sports medicine.

Dr. Bhagwan D. Shahani of Winchester speaks to the American Academy of Clinical Neurophysiology during the annual meeting in June. Shahani is the founder of the organization, and is serving this year as president.

"For about 15 years, I was planning to do something like this," said Shahani. And with help from major companies manufacturing neurophysiological equipment and a personal financial commitment, Shahani started on his way to establishing a society which incorporated top-notch leaders in the country on its executive board.

"Looking at the major national groups, there are virtually none from the east. There is so much going on here, I thought it would be nice to have a major academy based in Boston," he said.

Today, the group is internationally known, and in the latter part of June, a group of nearly 300 doctors from across the country and around the world — including doctors from England, France, Switzerland, Germany and India — gathered at the Westin Hotel in Boston for the sixth annual meeting. After the 1991 meeting, Shahani said the group will meet in various cities, including Chicago and San Francisco.

"Not only is it very well established, but it is considered to be one of the major groups in the world," he added.

And Shahani was honored by his fellow academy members as the first elected president. In addition, he was cited by Governor Michael Dukakis for his important contribution to clinical neurophysiology — a citation at times bestowed on groups, but rarely on individuals.

"Fiscally, we have done well, and the number of members has increased," he said. "It has been easy ... it has grown and become so big ... I think this is going to put all these sub-groups together and bring the field of neurophysiology to the front."

As a specialist in clinical neurophysiology, Shahani said, "Physicians have to keep up with a rapidly changing medical field."

"People are beginning to realize the real importance of what this field can contribute," he added.

Exercise is fun, even in summer

By MARY P. KELLY
 Special to the Star

The exercise class at the Jenks Senior Center will continue through the summer, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 9:30 a.m. Interest and participation in these classes remain high, no doubt aided by the pleasant, air-conditioned atmosphere of the Center's Pond Room.

All Winchester seniors are cordially invited to attend one or more of these classes each week, a perfect way to get and stay in shape through the long, lazy, hot days of summer. You will enjoy these classes under the direction of June Cannon. You do not have to get on the floor; support from chairs is available.

Classes last 45 minutes and there is a modest cost. Plan now to join your friends in this enjoyable and beneficial activity. No advance sign up is required. Just come and have fun.

Mulvaney discusses hearing impairment

Seniors with hearing problems are invited to attend a talk to be given by Dr. Thomas J. Mulvaney, a specialist in audiology, at the Jenks Senior Center, on Wednesday, Aug. 8, at 10:30 a.m.

Mulvaney completed his residency at St. Elizabeth's Hospital and at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary. He teaches at Harvard Medical School and is affiliated with the Winchester Hospital. Although the discussion will focus on hearing impairment, Mulvaney also treats diseases of the nose, throat and neck.

All seniors are welcome to attend.

WSA hosts

quarterly meeting

Immediately following Dr. Mulvaney's discussion on hearing impairment, on Wednesday, Aug. 8, at 10:30 a.m., there will be a quarterly meeting of the Winchester Seniors Association, at the Jenks Center.

Accomplishments of the past three months, present problems and future plans will be discussed. All WSA members are encouraged to attend the quarterly meeting and to participate with questions and suggestions.

If you wish to stay for the ET lunch following the meeting, be sure to sign up with the week volunteer by 11 a.m. the day before.

Nurses still needed

Many Winchester seniors visit the Jenks Center's Keep Well Clinic to check on blood pressures and review medications and weights. The Center is now in need of two volunteer nurses (R.N.'s) to assist with these duties one or two times each month on Thursday mornings.

Please call the Center, 721-7136, if you can help out at this important preventive health program.

Wheelchairs needed

The Center has a medical equipment loan program and donations are received with much appreciation from seniors who no longer have any need for wheelchairs, commodes, walkers, and three-pronged canes. Crutches are not needed.

If you have any medical equipment, in working condition, which you would like to donate to the Center for loan out to seniors who are temporarily in need of these supplies, please get in touch with the Center immediately as it is down to its last wheelchair.

Living Beyond

Loss group meets

Living Beyond Loss is a self-help group, guided by social worker Marion Anderson, which will hold its monthly meeting at the Jenks Center on Monday, Aug. 6, at 2 p.m. for those who may be feeling the loss of a loved one.

Let Marion Anderson know (721-7136) if you would like to join this discussion.

Horseshoes, anyone?

A suggestion has been made that some seniors might like to play horseshoes. If you would be interested in joining such a group, the Jenks Center would like to learn of your interest and the equipment would be arranged for. However, before arrangements are made, the Center must know of the interest of seniors, both men and women, in this project. So, while the weather is good, let us know and we will bring you all together.

Center seeks

ceramics instructor

The Center will sponsor a ceramics class with a new kiln donated by the Sam McCarthy family and is looking for a ceramics instructor. If you have any skills along this line, please call the Center and let us know.

Adult day programs

for Winchester seniors

Cooperative Elder Services currently has openings for residents of Winchester in its two Adult Day programs. The programs provide a warm, friendly setting for elders with frailties who would benefit from a structured, supervised daytime environment.

The Adult Day Health Program offers nursing care, socialization, recreation and counseling and is located in the Arlington Senior Center. Open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., transportation and a hot lunch included. Medicaid and private paying participants accepted. The Social Day Care program is located in the Veterans Memorial Senior Center in Woburn and is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. Door-to-door transportation, socialization, recreation and a hot lunch are provided. State Home Care and private paying participants are accepted.

Both programs provide services for elders living alone or who are home alone during the day while family members are at work. For further information and referral, please contact Natalie Rudin at 646-1999, ext. 4756.

Barone speaks on Cabot to Jenks Center Italian group

John Cabot was the subject of Dr. William D. Barone's lecture before the Jenks Italian Culture group recently, given before an audience at the Jenks Center.

Samuel Eliot Morison, an American historian, stated, "Who was John Cabot? In view of the importance as the first discoverer of North America since the Northmen's voyages almost five centuries earlier was the man who gave England her American title, it is amazing how little we know about him."

Barone enlightened the group by reiterating Morison's statement by saying, "Ask the Canadians, adults and children ... they know." However, he said, the average American has completely forgotten his accomplishments.

Cabot was born Giovanni Cabotto in Genoa, Italy and later went to Venice for 15 years. He seems to have been a ship's captain as well as a merchant. He anglicized his name to John Cabot when he reached England in the late 15th century.

There is no question that he was influenced by both Marco Polo and Columbus. So he decided to take the Northern route and landed in what is today Newfoundland.

North America was discovered on June 24, 1497. He sailed from England (Bristol) about May 20, 1497 on the Matthew. It was King Henry the VIIIth who authorized the voyage. The King was so pleased with Cabot's discovery he entrusted him with five ships for the second trip. Four vessels were lost and only one boat returned with his son Sebastian on it, who is considered the father of the British Navy.

As history continued, the British Empire started here in America, Barone told the audience. Its settlers rebelled later in history against England and its descendants formed a democracy as the United States of America to become the beacon of freedom for the world.

As one deliberated, history is founded in great men of vision daring and courage, Barone said.

John Cabot must be honored for his achievement, said Barone, and added that he had proposed a statue be placed in the City of Boston, likely in the Public Gardens. He has already had meetings with two high officials of the state and the Mayor's office. A preliminary drawing was done by well-known Winchester artist James Dobbins.

Camp has openings

This summer, 64 boys and girls ages 10 to 12 from a variety of backgrounds will share in an incredible two week adventure of fun, freedom and friendship at a two-week residential camp operated by Spring Outward For Kids Inc. at the site of the World Peace Camp in Poland Springs, Maine.

Spring Outward For Kids is a summer camp with a difference, dedicated to providing enriched experiences to a diverse group of youngsters. The camp program is designed to foster within the children a sense of respect for themselves and for others, to build confidence and self-esteem, to learn to work as a team, to engender a sense of care for the environment, to celebrate being a kid and certainly to have fun. Spring Outward's activities will include traditional camp activities as well as experiential learning techniques such as adventure learning, trust activities and communication exercises.

Spring Outward For Kids, Inc. is a non-profit, Massachusetts corporation established through the vision of some 25 hardworking, non-paid, volunteers, primarily from Boston and eastern Massachusetts, because of their belief that by providing an environment where a child can experience themselves as trusting, contributing and valuable human beings, they will be creating a foundation for future choices in their lives. This group created the Spring Outward Camp to provide a range of enriched and challenging activities for the children to choose from now and carry forward as a result of having participated in the camp.

The cost for the two weeks is $500 per camper with full and half scholarships available. The camp will be held from Aug. 19 to Sept. 2. To receive additional information and application for Spring Outward Camp, please write to John D'Angelo, Spring Outward For Kids, Inc., 18 Sachem Road, Billerica, MA 01821.

Coop Theatre production opens Aug.2

The "Stuff Friends Are Made Of," an original story written by Chris Alexander, will be presented by the Winchester Summer Cooperative Theatre on Aug. 2 at 7:30 p.m. and Aug. 3 at 10 a.m. in the Lincoln School auditorium.

It is a story about Catherine and her imaginary playmate, Cavendish, who have quite an adventure in the land of Stuffynufkins with Madame Meany and her miserable Marvins.

Nine musical numbers from familiar Broadway shows are performed under the direction of Lori Lerman, and choreographed by Linda Vaevec and Debbie Lerman, making this production a special treat for everyone on stage or in the audience.

Students from grades four through seven have been working on this production, as well as preparing skits and monologues for family members every week so they can gain as much experience as possible in all aspects of theatre. The students are: Courtney Allen, John Bett, Deirdre Carrigan, Kate Connery, Jennie Connery, Amanda Corbett, Lauren Corkery, Meredith Corkery, John DeStefano, Annie Dredge, Bryan Janson, Linnea Johnson, Elizabeth Kearney, Jonathan Ladd, David Lerman, Amy Lerman, Rebecca Lynch, Shawn Margles, Karen Marmon, Nancy Marmon, Laura Montgomery, Colin Simson, Courtney Simson, Kendra Smith, Julie Sobkowicz, and Steven Varvick.

"One of the most gratifying experiences for me over the past 11 years has been to see that so many of my former students continue to be involved in some aspect of theatre. I hope that many people will be able to attend our first summer program and support these children who have been working very hard for the past four weeks," Alexander said.

Foundation makes wishes come true

By P.L. BUSTAMANTE
Special to the Star

All it took was 45 cents for people from Winchester to Europe to make 10-year-old Craig Shirgold happy.

Shirgold, who lives in Surrey, England, has an inoperable brain tumor and wanted only one thing: one million "get well" cards so he could make the "Guinness Book of World Records" before he dies.

Shirgold received 16.5 million cards after making the wish to the Children's Wish Foundation, according to the foundation's founder and director, Linda Dozoretz.

The final count in the "Guinness Book of World Records" is 16,250,069, Dozoretz said, but Shirgold is still getting them, and every day is Christmas.

Though Shirgold's wish has been fulfilled, Dozoretz says there are 93 other children on the wish list right now. She hopes the attention Shirgold's wish received will help publicize and fulfill the wishes of many children.

Shirgold's wish was brought to Winchester and surrounding towns through fax transmissions recently.

The Children's Wish Foundation was founded 12 years ago by Dozoretz after her 15-year-old daughter Susan died.

"She didn't have her wish fulfilled," said Dozoretz, who explained that not long after Susan's death, she won a trip to Disneyland. Instead of going herself, Dozoretz gave the trip to a family whose child "couldn't grow up."

"It kind of caught hold from there" and the foundation has been fulfilling wishes all over the world since then, she said. Dozoretz couldn't say how many wishes they had fulfilled over the years because "we pride ourselves in being about people instead of about numbers."

Recently, however, they fulfilled four wishes.

The wishes vary immensely: one young girl wanted pink hair ribbons to put in her hair, which had grown back after falling out during treatment.

A six-year-old child visited a crayon factory, thanks to the group.

"He said that there's magic in crayons and he wanted to see how it was put in," Dozoretz said.

The amount of money, time and effort also varies from wish to wish.

"In this particular case [Craig Shirgold], we did not really do anything," Dozoretz said. Last September, a major corporation (which requested anonymity) asked to fulfill this wish. The information was faxed from the headquarters to all their dealerships "and then it just went from there."

From the dealerships it obviously spread. In Winchester, copies of the fax were passed among Rotary Club members, while selectmen received a copy in their weekly packet.

The foundation takes wishes in the order they come in, except in cases where there is some urgency, Dozoretz said.

Since growing, the foundation depends on volunteers and donations from around the country. All donated money goes to wishes, Dozoretz said. (Their office space is donated.)

If you are interested call 1-800-323-WISH (9474), either to refer children, get volunteer information, or send contributions.

Reflections of summers past

By DAN CHANE
Special to the Star

Reaching age 50 during lethargic high summer — when the hammock and a lemonade or two become absolutely utilitarian — brings to mind summers past when all town playgrounds were alive with active sports and crafts programs. Both Leonards Pool and Wedge Pond had popular swimming programs — and just before Labor Day the town held its annual swim meet alternating the site each year.

The observer got more than his share of belly-whoppers at Leonards but was rewarded more than once by a turn around the pool in the rowboat manned by a sympathetic lifeguard.

Each bath house had its attendant refreshment stand — and nothing could beat a cold Orange Squirt and a five-cent bag of Boyd's Potato Chips after a strenuous swim.

For diversion, the reeds ringing portions of Leonards Pool harbored frogs' eggs in long gelatinous strings which, when taken home hatched into delightful polly-wogs right on Ma's sideboard.

Mothers and young children had the coolness of large gazebo-like kiddie sandboxes with high roofs which shaded the immediate area — and kept the sand relatively dry in bad weather.

How much we seem to have lost. The extensive town beach programs are a thing of the past now — and they died so slowly we hardly remember the rich summer experiences the town used to provide its youth!

One hot July — in 1949 — we youngsters came in partners with the town in an exciting archaeological dig as Forest Street was opened up from Highland Avenue to Washington Street in order to remove the trolley car tracks. Nick Rosa was foreman of the Highway Department then. We skipped along the piles of rusty iron rails stacked on Maple Road as a welder cut them up for scrap.

Winchester realized $270 from the sale of 1,000 feet of car track in 1949. The big old high-wheeled 1932 Buffalo-Pitts Roller owned by Winchester was last used resurfacing Forest Street that year and was ultimately retired for a new Buffalo-Springfield Tandem Roller.

July also brings to mind the Fourth of July programs put on each year by the Legion. No, we didn't have fireworks — but we townie kids appreciated the pleasure the Legion gave us — rides, blueberry pie eating contests, relay races, etc.

There were lazy hikes to Bear Hill Tower; fishing at Long or Winter Pond; sundaes from McCormacks; cub scouts with Bill Morton's mother Emily, our enthusiastic den mother; trips for ice cream at Buttrick's in Arlington on hot summer nights; and we had weekly movies at E.M. Loew's Winchester Theater.

If memory serves, Mary Jane Grace spent endless Saturdays in the ticket booth attempting to sort out adults from "children" — and Al Thorne manned the doors.

August brought the annual Feast of The Assumption Carnival, at the end of Nelson Street and along Shore Road, with a massive display of fireworks staged in a swampy area of Black Ball Pond.

Finally there was the yearly train trip to Boston to get school clothes at Kennedy's and — if we behaved — a sundae at Bailey's after all the prodding and fitting.

Then it was over. Thank you Winchester — benevolent second mother — we never could have come this far without you!

Farewell to foreign daughters

By TERRY MAROTTA

Almost seven years ago now, I had a third and final baby in the midst of my working life.

I wasn't old for it; at least I didn't feel old. But I did feel as though I'd sung all the Bert and Ernie songs on demand that I was destined to sing; done all the foodshopping I cared to do with two small kids clinging like barnacles to the side of the shopping cart and a newborn no more able to sit up than a nightcrawler slumped in the place where you're meant to stash your pocketbook.

So when this child approached four months, we welcomed into our lives an au pair from Austria. The term means "on a par" and is meant to suggest the balance whereby a young person does babysitting and light housekeeping; and in return gets room, board, spending money and plenty of free time to take courses, travel, and generally take a good deep drink of American culture.

There are many organizations dedicated to matching these young persons with prospective families. Whichever one you use, the young people are almost by definition remarkable: brave adventurers willing to leave everything they've known and live with strangers for a year, like mail-order brides in a sense, who don't actually lay eyes on their new family 'til the plane lands.

We have made this trip to the airport on six afternoons in the last six years and the complementary bookend trip 12 months later when the eyes of both parties are reddened with farewell. Here is a face, I always think that first day, strange to us now but soon familiar, and ultimately as dear and irreplaceable as any face at the family table.

And they did grow dear, every one of them, as that baby turned to an almost-first-grader and the barnacles became young ladies.

But it all ends Sunday when we bring Sonja, our sixth and last au pair, to board the big plane back to Austria. Looking back, it's been quite the adventure.

One girl, our first au pair, was ironic: as she and I leaned over that baby, seated like an infant king in his feeding-table throne she remarked, "And two slaves fed him."

One was compassionate. This one was studious; a great conversationalist. That one baked desserts you would die for. This one spoke rapid fractured English, laughing right along with us at her mistakes. "I go to see the Red Sox," she'd say. "I tell you, I cry out when they hit those home strikes!"

They made their way in our world: learned to buy food and service the car, to ask directions and talk their way into clubs. "Listen Maester. I have international driver's license. You want Massachusetts drivers' license. What means that? Only Massachusetts people can drink in this bar? Let me see your chief."

Not that they weren't ever problems: one locked herself outside the house while the baby slept inside. One cooked a roast on self clean.

And my car took a beating: had four new rear-view mirrors in as many years, lost an eye, dislocated a shoulder and took a trip or two the wrong way around the rotary. ("What do you use this van for, deliveries of some kind?" the auto body man asked me last month.)

But our lives have been the richer for these young women. Each gave us a year of their lives. Without them, we never would have passed European Capitals in seventh grade; or survived the kitchen remodeling, when we did dishes for six months in the john; or had a house to come home to, when we all left Sonja for a week in zero degree weather this past winter and the heat failed and the pipes froze and burst and sent a flood-plain of water over the new oak floors.

For them there was Harvard Square and Disney World; hot dogs and rap music and the breezy informalities of American slang. For us there was companionship; a bouncy presence on the third floor; trails of killer perfume in the hallways on Friday nights.

So goodbye to you all, then, our lovely international daughters, who mothered our children so well and truly, though scarce out of childhood yourselves.

You taught us much: that we could dare love dearly one we must soon lose; that we could start again and love some other one; that wherever one sinks one's heart-roots, that place can be Home.

This week in history

30 year: 1960

Aug. 12 was the last day that week to register to vote at the September primary. On that day, the Town Clerk's office would remain open all day to permit every eligible voter to register and establish political affiliation.

Winchester resident John A. Volpe, republican nominee for governor, was pictured in The Winchester Star with then-Mayor Lawrence W. Lloyd of Melrose and William Speers, Jr. of Winchester, two of his prominent supporters in his quest for the governorship.

A 29-year-old Everett man and an unknown accomplice were foiled in their attempt to steal a Winchester automobile that week by two quick-thinking and courageous Winchester youths on Wildwood Street. Richard Scott and Paul Sullivan, both 19 at the time, spotted the two men in the front seat of Scott's aunt's vehicle.

A grand opening was held that week for a new muffler shop to open at 1014 Main St. in Winchester.

Renton's Market on Church Street offered a package of Oreos for 43 cents, Sunshine Hi Ho crackers for 35 cents and Oscar Mayer bacon at 65 cents a pound.

1970: 20 years

Housing the overflow enrollment at Winchester Senior High School would be made possible by construction of three portable classrooms. The rooms would be connected to the main building by a covered walkway. The primary use of the rooms would be to give science classes more space. The buildings would be leased by the town until the new high school, then under construction, was ready for occupancy.

The CONCERN Committee announced the new "hotline" phone was scheduled to be in operation by mid-August. The project was an undertaking of that committee, based upon similar services instituted in other Metropolitan Boston towns.

Earlier submission of town departmental budgets was urged by members of the Board of Selectmen at their meeting that week. Such action would enable the board to set "effective town-wide priorities," Selectman Paul F. Amico had said.

RECYCLING NEWS

Question: Where does all the compost from the Winchester Recycling Facility go?

Answer: That's a very good question. An interesting fact is that yard waste such as grass clippings and leaves comprises nearly 18 percent of the waste stream for the average community in Massachusetts. It is a little extra effort to haul it over to the compost pile, but it's a little like putting money in the bank.

The Town takes care of yard waste by creating a huge compost pile, like the ones in some of our backyards. The compost is tested at the University of Massachusetts/Waltham and they make a recommendation as to how much lime to add to sweeten the soil created. This spring the compost pile was turned over. Remember the steam coming from the deepest part of the pile? That's biological action as the yard waste decomposes and turns to a rich black soil.

As you drive into the compost area, you'll see the fresh grass clippings and leaves on your right. To the left you'll see the decomposed compost which is about two years

LETTERS

Thoughts on

Vinson Owen

To the Editor:

I am a Winchester parent who has followed the Vinson Owen closing situation carefully, and the July 12 letter from Mr. William Galatis of the Vinson Owen Coalition has compelled me to add my opinions to this long and painful debate. If I were to read his letter not knowing what has happened in this town this year, I would get the impression that all is now resolved and we are on the road to healing and recovery. I feel that he has entirely misrepresented the current situation.

Mr. Galatis says in his letter, "When Town Meeting cast its vote in favor of our amendment to the education budget, Town Meeting sent a clear, concise message of what Winchester represents... This vote endorsed the long term need for five elementary schools." They did? The agreement signed by Steve Powers, chairperson of the Board of Selectmen and Donna Brandt-Landry, School Committee chairperson, in addition to several key Town Meeting members, apparently set the stage for this vote, an agreement to deal with the quality of education.

One part of this agreement reads, "Without additional funding, the school department would be unable to meet its goal for educational quality unless it makes additional reductions in the school budget, including the closing of an elementary school; without sufficient assurance of these additional monies early on in the 1990-91 school year, the School Committee should begin contingency planning."

Does this sound like long-term endorsement for five elementary schools? I did not hear of a plan for additional funding that would accompany this agreement, so where will we be next year? Mr. Galatis points out that there will be only two split classes in the system in September and goes on, "As you can see, the town has made a wise investment and the long term benefits of this decision will be apparent year after year."

The only thing I see "year after year" is a growing deficit! Mr. Galatis fails to mention that we will have fewer aides and a reduced budget for books and supplies and even more important this agreement rests on reducing free cash by $175,000, at a time when we have serious cutbacks in fire protection and many of our capital projects will go unfunded again this year. And what will the 1991-92 school budget look like?

Will Mr. Powers stand with Ms. Brandt Landry to provide adequate funding for "quality education" in five elementary schools? Will we fund five elementary schools by dismantling some of the excellent programs at the high school? Will the other Board of Selectmen and School Committee members honor the agreement? We'll start to get some of our answers at the first of the joint meetings of both boards to "discuss goals and budgetary matters" on July 16. I urge all parents to monitor these meetings carefully.

In the meantime, I know how I'll be spending part of my summer — reviewing my notes from the Task Force on School Closing. You never know, you might just see "Elementary School Closing" on the School Committee's agenda again next year — I just want to be prepared in case it's my children's school!

Chane hit on 'decline in civility'

TO THE EDITOR:

Dan Chane's July 19 Kernels column was right on a couple of obvious targets. The appearance of the service station at Park and Main is truly a disgrace. Farther up Main Street there are other establishments which bring no credit to the community either. One wonders why the proprietors would risk alienating the very persons upon whom they depend for a livelihood.

Other townspeople deserve no bouquets for their own trash-strewn proclivities and seeming aversion to picking up after the growing number of thoughtless among us. Dan has put his finger on the decline in yet another kind of civility by which a society is measured.

On one point, we think that Dan is dead wrong. Brian Mulroney should issue no more flight plans to his geese with their noxious cargoes which call for ground-level strafing runs on Winchester.

Town Hall, the last round of Locatelli Building store fronts, the Lyceum Building and now the Brown and Stanton Building, the Star Building and the Common. Not only does this work show an admirable respect for Winchester Center, it also enhances the appeal of the center as a business district and the value of the whole area.

There are two points the commission wishes to make to property owners who are considering renovation projects. First, never assume that your structure has been irreparably altered. The state of the art in restoration is astounding and the commission can direct you to the appropriate experts and resource materials. (The Historical Society is also a resource for information on restoration projects.)

The second point is that investment tax credits of 10 or 20 percent may be available for the certified rehabilitation of income-producing historic property. You should apply for a tax credit before commencing the rehabilitation. Again, the commission would be happy to assist interested property owners.

The private property owners and the volunteers who are working on these projects deserve our encouragement. Please let them know that you appreciate their concern for our architectural heritage.

TO THE EDITOR:

A few remarks about the "erroneous" listing for the League of Women Voters in the new Telephone Guide.

Consider the following points:

1. Anyone who types, and computer literacy demands this skill of women and men alike these days, knows that the word "vultures" requires a significantly different set of key strokes than the word "voters." Hence, no typo.

2. Mr. Berquist suggested "some kind of Freudian slip"; and he may be on to something. Someone involved in the process of publishing the guide consciously or unconsciously regards the League in this distorted fashion.

3. Conscious or unconscious, the "error" cannot possibly damage the League. Over the years the League of Women Voters has gained a reputation for being models of good citizenship, encouraging non-partisan examination of political candidates, for example. The League is about as untouchable as motherhood and apple pie.

I am a League member and share the distress of the local leadership, but I suggest only the person or persons who consciously or unconsciously perpetrated the incident should be embarrassed. And, the publisher has a clear responsibility to do more than "extend his deepest regrets."

Beneker supports local artists

By ELLEN KNIGHT
Special to the Star

Beginning the promised series of profiles of artists from Winchester's past is a brief portrait of Gerrit A. Beneker. Although Beneker was not a long-time resident of Winchester, he well deserves to be remembered.

Beneker was born in January, 1882, in Grand Rapids, Michigan, where he graduated high school in 1901. He studied art in Chicago (1891-1903) and in New York (1903-05). He settled in Provincetown where he continued his studies with Charles W. Hawthorne, the leading artist at that time in that area, and later taught painting himself.

Beneker was both a painter and illustrator. His specialty was industrial art. He exhibited at the National Academy of Design in New York, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Carnegie Institute, Corcoran Gallery, and others. He had a one-man show of 40 paintings on circuit for 13 years. He is most noted for his Victory Liberty Loan Poster "We'll Finish the Job."

A visit by Beneker to Winchester was noted in the Star in March 1923, during a time he was in Boston to lecture at the Twentieth Century Club on "Art in Industry." With his family (wife Flora and four children), he lived here, on Calumet Road, during the winters of 1927-28, '28-29, '30-31, and '31-32.

"Of all the suburbs about Boston, why did we prefer Winchester to other places in which to live?" Beneker wrote to the Star in December, 1932.

"Aside from the friendships we made, the comfortable homes we lived in, the good schools which were the privilege for our children to attend, we felt that Winchester is a town where Civic Pride is evident at every turn. There were no 'movies,' no bill-boards to influence the emotions of the young. The streets, the parks, the homes were well cared for. The Community, realizing the necessities of change due to growth was not satisfied with old wine in new bottles nor with new wine in old bottles but built up new churches, new schools, and not the least, a new library. The unemployment situation seemed to be taken care of as well, if not better, than in most communities.

"The powers that be in Winchester realized that education is not something confined to school-rooms; that environment has as much, if not more, to do with motivating life... there is no excuse for anyone living in Winchester to occupy their leisure time in ways not beneficial to their well being."

Beneker delivered a lecture to high school students on "Art and the Working Man." He also lent support to local art when, in May 1932, the Winchester Art Association began.

"The trustees of the library," he continued in the same letter, "had the vision to incorporate in the new building an art gallery, and as a fresh eye coming into your community, I realized that which was needed to back up the art gallery was an Art Association made up of townspeople who are interested in bringing to the town all that is good in the field of art. For it was hardly to be expected that the town would appropriate any money for such purpose ...

"The Art Association was duly born last May with some 50 members who signed their names as willing to pay $2 per year to bring culture in the form of art to Winchester. To give the idea stimulus I brought on my own paintings which were displayed in the Art Gallery last May."

Beneker's exhibit included 36 paintings. Most were scenes from Cape Cod, but there were also a few winter landscapes and a few portraits.

Soon after this exhibit Beneker moved away from Winchester but returned for a visit, "and to my joy I found... that your citizens had brought out your community artists and not only displayed their work, but actually brought them out to meet the people... All this is most encouraging and it is a matter of regret that I and my family are not living in Winchester this winter to keep these fires burning."

He concluded by asking the community to continue to support its artists. "You still have many in your community who are students in various fields of art, painting, poetry, music, drama, and it is up to you to encourage these people that they, too, may soon fill your places in the leadership of your community."

"The era of materialism, of technocracy, of getting and spending has broken and people are searching earnestly for those expressions of the spirit of man."

Two years later, in October, 1934, Beneker died in Provincetown. The Art Association has outlived him by over half a century and, as he hoped it would, helps keep art a part of our environment.

O'Brien awarded Watson fellowship

Jeanne E. O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. O'Brien of Winchester and a May graduate of Holy Cross College in Worcester, has been awarded a Thomas J. Watson Fellowship for study and travel abroad.

A biology/premed major whose father is a 1949 Holy Cross graduate, O'Brien will study childbirth practices as they relate to the use of nurse-midwives in three different settings: England, Malta and Mexico.

O'Brien was among 76 graduating seniors from 50 small colleges and universities to receive Watson Fellowships, from 194 finalists nominated by their colleges. She is a 1985 graduate of Winchester High School. She will leave at the end of August for England, where she plans to stay four or five months. She will stay in Malta for three to four months and spend the remainder of her year in Mexico.

O'Brien wants to look at the interaction of childbirth with culture. "In every society childbirth is very different," she noted, "depending on the cultural attributes of the society, such as religion. It is not just a biological event."

O'Brien said that since different societies have developed unique perceptions of childbirth, she wanted to visit different locations.

"England is very interesting because it has a strong tradition of nurse-midwives," she said. "The nurse-midwives there receive much more respect than they do here. It has only been since 1976 that nurse-midwives have been able to practice in Massachusetts, so it's really a new thing here."

In Malta O'Brien will visit a childbirth clinic that was started by a friend of a doctor with whom she will work in England.

"He put me in touch with the doctor who runs the clinic in Malta. That will be an interesting place, because it's a small island, and some people come down from Italy to use the clinic. It's an innovative clinic, in terms of the doctor allowing women to decide the kind of childbirth that they want to have, within the bounds of medical safety."

At her final destination, the Yucatan area of southern Mexico, O'Brien plans to do field work with Mayan Indians.

"Their childbirth practices are very woman-centered," O'Brien noted, "similar to what used to happen here in the colonial days. The woman who is in labor has a small group of female friends or relatives, and her husband is also there. They stay with her throughout her labor, and give her support."

Jeanne O'Brien

"The Mayans also have interesting rituals that are associated with childbirth. There is kind of a mystic sense to it. So it brings in all those elements of the culture that we have kind of shoved away."

O'Brien plans to attend medical school after her Watson Fellowship is completed. She is unsure of her ultimate specialty, but doesn't think that obstetrics will be it.

"I really enjoy working with my hands, so I may go into surgery."

That interest is being tested this summer, as O'Brien is involved in a special, personalized medical study program at Hartford (Connecticut) Hospital, where she is working with a surgeon in the hospital's surgical research department investigating late failure in kidney transplants.

old, also known as "black gold" to gardeners. Straight ahead you'll see the wood chip pile, some parts of which are about eight years old, a good mulch if you like. Both wood chips and compost are available for your use. So when you drive in to do a little compost banking, feel free to make a withdrawal.

That's why that big pile of compost seems to just disappear. Not only does the composting process take up less volume, but the Town uses it at the cemetery and in other places where cover is desired over an earth fill. Last year some of the black gold was sifted over a shaker screen to remove the little rocks and nuts and wood fragments that always seem to get into compost.

This excellent soil amendment rich in nutrients was made available to the public. Needless to say, before too long it was gone. So keep your eyes open, plans are in the works to try this again.

You can help to minimize the amount of waste which would have to be trucked up to the North Andover refuse-to-energy incinerator by separating your yard waste and placing it in the Town compost area. You can even request that your lawn service company take the grass clippings there.

Please remember to exclude all brush and other contaminants from the yard waste; barrels are provided for you to dispose of plastic bags which cannot be reused. With your help, we'll continue to have black gold in them compost hills.

LIBRARY LINES

Wings and things

The Library's Wings and Things summer reading program for children will present "My Imagination Has Wings," a musical program by Boston-area children's performer Robert Sylvain, on Tuesday, July 31 at 11 a.m.

Sylvain, a singer and guitarist, plays original and traditional folk songs and tells stories. This program is recommended for children aged 3 to 6.

On Thursday, Aug. 2 at 3:30 p.m. artist Joel Rubin will present a paper airplane-making workshop. Children will learn to make a variety of paper airplanes and acquire a knowledge of the basic principles of flight. This workshop is recommended for children aged 8 and up.

Free tickets for both of these events can be picked up in the Children's Room. To pick up tickets, children must be registered in the Wings and Things summer reading program.

Story time

The next Evening Family Story Time for ages 2 to 6 and their families will be held on Monday, Aug. 6 at 6:30 p.m. in the Children's Room. No registration is required. For information on children's activities at the Library, please call the Children's Room at 721-7140.

Calendar

For those who plan community activities or those who attend them, the Winchester Public Library's Community Calendar is a valuable resource. The Community Calendar, located in the library foyer, lists coming events. Residents can check the calendar in order to find out what is going on locally. Program planners can check the calendar in order to find out what other events have been scheduled and select the best time for their activity.

Events can be added to the Community Calendar if you ask at the Reference Desk. The Community Services Librarian can provide information about this service at 721-7171.

HEALTH

CPR can save children's lives

The national statistics on infant and childhood injuries are staggering. According to USA Today, choking and suffocating are the leading accidental killers of babies under the age of one. Appropriate Pediatric and Infant CPR techniques differ from those used on adults — knowing how to correctly use CPR can mean the difference between life and death.

Winchester Hospital's Health Education Department offers Pediatric and Infant CPR classes to the community. Upon successful completion of the program, participants receive a one-year certificate from the American Heart Association. The Pediatric and Infant CPR Course is offered in two part classes on Aug. 13, 6 to 10 p.m. and Aug. 15, 6 to 10 p.m. at Winchester Hospital. In addition, two part classes will be held on Aug. 23, 6 to 10 p.m. and Aug. 30, 6 to 10 p.m. at the Woburn YMCA. The course fee: $40 per person.

Persons interested in taking the course, but not for certification may attend the first classes on Aug. 13 or Aug. 23 for a fee of $20 per person and $30 per couple.

To register call Winchester Hospital's Education Department at 756-2220.

Summer fitness program available

Do you need to lose weight? Begin your summer fitness program by evaluating the actual amount of fat, lean muscle and body fluid in your body. Attend the Body Composition Analysis program offered by The Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Registered Dietitians use the BIA-C bio-impedance measurement to assess body composition. In less than five minutes a two-page individualized report is printed. The Dietitian then interprets the findings with each client on an individual basis. This program is also helpful for athletes, who need to preserve muscle. The computerized body composition data can be a useful part of their fitness routine.

"Maintaining muscle mass while losing body fat is the goal of all fitness and weight loss programs," said Julie Daley, R.D. "Monitoring body composition helps assure that lost weight is fat and not muscle." Those who frequently lose weight only to regain it, can lower their metabolism. This pattern actually makes it more difficult to lose weight and can result in loss of lean muscle.

Nutrition Services at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington will schedule appointments for Aug. 9 from 9 a.m. to noon, and Aug. 23 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. For more information and to pre-register, call (508) 657-3910, extension 623. The Regional Health Center is a division of Winchester Hospital.

Learn to save a life

Knowing Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation, or CPR, can mean the difference between life and death. Winchester Hospital's Education Department now offers CPR classes to the community. These classes teach participants how to perform CPR and the Heimlich maneuver; a technique used to dislodge foreign material from the breathing passages.

Instructors demonstrate CPR through mannequin practice and a special film presentation. Participants who have successfully completed the course will receive a one-year certificate from the American Heart Association.

This CPR course is offered in two part classes — Aug. 6 from 6 to 10 p.m. and Aug. 8 from 6 to 10 p.m. at Winchester Hospital. The CPR course fee is $40 per participant. In addition, a two part CPR course will be taught Aug. 9 from 6 to 10 p.m. and Aug. 16 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Woburn YMCA.

Businesses and organizations may call the Hospital's Education Department to schedule classes for members or employees. To register call the Education Department at Winchester Hospital at 756-2220.

Five join BC/BS

The Lahey Clinic-Blue Cross and Blue Shield Health Maintenance Plan announced recently that five obstetricians affiliated with Winchester Hospital have joined the Plan this spring as participating physicians.

Dr. Donald Druga of Winchester received his undergraduate and medical degrees from Case Western Reserve University. He performed a residency at University Hospitals of Cleveland and a residency and internship at Cleveland Metro General Hospital.

Dr. Gloris E. Korta of Winchester received her undergraduate degree from Canisius College and her medical degree from S.U.N.Y. Upstate Medical Center. She performed her residency and internship at Hartford Hospital in Connecticut.

Dr. Marc F. Freedman of Burlington received his undergraduate degree from Muhlenberg College and his medical degree from the University of South Florida. He performed his residency and internship at S.U.N.Y. at Buffalo Affiliated Hospitals.

Dr. Francis A. Lombardo of Burlington received his undergraduate degree from Brown University and his medical degree from Tufts University Medical School. He performed residencies at Providence Lying-In Hospital, Lawrence Memorial Hospital and St. Francis Hospital. Dr. Lombardo completed his internship at Rhode Island Hospital.

Dr. Peter Rotolo of Arlington received his undergraduate degree from St. John's University and his medical degree from New Jersey College of Medicine. He performed his residency at the University of Connecticut Affiliated Hospitals and completed his internship at New Britain General Hospital.

Coombs is entrant for helping hand award

Peter J. Segerstrom, president and chief operating officer, Cathleen M. Landry, vice president and controller, of Winchester Savings Bank, and Chris Connelly, Winchester Editor of the Daily Times, were on the panel of judges to select Winchester Savings Bank's entrant in the Massachusetts Bankers Association Helping Hand Award.

Janet L. Coombs, IRA/KEOGH Supervisor, was selected as Winchester Savings Bank's nominee for the state-wide competition. Segerstrom presented Coombs with a $25 gift certificate to the Ristorante Lucia.

Coombs has been heavily involved with the Girl Scouts of the United States for 30 years. For the past 10 years she has been on the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council, which serves over 30,000 girls in 65 cities and towns in the metropolitan Boston area. She is also very active in several capacities at Belmont United Methodist Church.

The Massachusetts Bankers Association is running the Helping Hand Award to reward bank employees who have extended themselves as good neighbors or citizens. There are no chances or tickets to buy or sell. Service to their neighbor or community is the only requirement. The winner will receive a trip for two to the Massachusetts Bankers Association's Annual Convention, Sept. 16 to 19 at the Boca Raton Hotel and Club, Boca Raton, Fla.

Entries were reviewed by the panel of judges, and Coombs' name was forwarded to the Massachusetts Bankers Association for final evaluation. Some of the factors the judges looked at were: nature of the service provided, amount of time committed, variety of services, and number of persons affected.

Blackham speaks at Boston College

Ann Blackham, President, Ann Blackham & Co., Inc., Realtors, Winchester's Leading Realtor Firm, recently spoke at a Professional Development Program at Boston College, McGuinn Hall.

Dr. Alice Jeghelian, Director of Professional Development, in describing the program of the college, pointed out the series enlisting experts in many varied professions to bring their experience and expertise in timely subject presentation to the college. The programs are sponsored on campus for the convenience of the university community.

Blackham, a well-known and respected lecturer on real estate matters, spoke on buying a condominium, describing the history, development, process and finances of the condominium home today. "To buy or not to buy?" is a question on many people's minds these days and taking all things into consideration, it's a good time to go for "the condominium experience," Blackham said.

Blackham forms auction division

"Auctions are gaining popularity in residential markets, and to respond to the full service requirements of our continually expanding base of sellers and buyers, we are happy to announce that our president, Ann Blackham, is now a licensed auctioneer," the latest Company Real Estate Newsletter said.

"Auctioneering as a marketing technique is gaining popularity in residential markets as well as the more well known commercial real estate," she said, "and we must be prepared to assist our sellers in every way and this is another vehicle by which we can do this."

"An auction is one of the best ways to determine true market value "for traditionally the auction has attracted the buyer looking for a bargain, but now people attending auctions are looking for properties that are properly priced," she added.

Not every property is a candidate for auction, however, Blackham cautions "it's an excellent marketing technique for one-of-a-kind properties, commercial real estate or unusual or hard-to-sell properties," she explained.

"We are happy to provide this additional service to sellers if they so desire," she added.

Ann Blackham is president of Ann Blackham & Company, Inc. of 11 Thompson Street, Winchester, founded by her in 1968.

Real Estate &amp; You... WE'RE MATCHMAKERS

Sometimes a good Realtor will remind you of that favorite aunt many of us have who is always trying to fix up single nieces or nephews with the single sons and daughters of her friends, especially when one of her blind dates results in a great marriage. We match prospective buyers with the sellers who have the perfect home for their family, and when it really works, we feel terrific. Even more important, our buyers and sellers feel terrific.

More often than not, sellers have a strong attachment to their home and the memories it holds. It's important for them to know that the new buyers will love it like they do. While any sale can become complicated, and we can face difficulties on the road to settlement, if we've started out on a positive note, problems seem to work themselves out more easily. This is one important reason why we work hard to maintain a good rapport between the parties to our sales transactions.

Complaints of these overbearing tactics are many, but because the group is from out-of-state, their actions are governed through interstate commerce law, which is under federal regulations, said Pierce.

But on the local level, police say they are between a rock and a hard place when it comes to restricting the actions of these salespeople.

"[The Winchester Police Department] is in the process of researching ways to more strictly guard [the actions of these groups]," said Pierce. But by constitutional right, these salespeople can not be deprived of earning their livelihood, added Pierce, and the process of regulation is a legal snafu.

Also, the groups are well aware of their legal rights, said Pierce.

Winchester Police currently ask the sales groups to register at the station before soliciting subscriptions. These groups are also encouraged to stop selling before dusk.

While police can not prevent the solicitors from covering the area, they encourage residents to call the station if salespeople become verbally abusive or if neighbors see suspicious activity.

"[The police department] will not tolerate our citizens being harassed," said Pierce.

Richmond has all the answers

By ELLEN FANNING

Star Assistant Editor

The answer is: he's a 1980 Winchester High School graduate who has appeared on the game show "Jeopardy!" The question: Who is Jeff Richmond?

Richmond, now a resident of West Hollywood, Calif., first appeared on the brain-teasing program in December, 1988 and walked away with $58,000. Almost a year later, he returned to play on the Tournament of Champions, but was defeated in what his mother Ann called, "an exciting finish."

And now this summer, Richmond will be appearing on "Super Jeopardy!" a summer installment in the CBS line-up.

But although the shows have already been taped, CBS has sworn the contestants to secrecy regarding the outcome of the competition.

His family, who lives on Longfellow Road, have resigned themselves to finding out if they have a rich relative on August 25 when Jeff's segment airs.

"He won't tell me if he's won or not," says Ann Richmond with a smile. "He just says it's another very exciting finish."

The format of the "Super Jeopardy!" program is slightly different than the regular season show. Four contestants instead of the usual three battle each week to be eligible for the final tournament. The only contestant who wins money is the one who hits the jackpot on the last show for the ultimate grand prize of $250,000.

But could a son who's won a quarter of a million dollars keep the news from his own mom?

"He's very good at keeping secrets, so I really don't know if he's won," says Ann.

But with or without the grand prize money, "Jeopardy!" has already been very good to Jeff. His mother says the $58,000 windfall came at a time when Jeff had resigned his job to enroll in law school. He's now in between his second and third years, "and Jeopardy is paying for it!" she adds.

His Winchester family has already been inundated with phone calls from Jeff's high school classmates and friends from the area, who have recognized him from the first two shows. Just imagine if he wins the grand prize.

"Super Jeopardy!" airs Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. on Channel 6 in the Boston area.

Outlook is proposed

was scrapped due to lack of funding, Rogers said.

Pending successful outcome of the public hearing, and approval by the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC), construction would begin early this fall, she said.

The commission's review of the project is needed because the proposed site falls within 100 feet of Mill

Pond, therefore involving the State Wetlands Protection Act as well as town bylaws regarding wetlands protection, according to Vreeland.

The commission, while not officially convened, offered suggestions regarding issues that may be questioned during the public hearing. Vreeland said run-off may be a concern.

Rogers said drainage would be facilitated by underground pipes containing "weepholes."

"The runoff would be absorbed in the earth and by the plants," she said.

Vreeland said the commission's principal concern would involve potential pollution from runoff as well as erosion. "We wouldn't want any erosion gullies to form," she said.

before the idea was seriously weighed.

MacDonald said he would be accessible to both students and teachers in order to develop a relationship conducive to communication. He added that he planned to visit classrooms on a regular basis, not only for teacher evaluation, but to become a familiar face to students.

"You can't be a good principal and be barred from the classroom," he said.

A screening committee reviewed the applications of 61 candidates, ending up with a list of 10 semi-finalists. The School Committee interviewed the final three: MacDonald, Revere teacher Jeanne Papa, and State Department of Education candidate Timothy Wilson.

School Committee members said they had been impressed by all three candidates. Lombardi said that his choice would have been Papa. O'Connell indicated that his first choice of the candidates would also have been Papa, who he said was "candid" and "natural" in her responses.

out air conditioning in the house should rest more and seek out areas of the home that are cooler for occasional relief, like the cellar.

Koppel also suggests spending the afternoon at the mall, senior center, library or movie — any public area that is air conditioned.

Also, the elderly should wear lighter clothing and drink lots of fluids. Koppel adds that during heat waves, people should stay away from caffeinated drinks like coffee and tea, as well as alcohol, which act to drain the body of fluids. Koppel adds that only athletes should grab a Gatorade to quench a thirst. That product has a high salt content, which replenishes needed minerals after a healthy work-out, but adds too much salt for others, she says. A normal diet will provide all the salt intake needed in the hot weather, adds Koppel.

It's also better to eat light and take cool showers or baths to reduce core body temperature, says Koppel. She also suggests the elderly establish a buddy system with friends and relatives, to ensure proper care during a heat wave.

A few warning signs of potential heat stroke are fatigue, hot and dry skin, nausea and diarrhea. While heat stroke can be fatal, heat exhaustion, which is characterized by sweating, is not, says Koppel.

People should also be wary of cooling down their body temperature too quickly, which can cause a shock to the system, Koppel says.

things you can do with the association." Campisi has purchased much of his office furniture through the network, and obtained needed services, such as carpet cleaning and landscaping without having to pay in cash.

The oldest form of business exchange, bartering simply means trading. And while computer terminals, fax machines and telephones are now standard tools of the trade, the basic principals haven't changed.

According to UBE President Ken Meharg, the role of his firm is to act as a business broker, or "middle-man." UBE puts businesses in touch with other businesses that have goods or services they need. Rather than having to pay for those needs, the businesses can work them off with their own goods or services.

The benefit of bartering is two-fold, Meharg noted. On the one hand, a business can obtain services for itself without paying in cash. It can also obtain new business from clients with which it otherwise has not had contact.

Campisi, a member for the past five years, said the network has broadened its available services in the past year. Although he often found certain services unavailable the first couple of years, Campisi said the network has worked at finding new members to fill in those gaps.

Many business owners are able to cover personal expenses through the network as well. Meharg said one Wakefield video store owner was able to pay for most of his wedding expenses recently by bartering for items such as a limousine, tuxedo rentals, wedding cake, and others.

Bartering successfully really requires a network, Meharg said, because each business may not need the services of the business to which they are supplying goods and services.

As a result, the network operates very much like a credit card system, and even uses vouchers and cards. When a business makes a "purchase" or "sale", it is recorded against its account. The account is maintained by UBE, which charges a five percent fee for each transaction.

This system lets a business spend its trade dollars anywhere in the network, Meharg said. New members are brought in when a service is needed that is not represented by current members.

As Meharg noted, it is easy to convince a business to join when approaching them with a customer. Joining involves a one-time fee, he added.

Meharg said members can trade for "everything from national car rentals to hotels to hairdresses and veterinarians."

The network also publishes a newsletter which features a classified section. Clients can advertise personal items there, and other members can purchase them with the trade dollars they have accumulated in their accounts.

While Meharg said the network is growing at a steady rate, he is hoping to see more large corporations join its ranks. He said the network also hopes to draw more members from specific communities, including Winchester.

Campisi concluded the biggest gain of joining the network has been "bringing in new business for us."

Campisi said Meharg and his staff have been a good find for his business, but stressed that the success of bartering is to have an idea of the value of the service or product for which a person is trading.

"If not, you could potentially get hurt," he added.

Shield System, Bulldogs take diamond wins

Men's softball season winds down as teams look to play-offs

By ANDREW LYNCH
Special to The Star

Theatre Mobile closed out its regular season with a 4-2 loss to Shield System in men's softball A league action at Ginn Field Monday night.

With Mike Dever calling the game from behind the plate, Shield System got off to an early lead as Danny Alto hit the first of his two RBI's. John Lentz, pitching for Theatre Mobile, seemed to have a difficult time getting into a steady rhythm during the seven-inning game.

Paul Christenson, Shield System's coach and Monday night pitcher, had a fairly good outing however, holding Mobile scoreless for the majority of the game.

Besides Alto's pair, RBI's were also handed in for Christenson's Shield System team by Mike Robinson and Andrew Gangi.

Lentz made up for any pitching problems he may have had with a two run shot to right field. Unfortunately for Craig West's Mobile team, the homerun came too late to save the game.

Shield System is one of the older team's in the Winchester league, having been involved for about 12 years.

Bulldogs vs. Lucia's

In the 7:30 game, Mike Fitzsimons' self-sponsored Bulldogs took on the newly-sponsored Lucia's Restaurant team.

The Bulldogs were able to take a 1-0 lead at the end of the first inning with the help of a triple by Michal Moran.

The real scoring for the Bulldogs came during the third inning with a series of hits. After Moran's ground-rule double during the inning, Keith Ford followed with one of his own, bringing in two runs. Fitzsimmons, who also pitched for the Bulldogs, then brought in Ford with a stand-up double of his own.

With the score 4-0, David Errico's Lucia's team was forced to make a move or fall too far behind. A two-run RBI by Chuck Allard was all that was needed to motivate Lucia's to be back in the game. A shot into the trees surrounding Ginn Field was made by Paul Stevenson, immediately after Allard's hit, for a ground-rule double, but Stevenson was stranded as the Bulldogs made a defensive charge.

The charge by the Bulldogs lasted into their offense as well with hits belted out by Bob Dame, for an RBI, Tom Sullivan, for a two-run RBI. The second run plated was made with a close call, with the Bulldogs given the run, raising the score to 7-2.

Pitcher/Captain Mike Fitzsimmons made for the final score of the game with his second standupdouble, bringing in another run and also tallying the final score at 9-2.

Although the season is coming to a close, each team has one or two games left. Errico's team recently picked up a new sponsor, Ristorante Lucia's in Winchester.

The restaurant's owner, Filippo Frattaroli, is seen as "a great guy" by Errico. "He is very involved with, and very generous to, the town of Winchester," said Errico. "He is helping the team a lot." One of the new facets of Frattaroli's involvement is new uniforms for the team which made their debut last Monday.

10-year-olds begin season

The Carroll Insurance 10-year-old All Star Team began the first round of the Bay State Tournament summer season on Saturday, July 14. Their first game was in Medford against South Medford.

Winchester was leading 3-1 before Medford put together a big inning in the fourth to take Winchester out of the game. Mike Notaromaso led Winchester with two hard hits and Mike Roscillo came off the bench to make a fine offensive contribution.

Arlington came to Winchester on Monday, July 16. Arlington jumped out to a quick lead and never let up, defeating Winchester 10-3. Bright spots for Winchester included Danny White who was 2 for 2, and Brian Russo who showed promise as a future pitcher.

On Wednesday, July 18, Winchester traveled to Arlington and seemed to have finally put it all together. Winchester scored early and held off Arlington with the excellent pitching of Mark "Majic" Sullivan.

Winchester led 7-3 going in to the bottom of the last inning. Arlington began to rally and finally ended the game with a bases loaded triple to win 8-7. A heartbreaker for Winchester, but a well played game, nonetheless.

The offensive leaders for Winchester were Kevin Shanahan and Mark Sullivan who tripled to the fence in center and then scored. Mike Notar played a fine defensive game in Center Field.

On Saturday, July 21 Winchester hosted South Medford. Winchester came to play this day. The team started off in the first inning with a lead-off single by Chris DeSimone who was promptly doubled home by Jeff Davis. The tone was set for the day as Winchester took its first victory of the Bay State summer season, 8-5.

This total team effort was led by Jeff Davis with a double, a home run, and three RBI. Key hits were also provided by Brian D'Entremont, Joe Lang, and Chris DeSimone. Mike Notar showed excellent base running skills by stealing home plate. Brad Murphy pitched five innings for the victory and Mark Sullivan earned his second save by pitching a scoreless last inning. Once again, a fine contribution was made off the bench by Ryan Buchanan, Mike Roscillo, and Brian D'Entremont.

The 10-year-olds will continue to play three games each week. With continued improvement they hope to be seeded in a trophy tournament.

Family scramble is 'hot stuff'

The Annual Family Scramble Tennis Tournament was held at the Winchester Swim & Tennis Club the weekend of July 21 and 22. This year's event drew 28 family teams, who braved the high humidity and heat.

However, tournament directors Richie Rowe and Nancy Hihltian provided plenty of refreshments to keep the players fresh and at peak performance throughout, while running a very smooth tournament.

The draw was made up of the Wimbledon Division and the less experienced, but highly competitive Longwood Division. The format consisted of each team playing a series of six 30-minute Round Robin matches over the course of two days. A point was awarded for each game won during the Round Robin segment of the tournament. At this junction, the four top-point-getters in each division moved into the semifinal rounds where a 12-game pro-set was played to determine the finalists for each flight.

In the Longwood Division, the brother-sister team of Mike and Laura Aleo, the former a high school track team member, literally ran away with the early round point totals. They were followed closely however, by the brother-sister team of Rob and Kristen Collins. The father-son team of Mike and Chris Martino narrowly edged out the rookie father-son team of Larry (the Hammer) Murray and his son Micheal to gain a berth in the semifinals. The father-daughter team of Dave and Patti Williams also battled their way into the semi's in the hot and humid weather.

The spectators were treated to two semifinals that featured long rallies, excellent gets and fine sportsmanship. When the dust settled the Aleo's were victorious by the score of 12-9 in one semifinal and the Collins' prevailed over the Williams' by a score of 12-8 in the other semi. In an unprecedented move, approved by the tennis committee, the patriarch of the Collins' family, Bob, went from spectator to participant, as his son Rob was unable to continue in the tournament due to another commitment. The Aleo's in a closely contested match went on to a straight set 7-5, 7-6 victory. After the match the elder Collins stated, "Given proper notice, I would have been mentally prepared but that's life on the circuit."

In the Wimbledon Division the top five teams were within eight points of each other with the mother-daughter team of Maureen and Meaghan Rowe falling just one point shy of making the semifinal round.

The top point getter team of Alex and Allison Popp (father-daughter), played the mother-son team of Joan and Darin Byrne in one semifinal. In a match that saw the momentum shift time and again, the Byrne's with a relentless met attack won a thriller 13-11.

The other semifinal consisted of the sister-brother team of Shauna and Kevin Colozzi and the father-son team of Paul and Brian Bernazzani. That his semifinal was the mirror image to the other semi was testament to the high caliber of play that the WS&TC has become accustomed. The Colozzi's, in a come from behind victory, overcame a three game deficit and went on to win in a match that could have gone either way. The final score was 12-33, Colozzi's.

The Wimbledon final featured some great net exchanges, gets and sound doubles play but the strength and experience of the Byrne's proved to be too much for the young Colozzi duo. The Byrne's won 6-3, 6-3.

Sportsmanship awards were given to Allison and Kristen Bernazzani, Kendra Totman and Daniel Schoenherr, all of whom exemplified the spirit of this family tournament in their demeanor and their approach to the sport of tennis.

All the junior participants received colorful sunglasses courtesy of the 99's Restaurant. The finalists received well deserved gift certificates to the 99's as well.

Once again the Winchester Swim and Tennis Club, under the leadership of tennis director Judi Nicholson and her able tennis committee has provided the members with yet another weekend of tennis, camaraderie and family fun.

Tourney has 'extra serves and returns'

By ALEX POPP
Special to The Star

Over the beautiful week-end of July 6, 7 and 8 unseeded Lance James swept through the first N.E.L.T.A. Sanctioned Tennis tour-namment held in Winchester defeating Rob Miller 6-2, 6-2 in the finals. (See EXTRA, page 2B)

All-star season is well underway

The Carroll Insurance 10-year-old Bambino All Star team is well into their inaugural season. They began their season on Saturday, July 7 in the Bambino District Tournament.

In their first game against a tough Dracut team they played excellent team defense, but were never able to get going offensively. A spark was provided late in the game by Danny White, Brad Murphy, and Ryan Buchanan, but it wasn't quite enough for this game, as Winchester lost 8-1.

Winchester came back strong on Sunday, July 8 to defeat Bedford 7-2. Brad "No Relation to Rob" Murphy pitched three innings of shut out ball for the win. Mark Sullivan picked up the save. Several players contributed offensively with Joe "Clubber" Lang, Kevin Shanahan, and Jeff Davis all getting two hits.

Hopes for a district title fell by the wayside on Tuesday, July 10 when they lost for the second time. They lost a well played game to Marblehead.

Winchester's offensive leader for the tournament was Jeff Davis who batted .429 and reached base six out of nine times. The defensive stand-out was Brian Russo who played errorless ball in the field while making several sparkling catches. Also, contributing to a fine all around defensive effort were Chris DeSimone at third base and Mark Shannon at first base.

Extra serves and returns in tourney

In doubles action Larry Pratt of Woods Hole and Kurt Frisrup of Mansfield, ranked number 5 in N.E.L.T.A. 35 and over doubles, ousted Rob Miller and Mike Blauer 6-3, 3-6, 7-6.

But it was a tournament with many "extra serves and returns" as well:

- Many thanks to Gordon Nicholson and Jack Cori who worked hard to bring a Sanctioned New England Lawn Tennis Association Tournament to Winchester.

- Congratulations to local player Lance James who represented the town with spectacular results. (Although James who looks 25 probably had to show an I.D. to get into the over 35 event!)

- The draw in singles had 25 players; 14 from Winchester and the doubles had eight local teams and two out of town draws. (Not bad for a first time event)

- The guys who play the N.E.L.T.A. 35 and over junior veterans circuit love the baseline game and most only came to the net on change-overs or to pick up a stray ball.

- Hats off to Neil Hurley and Lance James for cooking all those gourmet hot dogs and hamburgers at the tournament cook-out Saturday night. (Hurley, contrary to rumor did not intentionally feed one of the players who beat him hours earlier, a hamburger of suspicious origin.)

- Automatic entrance passes to next year's Boston marathon to Joe Culhane, Chris Scanlon, John Gerrein, Phil Cooney, Alex Popp and Vandy French for participating in matches that exceeded two hours. (Culhane and Scanlon's both lasted close to three hours)

- A round of applause to Bill Wolfe for wearing the best beach volleyball outfit seen on the Packer Courts and best overhead intended to not only win the point but to get the opponent thinking about playing elsewhere.

- Finally to all the wives and girlfriends who watched their husbands or boyfriends play all weekend remember this — love means nothing to a tennis player!

RECREATION

Artists at work

Meghan Halchak, Kate Teele and Liz Murdock decorate the sidewalk in front of Town Hall during Camp Sachem, a Recreation Department summer program.

Mill pond concerts

On Aug. 1, Bill Carlson will entertain residents with his Irish repertoire outdoors at the Mill Pond. Admission is free but donations during the concert will be accepted to help defray expenses.

In case of inclement weather, the concert will be held in the Town Hall Auditorium. Bring a chair, a blanket, a picnic and a friend. Take-out picnic suppers are available at Pari's (721-1554). Call in advance to order.

Recreation

Department to move to Lynch school

After more than seven years at the McCall Jr. High School, the Recreation Department will have a new home in the administrative office side of the Lynch School beginning Aug. 22.

The arrival of sixth graders at McCall this fall requires the existing recreation office space to be returned to its original classroom use. The Youth Center will remain in its present location at McCall and will continue its previous programs.

Camp programs

The Recreation day camps are located at the McCall Junior High and at the Lincoln School. Session IV runs from Aug. 6-17, 1990. There will be no swimming available during this session. The following programs have some openings available:

Camp Sunshine: 9:15 to 11:45 a.m. or 12:30 to 3 p.m. This is a special program for those age 3 by Jan 1, 1990, through age 5. The camp features arts, crafts, music, gymnastics, nature study, and sports activities. An out-of-camp field trip is scheduled. The fee is $79.

Camp Superfriends: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday, for students entering grades 1 and 2.

Camp Sachem: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday, for students entering grades 3 to 6.

Campers will enjoy sports, arts, crafts, gymnastics, music, drama, nature. An out-of-camp field trip is scheduled. Campers bring their own lunch and drink. The fee is $79.

Adventure Connection: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday, for students entering 6-8.

This camp includes activities such as possibly being in an audience at a Boston TV show, taking a cruise to Provincetown for the day, and a trip to Crane's Beach for the annual Sand sculpture contest. The fee is $199.

OBITUARIES

Joseph Gray

Joseph C. Gray of Newburyport died July 17 at Anna Jaques Hospital after a bout with cancer. He was 83.

Mr. Gray was the husband of the late Margaret B. (Bradley) Gray, who died in 1985.

Mr. Gray was born in Harve de Gras, Md., the son of the late Joseph M.M. and Elizabeth (McCurdy) Gray. He was educated in the Maryland school system and received his degree in architecture from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston.

Mr. Gray was a self-employed architect and worked as a planner for the town of Winchester in his later years. He also served on the Planning Board in Winchester.

Mr. Gray was a past master of William Parkman Masonic Lodge AF and AM of Winchester.

He leaves his two sons, Peter B. and Gardner Gray of Deerfield, N.H. and his daughter Louise G. Gahm of Ipswich. He is also survived by a sister Elizabeth G. Fowler of New Rochelle, N.Y.; 14 grandchildren; three great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

Mr. Gray was also the father of the late M.M. Gray, Jr. of Grand Rapids, Mich.

By request of the family there will be no calling hours and services will be private.

Cremation will be at Lynwood Crematorium in Haverhill. Memorial donations may be made to the Merrimac Valley Hospice, 1 Union Street, Andover, Mass. 01810.

Arrangements were made by E.B. Jutas and Sons Funeral Home in Amesbury.

Arthur Hertig

Arthur Tremain Hertig, whose pioneering studies of the growth of the human embryo were landmark contributions to reproductive biology and fertility, died July 20, after a brief illness. He was 86.

Dr. Hertig was a retired professor of pathology at Harvard Medical School. For nearly 20 years (1952-1970) he held the Shattuck Professorship in Pathology, one of the oldest and most distinguished professorships at the medical school, and had been chairman of the department of pathology from 1952-1968.

Dr. Hertig was a resident of Winchester for many years, and recently moved to a retirement community in Lexington. He died at Falmouth Hospital of cardiac arrest several days after surgery.

Born in Minneapolis on May 12, 1904, he was an assistant in entomology at the University of Minnesota while still a high school senior. He later entered the university but took off from 1925-1927 to do field studies in Peking, China on the parasitic disease leishmaniasis. On this expedition, where he worked with his brother Marshall, he developed a technique for feeding and infecting sand flies that is still used by researchers today. Chinese 'warlords' were battling over territorial control while he was there, and he was also pressed into service aiding the 4000 wounded brought into the Peking Union Medical Hospital.

He graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1930 but because of his continuing interest in insects, while still a student he was sent to Woods Hole, Martha's Vineyard and the Elizabeth Islands on a project to help control wood ticks. After medical school graduation he trained in pathology, particularly obstetrical and gynecological pathology.

He joined the Harvard Medical School faculty directly after graduation, rose to full professor by 1948, and as he reached retirement age, transferred his research efforts to the Harvard-affiliated New England Regional Primate Research Center, where he remained active until 1987.

One of his most widely known projects was carried out with Harvard's Dr. John Rock, between 1938 and 1952. Dr. Hertig studied very early embryos retrieved from women who had undergone total hysterectomies, and he described the human embryo from the first division of the ovum until placental circulation takes over. These studies contributed to the later development by others of the contraceptive pill and in vitro fertilization.

He also did valuable studies on the causes of gynecological cancers, placental moles, ovarian tumors, habitual (spontaneous) and traumatic abortion. In his retirement years he was working on an atlas of reproduction and infertility in animal species. He published nearly 200 scientific articles and two books on reproductive pathology.

This work, and other studies he conducted, earned him many awards from medical and professional societies. One that gave him particular pleasure in recent years was the Gold Headed Cane Award of the American Association of Pathologists, given to him in 1979, as "a physician who represents the highest ideals in medicine and pathology."

Gold headed cane awards date from 1827, in medical circles. They are given to physicians of great distinction, and have come to symbolize the transfer of knowledge from one generation to another. Dr. Hertig was an outstanding teacher at Harvard, and remained active and accessible to younger researchers until just a few years before his death.

In 1932 he married Linda Woodworth of Arlington who died in 1988. In March of this year he married Frances Thomas, of Cataumet and Lexington, who survives him. He was the father of Andrew Hertig and the late Helen Hertig Craig, and grandfather of Stephanie, Christopher and Jennifer Hertig, David and Linda Craig, and the late Amy Craig. A memorial service is planned for early fall.

Peter Keliher

Dr. Peter N. Keliher of Collegeville, Pa., formerly of Winchester, died of a sudden heart attack July 10 while vacationing in Freeport, Bahamas, with his wife. He was 49.

Dr. Keliher was a professor of analytical chemistry at Villanova University, Villanova, Pa.

Born in Providence, R.I., he was the son of the late John and Lorraine (St. Pierre) Keliher. He was formerly of Kenilworth Road in Winchester, and attended grammar school at St. Mary's. He graduated from Boston College High School.

Dr. Keliher earned his bachelor's degree from St. Michael's College in Winooski, Vt., in 1962. He went on to receive his master's degree in chemistry as well as his doctorate from the University of London in London, England.

In 1969 Dr. Keliher became an assistant chemistry professor at Villanova University. In 1974, he was promoted to associate professor, and in 1979, was named full professor.

A major contributor to the area of atomic absorption spectroscopy, Professor Keliher's involvement in science extended well beyond the Villanova campus. A member of the American Chemistry Society, he served as both treasurer and alternate counselor of the Division of Analytical Chemistry.

He was a member of the Federation of Analytical Chemistry and Spectroscopy Societies, of which he served on the governing board, as convention exhibit director, assistant program chairman of its Eastern Analytical Symposium.

Dr. Keliher was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Society of Applied Spectroscopy, the Spectroscopy Society of Canada and the Royal Society of Chemistry, London, England.

In addition to serving as editor of the American Microchemical Society's journal, the most prestigious publication in the field of chemistry, Dr. Keliher also gave a series of annual lectures at Jilin University, Changchun, People's Republic of China.

Dr. Keliher also loved to travel. In addition to China, his journeys had taken him to Japan, Mexico and the Caribbean Islands. The warm, tropical waters of the Caribbean provided the ideal setting for Dr. and Mrs. Keliher to pursue their love for scuba diving.

Dr. Keliher had just surfaced after completing a dive for his advanced scuba diving certificate when he suffered a massive heart attack July 10.

Dr. Keliher leaves his wife, Bonnie M. Keliher; one son, Mark D.; one daughter, Claire M.; two sisters, Vivian, wife of Terrence Thompson, of San Francisco, Calif.; and Joanna Hannon St. Pierre, of Boston, Mass.

A memorial service for Dr. Keliher was said by the president of Villanova July 14 in Villanova University Chapel on the Villanova University campus.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Cousteau Society, 930 W. 21st St., Norfolk, Va., 23517.

Irving Kennedy Jr.

Irving J. Kennedy Jr. of Chelsea died July 22 at Massachusetts General Hospital. He was 77.

Born in Boston, Mr. Kennedy was the son of the late Louise (MacNeil) and Irving J. Kennedy Sr. He was an electrician, and was a veteran of the Korean war where he served as a chief electrician.

Mr. Kennedy leaves two sons, Irving J. Kennedy of Stoneham and Don Kennedy of Tampa, Fla.; a grandson, Sean M. Kennedy of Boston; a granddaughter, Shannon P. Kennedy of Framingham; three brothers, Reginald P. Kennedy of Reading, Thomas N. Kennedy of Modesto, Calif. and Phillip H. Kennedy of Charlestown; and his former wife, Beryl (Smith) Kennedy of Wakefield.

He was also the brother of the late Roy A. Kennedy.

A funeral was held at the Immaculate Conception Church, followed by cremation at Woodlawn Cemetery in Everett. Arrangements were handled by Lane Funeral Services of Winchester.

Donations in his memory may be made to The Miami Project Spinal Cord Research, 1600 N.W. 10th Ave., R-48, Miami, Fla. 33136.

COMING EVENTS

Red Cross has bloodmobile

A Red Cross community bloodmobile will be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Mt. Vernon St., Winchester, MA on Wednesday, Aug. 1 from 3 to 8 p.m.

The blood supply reaches dangerously low levels during the summer months, therefore, we encourage all who are physically able, 18 years of age or older, weighing at least 110 pounds, to register to donate at this special summer community bloodmobile.

For further information, please phone 665-1351.

Class of 1985 at Voke plans reunion

Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational High School class of 1985 is having its reunion at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Cambridge on Sept. 14 at 7 p.m.

For further information, call 324-3350.

Annual fiesta set for Aug. 12

The Society of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary holds its annual Fiesta on Sunday, Aug. 12. This year, the celebration will be held at Leonard Field, Washington Street.

The Fiesta begins at 4 p.m. with the celebration of Mass at 5 p.m. Following Mass, an Italian dinner of pasta e ceci will be served at 6 p.m. and will continue until the food runs out. There will be no charge for dinner.

The event will be conducted subject to weather conditions and ends at dusk. There is no rain date. It is suggested the public bring a car for the Mass.

The Society sponsors the fiesta to raise funds to be used to build a permanent shrine and to maintain the tradition of families and friends gathering on a summer day in fellowship to honor the Blessed Virgin. The tradition dates back to the 1920s.

Class of 1981 to hold reunion

Winchester High School's Class of 1981 will be holding its 10-Year Reunion in 1991. The class reunion committee, chaired by Steve Rothmann, has employed REUNIONS, A Class Organization, Inc. to organize the event. REUNIONS, A Class Organization, Inc. organizes and administers high school and other reunions. It is the nation's largest independent reunion firm, with offices nationwide.

For more information, call 800-397-0010 or write REUNIONS, A Class Organization, Inc., 2155 Stonington Avenue, Suite 108, Hoffman Estates, IL 60195.

SMALL SPACE... BIG RESULTS

Where do local people turn when they need to have work done in their home?... If those people live in Winchester, Arlington, Belmont or Watertown, chances are, they turn to Century Newspapers' Business Directory. It's one of the most effective, complete, reference tools in the area. And people use it. That's why our advertisers use it week after week.

If you're a small businessman who needs advertising exposure, at a cost that's easy to manage, contact Alma or Rosalie at 729-8100 for more information. Small space ... big results ... Century's Business Directory page delivers!

Business Spotlight

Martin Kelley, Lowell, MA

Why not enjoy this summer on your new porch?
Let Martin Kelley custom build your outdoor or enclosed porch before the good weather passes by. The five year old company prides itself on concentrated projects. The team of four workers completes each job while keeping the customer happy. Other services offered include roofing, siding, framing, window installation, gutters and general carpentry. Some unique skills available from Kelley are arch way doors,

Redesigning means to success

Economic woes open the door to fresh approaches to home services

By Maureen McLellan

Times are tough for many in the service industry, but people like one Westwood interior designer are discovering a difficult situation can spark innovation and lead to new ways of meeting customer needs.

Gail Van Kleeck-Gleason, owner of Dover Interiors of Westwood, and 10 other independent area designers are forsaking competitive venom and lonely work days for a joint venture aimed at drumming up more business for each of them.

The women have joined Dover Interiors Design Collaborative in hopes of pooling resources and talents and saving clients money.

Van Kleeck-Gleason, who has been a designer for 18 years, said that while she started the collaborative less than a month ago in response to adverse economic conditions, it shows so much promise she and the other designers believe it signals a more effective way of doing business permanently.

"I think what our economy is teaching us is how to help each other," Van Kleeck-Gleason said. "It (the collaborative) started out of fear, but when times are good we're going to be stronger together."

Traditionally, service professionals who specialize in home or car improvements weather slight economic downturns, as consumers put off substantial new purchases in favor of sprucing up what they already have.

But a number of business owners around the area — from auto mechanics to home remodeling experts — say Bay State residents' confidence in the economy is so low that a large percentage are eschewing all but the most necessary investments.

Hardy LeGwin, a home remodeling designer in Newton, said that earlier in Home services, Page 3

COMPANY FILE:

Midas Muffler — DBA Creative Management

Company headquarters: 60 Arsenal St., Watertown.

Time at that site: The Waltham Midas Shop, which opened in 1978, was the fourth of a still-expanding chain of family-owned Midas franchises that began in Watertown in 1960. Fifteen stores now comprise this chain, with the most recent addition being at Shaw's Plaza, Route 1A Norwood.

The Waltham store has three service bays, a recently remodeled waiting room and stocks more than $80,000 worth of exhaust, brake and suspension products. Other stores in the chain vary from a five-bay store to our largest, a 10-bay facility at Coes Square in Worcester.

Number of employees: The Waltham Midas store employs three certified technicians, a counter person and Manager Jennifer Michaels. Creative Management employs more than 80 certified service technicians, 25 shop management personnel and 20 administrative and field support people.

Products and/or services: Midas began as an exhaust repair specialist (Midas is currently ranked number 1 in both exhaust and brake repair in the U.S.), but began selling shocks and struts in 1965. In 1976, the company expanded into brake repair. Within the past two years, Midas has launched a full-fledged suspension repair service featuring state-of-the-art computerized wheel alignment and wheel balance, soil and leaf springs, ball joints, tie-rod ends, idler arms, rack and pinion and constant velocity joints.

Employee benefits: The company offers employees full medical coverage and a choice between HMO or a master medical plan membership as well as dental and life insurance coverage. The company also has a profit-sharing plan and sponsors numerous social events. These include a golf tournament, fishing trips and annual Christmas parties. The company makes available extensive technical training through in-house facilities in Watertown and Worcester, as well as Midas' regional facilities in Taunton and Hopkinton. An extensive and updated video library and preparation for Automotive Service Excellence certification tests are made available to all employees.

How to apply for a job: To apply for work at Midas, call (617) 923-2374 and ask for Mr. James.

Company's community and/or social projects: Midas supports the Jimmy Fund, Toys for Tots, the Special Olympics, local events and many police and fire organizations.

How to relax when the job makes you tense

By Paula Ancona

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE

There are huge knots in your shoulders. You're clenching your teeth as you rush through 10 or 12 tasks at once. And there's no time to go get a massage.

You need some quick relaxation tips that are easy to use at work. Here you go:

■ Concentrate on breathing. If you're tense your breathing may be shallow, hurried and erratic. Loosen up by taking a big breath. Then take easy, relaxed, deep breaths. Concentrate on your breath going in and out; you might even say "in" and "out" to yourself as you breathe.

■ Stop and focus on your body. Often we ignore obvious physical signals. The discomfort you feel may be your body asking you to change positions or to get up and stretch for a moment.

■ Now stop to focus on your mind. Is something nagging you but you don't want to think about it because you're too busy? Acknowledge the feeling and deal with it. Or clear it from your head by making a mental appointment to think about it later.

■ If you're in the middle of a meeting and need to cut the tension within yourself, create a break. Call a time out to get something from your office or your briefcase. This lets you stop the action, change positions, look around, get a different perspective or just catch your breath.

■ Learn to see problems as opportunities. Instead of getting upset about a situation, think about how you might learn or benefit from it.

■ Evaluate whether you or your supervisors need to adjust your job to reduce stress. Do you have too much or not enough responsibility? Do you need more feedback? Are your goals unrealistic? Is the physical environment part of the problem?

■ Try a do-it-yourself massage. For upper back and neck, reach your left hand across your chest to your right shoulder and firmly knead as many muscles as you can reach. Repeat on the left side. For headaches, cover your eyes with your hands for about 30 seconds. Then slide your palms to the sides of your head and gently make circles over both temples for about 30 seconds. Or use your finger tips to rotate your scalp in as many directions as you can. Use strong pressure. Move your fingers around to cover all of your head.

■ Go for the unconventional and try natural aromatherapy. Some salons carry essential oils with scents that are supposed to help you relax. Place a drop on your fingertips and massage your temples or the indentation between the base of your skull and the top of the back of your neck.

Ingredients to look for: frankincense, ylang ylang, sandalwood, rose, bergamot. Candles with these scents could help, too.

■ Have a cup of soothing chamomile herb tea. Find it in the health food sections of many supermarkets.

■ Try progressive relaxation. Start with your feet. Tense them, then release. Now tense and relax your calves. Move up your body, finishing with your face.

(Paula Ancona is the staff-development director at The Albuquerque Tribune in New Mexico.)

Redesigning means to success

Home services, From 1

the year, he was seeing a trend toward people seeking home improvements. But that demand has since slipped, which he attributed largely to the state Legislature's recent debate over and passage of a tax package.

He said he is sustaining his business by taking on smaller projects he would have turned away a year ago.

"We are in the second stage of the ripple effect," he said. "With the tax situation, people are shrinking their spending even more. They're really drawing back on any kind of major expense."

"I think what our economy is teaching us is how to help each other. It (the collaborative) started out of fear, but when times are good we're going to be stronger together."

Gail Van Kleeck-Gleason,
DESIGNER

George Magyar, a certified kitchen and bath designer in Norwood, said several people in his field have gone out of business this year and noted he is doing his best to hang on and has a few projects lined up for this month.

Van Kleeck-Gleason said interior decorating growth is closely tied to home sales because most new business for designers comes from people buying new homes.

She and other business owners also said people who are buying services are shopping around more for the best prices and taking longer to sign contracts.

But if it had not been for the dearth of business, Van Kleeck-Gleason said, the interior design cooperative never would have been formed.

"As designers, we say we help each other, but we tend to be competitive," she said.

Van Kleeck-Gleason further pointed out that since most designers work for themselves — often at home — they tend to be isolated and often do not even talk to each other at shows.

So the idea of a collaborative was suspect to some of the designers Van Kleeck-Gleason interviewed and she believes the group is the first of its kind in the United States.

Members include: Marcia Connors (Canton), Dianne Creelman (Boston), Roxy Gray (Canton), Rene Heffernan (Dover), Karen Krowne (Wayland), Lynda Onthank (South Natick), Margie Pace McNally (West Bridgewater), Diana Rigoli (Waltham), Peggy Totten-Sexton (Weston) and Ava Winner (Franklin).

LeGwin also took a bold step to boost his remodeling business by writing a book for consumers published last March. Titled "The Complete Guide to the Home Remodeling & Construction Process," the book is aimed at making home improvement projects seem less daunting and remodeling professionals, who are often viewed with suspicion, more approachable. He also wrote a notebook to help people manage their own projects.

"I'm trying to get this information out to a lot of people. Dealing with my own clients I could really see people didn't understand what the process would consist of," he said. "You can save a lot of money by learning how to avoid mistakes."

Both LeGwin and Van Kleeck-

Gleason said they hope their extra efforts now will pay off in new business down the road.

Although the design collaborative does not yet have any sealed deals, Van Kleeck-Gleason said the members are "planting seeds." She said her biggest fear was that women would come to the first meeting and never come back, but she said interest and enthusiasm at twice-a-week meetings has been high.

"We are in the second stage of the ripple effect. With the tax situation, people are shrinking their spending even more. They're really drawing back on any kind of major expense."

Hardy LeGwin
HOME REMODELING DESIGNER

The group is divided into territories, and each designer is responsible for referring jobs outside her area to the appropriate collaborative member. The collaborative itself, administered by Van Kleeck-Gleason, also markets the membership with mailings and promotions.

A designer who makes a referral gets a percentage of the job, as does the collaborative, but the customer does not pay more.

Designers who win contracts as a result of the collaborative order all their materials through the group, giving individual designers the purchasing power of a larger company.

But Van Kleeck-Gleason said the benefits of the group go beyond referrals. She said members plan to share designing ideas, help each other with problems and teach seminars to the group in their areas of expertise. In addition, if a designer has excess inventory from a job, she can sell it at a reduced price to a collaborative member who needs it, allowing the client to save as well.

"The commonality was, yes, they would like to be busier, but they were also tired of being alone," said Van Kleeck-Gleason.

Job Hunting STEP BY STEP

Looking for a job can be an exercise in frustration or an exciting challenge, depending on how it's approached. Planning your approach step by step can lead to a successful outcome.

1. The Resume

An employer will get many responses to an advertisement. He or she often will review resumes first to decide which applicants are to be interviewed.

A resume is an introduction. It should be concise (one page if possible) and easy to read. Avoid irrelevant information such as age, height, weight, family details and detailed military information (date, highest rank, and brief description of responsibilities are enough.)

There are two primary ways to prepare a resume. The form used may be based on the information to be presented.

Chronological ▶ Resume

This resume is prepared with experience listed in sequence starting with the current or last position and working back. This is especially good if the work background is consistent and shows good progression from early jobs to the present.

◀ Functional Resume

When there is a variety of unrelated job experiences or when different skill areas need to be emphasized, the best resume format to use is the functional resume. In this format, the information is presented in a way that makes it easy for the employer to pick out your area of expertise.

2. Personal Assessment

What can I do? What do I want to do? What do I do best?

These are questions that need to be answered. You can't sell yourself until you know your product well! The period between jobs is a good time to analyze strengths, weaknesses, likes and dislikes.

Here is a simple project:

List all the work duties you have had in the past. The list probably will be varied and long. That's fine. Add anything that comes to mind, no matter how small.

Now, highlight all the things on the list you really enjoy doing. Next, check all the things you were successful doing. Ideally, there will be some overlapping.

Now, list all the skills required to do the highlighted tasks.

DUTIES

order parts
deliver parts
arrange for courtesy pickups
repair transmissions
greet customers
operate forklift
✓ do inventory
✓ operate computer to monitor parts flow
do monthly sales totals
sell additional services
✓ repair warehouse equipment
pack and ship orders
✓ do monthly forecast
keep customer records
prepare sales target lists
supervise loaders

SKILLS

use catalog/fill out forms
driving/map reading
scheduling/communication
mechanical communication
driving
math
math/typing
math
communications/sales
mechanics
detail/manual dexterity
math
organizational organizational
communication/leadership

What this shows you is that your favorite duties are the ones that require math skills. Your strongest areas were math and mechanics.

This understanding will make it easier to explain your strengths to an interviewer. The jobs that are geared toward using these skills would be the most suitable and satisfying.

3. Research

Knowing about the company with which you are interviewing will set you apart from most of the others being interviewed. Spending time to find out about the services, products, market area, primary concerns, focus and financial history will make you a concerned and knowledgeable applicant.

Once an interview is scheduled, find out as much as you can. There are some tools in the library that make getting information easier than you may imagine. Check:

- Standard and Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives
- The Thomas Register of American Manufacturing and Thomas Register File
- Moody's (lists more than 20,000 corporations)
- The Million Dollar Directory and The Career Guide by Dun and Bradstreet offer information on companies in alphabetical order, by career field and geographical area. On microfiche is another listing of local business. Check with your local librarian if you need help. There are many other books, magazines and even videos and a computer available for information gathering.

Another good source is the chamber of commerce. Chambers will have not only a list of all chamber members, with product and service information, but a list of manufacturers.

With the information you've accumulated, you can ask questions relevant to that company. During your interview, mention what you've learned. The interviewer will be impressed with your interest. Do your homework. It will pay off.
